Alva Christensen and Mary L. de Give of Atlanta, Ga., riding in a flivver and armed only with one pistol and unlimited courage, entered the vast territories of soviet Russia last summer and—sometimes with and usually without permission of the governing officials—toured for fourteen weeks. Crossing the Russian border near Warsaw they drove by difficult stages to Moscow and later into Turkestan and Georgia, from which tourists are barred by soviet order.

Before they were finally seized by the G P U (secret police) in Tashkent and expelled from the country, these American girls had a variety of experiences that would be impossible for tourists following the planned itineraries of the soviet tourist bureau. They entered Russia pro-communists; they came out glad that they were still Americans.

The absorbing story of their travels will be told in ten articles written exclusively by Miss Christensen for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The first one takes them across the barbed wire entanglements of the Polish-Russian border and through the customs.

By ALVA CHRISTENSEN.

Five great transgressions we committed in soviet Russia. We crashed the gates of forbidden Turkestan; we sold our flivver; we refused to spend American dollars, known in Russia as valuta; we took in a pistol, possession of which is sometimes a capital crime, and we actually smuggled soviet money into the soviet realm.

Miraculous rubles! Official regulations make them worth 51 cents each, but they are sold both within and without the country at sixty for a dollar.

There were many other laws we broke, but they were only minor violations. We had no idea of the number of regulations even a law abiding person must break to get along in the soviet union when we entered it on a rainy Aug. 8.

Get Permit to Take In Car.

Permission to take our car in had been obtained in Paris. We first went to the beautifully appointed suite of Intourist (the soviet tourist agency) The manager, a flashy looking individual with a combed mustache, dirty finger nails, and a dark complexion, had informed us three days before that all automobile travel into the soviet union had been barred within the week, but that he would wire to Moscow and ask that an exception be made in our case.

The reply was that no exception could be made. We knew that Intourist had not sent a telegram and had no intention of sending one. They thought we would buy one of their "see only what we want you to see" tours. We didn't. Instead we walked over to the soviet legation in Paris and received a letter that let us take "Beckie," the flivver, with us.

Eager to See Utopia.

Hurriedly we drove across France. We should have liked immensely to loiter in French and German towns, but we were very keen to get to Russia. At the time we were decidedly pro-communist. We needed only to be shown the marvels and splendors of that country to be thoroughly converted. So we skimmed through and at last reached Warsaw.

We reveled in its elegance. We enjoyed the last comforts and luxuries we were to have for more than three months. Two nights before our departure we strolled into the Europejski café with a friend to have a cocktail. At one table sat five soviet officials of the Warsaw embassy, partaking of expensive liqueurs and chocolate cakes covered with whipped cream.

That did not coincide with stories we had heard about communist self-sacrifice for the sake of the masses. It seemed incomprehensible that the soviets would allow members of the government to indulge in such imperialist extravagance while millions of peasants and workers were being forced to starve. We thought about that little incident many times when we saw swollen bellied Russian children on all fours eating grass like so many sheep!

A Polish soldier was assigned to take us to the boundary. As we neared the line we tried to memorize a few Russian phrases which we believed would be helpful. We only tried. Then we bade our soldier good-by, crossed no man's land and into Russia. It was

50 to Get Places in Her Court.

Just by sending their photographs to THE TRIBUNE a golden opportunity will be created for charming girls the world over to share in cash awards totaling $20,000 and to participate officially in the gorgeous ceremonies which will open the World's Fair on June 1.

The purpose of this project is to add a special touch of beauty to those ceremonies. It does not involve the payment of an entrance fee. It is not a subscription scheme. Its provisions, which have been carefully thought out, contain no tricks or jokers. It requires no task beyond the pleasant one of the mailing to THE TRIBUNE by a girl, or her friends, of the photograph which she, or they, think does her justice. That photograph safely may be only an amateur's snapshot, for sometimes such a picture is more piquant than a more elaborate one. The important point is to get it to THE TRIBUNE between now and April 15—naturally, for the sake of the judges, the sooner the better.

On so simple a bit of routine does this opportunity to acquire international fame rest.

All Is Made Easy.

For the convenience of those sending the photographs a "transmittal coupon" containing blanks for the writing in of data which should appear on the back of the photographs is printed elsewhere in THE TRIBUNE today and will continue to appear daily and Sunday. But it is not necessary to use the coupon. The information it demands may be written on a sheet of paper and attached to the photograph. Thus not a penny of expense is required of anybody. No solicitation of subscriptions, no writing of articles, lurk behind the plainly stated conditions which, for the protection of all concerned, govern what may justly be described as an international quest for charm that has been launched by THE TRIBUNE on behalf of Chicago's impending exposition.

President Dawes Enthusiastic.

This letter from Rufus Dawes to sixteen leading American newspapers gives the brisk outline of what will be the most talked about and most picturesque event of the opening days of the World's Fair:

> We are all much interested in the plan of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and affiliated newspapers to conduct an international competition to find the fifty-one most charming young women to act as "Queen" and "Court of Honor" to take part in the dedication ceremonies at the opening of A Century of Progress International exposition in Chicago on June 1, 1933.
> After careful consideration of your plans we approved of them as being dignified and interesting, both in the selection of the young women and in their appearance at the dedication ceremonies. We think that it will be an outstanding affair and a great success and that it will interest people all over the world. Of course we shall not sponsor any similar activity but shall lend our efforts to concentrate public interest upon your plan.
>
> Yours very truly,
> A CENTURY OF PROGRESS,
> RUFUS C. DAWES, President.

Qualities for a Queen.

Who, then, in university, public school, office, store, factory, or in the home, is most admired and most respected for her charm, her character, her demeanor, her lovely personality? Who is preeminently so?

She shall be queen of the resplendent pageants that will open the Century of Progress.

They will be her court of honor and will take part with her in the ceremonies dedicating the exposition on the first day of the month of roses.

During the opening days the fifty-one will be the guests, under distinguished chaperonage, of Chicago, of the exposition, and of the sixteen newspapers which are to assemble this great tableau of charm and character.

Prizes to the Winners.

In recognition of her preeminence the sum of $5,000 will be presented to the queen. To the two girls who, in the opinion of the judges, deserve special mention as representatives of feminine attractiveness the sums of $3,000 and $2,000 will be presented.

Another $10,000, in the sum of $100

STATE HIGHWAY POLICEMAN KILLS BROTHER-IN-LAW

Henry Jaros, 22 years old, of 1449 West 14th place, a city employé, was shot and killed early this morning by his brother-in-law, Herman Jacobs, 26 years old, of 1540 West 14th place, a state highway policeman.

The shooting occurred at 14th place and Ashland avenue, not far from their homes. Police arrested Jacobs. They said he evidently had been drinking. He was in uniform.

Police investigation indicated that Jacobs was standing at the intersection of 14th place and Ashland avenue brandishing a revolver. Jaros walked up to him to persuade him to put away the gun and go home. A struggle followed, police said, and a shot was fired, killing Jaros.

Nicholas Kernick, 22 years old, 1509 Washburne avenue, and James Skeba, 23, 1415 19th place, told police that Jacobs fired the shot which killed Jaros. Jacobs denied the shooting. He said he was talking with Kernick and Skeba when he heard a shot and saw his brother-in-law fall. Police said one bullet had been fired from Jacobs' gun.

Contractor and His Wife Robbed of Cash and Gems

Jack Nadolna, 1219 Lunt avenue, head of a plumbing contracting firm, and his wife, Jessie, were held up by two men as they drove up to their home early this morning. They were compelled to drive into an alley, where he was robbed of $27, and she gave up a diamond ring valued at $1,000, and a $45 wedding ring.

3,000 French Peasants Riot; Seize Prefect

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Jan. 14.—In the first serious peasant uprising since the collapse of prices, 3,000 farmers of Beauce [including Loir et Cher and Eure et Loir], France's great wheat province, today broke into the prefecture of Chartres, the celebrated cathedral town. The rebellious peasants held Prefect Jouve a prisoner for an hour and forced him to telephone to the minister of the interior their demands for immediate governmental action to raise prices.

A gendarme attempting to defend the prefect was injured as the angry mob burst through the locked gate to the prefecture.

Call on Peasants to Strike.

The trouble started during an indignation meeting in the Chartres market place during which fiery orations calling upon the farmers to strike were diffused through loudspeakers.

The crowd approved resolutions demanding that the government pass immediate measures to increase prices of wheat, oats, rye and milk, to place an embargo on foreign farm products and to reduce farm rents. The threatened strikes by government employés over proposed salary reductions and taxpayers were cited as examples by the speakers.

The incensed peasants appointed delegates to carry the resolutions to the prefect, but when the delegates started for the prefecture, the entire mob decided to follow in person to see that the prefect acted immediately. The lone gendarme on guard closed and locked the gate after the delegates entered, but the crowd stormed it, broke through and trampled down the gendarme.

Break Up Furniture.

Inside the prefecture, the mob climbed on tables and chairs shouting their indignation and destroying furniture. The prefect, who acts as a governor for the district, was cornered in his office and forced to telephone Minister of the Interior Camille Chautemps, who promised to appeal to Premier Joseph Paul-Boncour.

The tumult continued during the telephone call so that the prefect was scarcely able to make himself heard, but the minister could hear the rioting.

Finally an organizer of the Agrarian party by the name of Huet gained the floor and made a final speech advocating the peasants' rights to more money. He then calmed the crowd and persuaded them to depart.

WED A WEEK, HE SAYS GOOD-BY TO BRIDE, ENDS LIFE

Bidding farewell to Valentine, his bride of a week, Louis Marche, 25 years old, stepped into another room of their home at 915 Wilson avenue last night and shot himself to death.

After a preliminary investigation the police said that a letter from Paris probably furnished the motive. This was suggested in a brief farewell note left to the bride by Marche. It said: "Valentine Dear; My father said no.—Frenchy."

Marche was the son of a wealthy furniture manufacturer in France, according to Detectives Ellsworth Suckow and Michael Fay of the Town Hall station. He received a remittance of $150 from his father every month. Recently he wrote home asking for $400. He wanted the money, he wrote, so that he might take Valentine home with him when she became his wife.

He did not receive an answer immediately, and a week ago last night he married Valentine in her home at 5135 Glenwood avenue. Then the letter came from Paris. On Friday night Marche and his bride visited a near north side night club. They remained there until 5 o'clock yesterday morning. Last evening Marche kissed Valentine good-by, stepped beyond her sight and killed himself.

BLAZING VESSEL RADIOS FOR AID OF AIRPLANES

DUTCH HARBOR, Alaska, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A message relayed by the steamer Golden Tide, intercepted by the government radio station here tonight, said the soviet steamer Sakhalin had been badly damaged by fire off Japan, and added the phrase, "Half the crew left."

In addition, the relayed message said, the Sakhalin had been asking soviet authorities for assistance from airplanes at Vladivostok to aid in removing the passengers.

Keeps Fugitive from Leaving Greek Haven

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

ATHENS, Jan. 14.—Samuel Insull's passport has been canceled by Lester Maynard, United States consul general here, acting on orders from the state department. This was learned today.

Mr. Maynard addressed a letter on Jan. 7 to the former utilities magnate, who is a fugitive from charges of embezzlement and larceny in Chicago, notifying him that his passport was void and requesting him to appear at the consulate to have the passport formally canceled. The letter did not specify the reason for the cancellation, but declared it would take effect whether or not Insull appeared at the consulate.

It is understood that Insull visited the British consul general to ask about the conditions for his repatriation as a British subject. The British consulate says three years' residence on British soil is necessary.

Other Nations Informed.

Insull's passport was issued to him on Feb. 29, 1932. The United States consulate here has notified all the European consulates in Athens of the cancellation.

As a naturalized citizen Insull risks the loss of his American citizenship if he remains in one country more than two years without returning to the United States. On the other hand, since this penalty is optional with the state department, Insull can be forced to retain his American citizenship while he is surrounded by countries from which his extradition is possible unless he undertakes the three year process of becoming a Greek citizen.

A copy of the recent decision of the Greek Court of Appeals refusing the United States government's request for Insull's extradition, together with depositions made in the case, were received by the ministry of foreign affairs today and will be forwarded to the United States legation Monday. They will be translated before being sent to Washington. The legation has not yet been able to obtain a complete record of the Insull trial, since no stenographic record was made.

A "Prisoner" in Greece.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Officials of the state department admitted tonight that the United States had canceled the passport of Samuel Insull. American consular officers throughout the world have been notified of the action, it was said, and are expected to notify all foreign authorities.

Cancellation of his passport virtually internes Insull in Greece. Without a passport, officials of the state department pointed out, the elderly fugitive cannot venture beyond the Greek border without subjecting himself to arrest as an illegal immigrant. Nearly all other European nations have extradition treaties with the United States it was explained, so that Insull's arrest outside of Greece would insure his detention for extradition to America.

Continue Extradition Fight.

While Insull's passport has been taken up by the United States, officials of the state department pointed out tonight that the physical document itself has never actually been canceled since American consular officers in Greece have thus far been unable to lay hands on the passport.

In the event that Insull should present his passport for entry into another country, officials of the department said, this government would have to rely on the good faith of the immigration authorities of that nation to apprehend him. It was said that the cancellation of his passport has been so widely advertised through the consular officers abroad that virtually every nation is aware of its invalidity.

Officials said that cancellation of the passport did not mean that the state department had given up the fight to secure Insull's extradition to this country. Efforts in that direction will be kept up, it was said.

Budget and Beer Leading Problems.

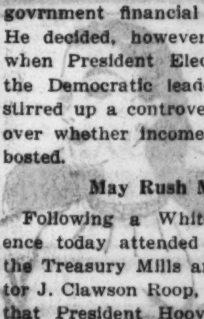
How Congress Helps!

Dispatches from Washington, as inauguration day approaches, are that the new President will step into situations fraught with interest:

1. The Democratic leadership in congress is making no headway toward a balancing of the budget. President Hoover is projecting a sharp message, urging action. Prospects are that it will be a futile appeal.
2. President Elect Roosevelt in Albany is described as contemplating with deep concern the Huey Long antics in the senate and as wondering what he can do after his inauguration to allay the discord stirred by the Long-Wheeler filibuster against his own party's bank bill. The discord is in his own party. Almost dictatorial powers may be needed by Mr. Roosevelt to bring order out of the chaos.
3. There is dismay over the radical runaway in connection with senate clamor to pass the Philippine freedom bill over the Hoover veto.
4. The beer bill, "to be passed before Christmas," is apparently tied up hopelessly.
5. Estimates of the income tax to be paid on 1932 incomes place it at lowest in income tax history in America.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The stage was being set today for a bitter controversy between the Hoover administration and the Democratic leadership in congress over the question of responsibility if the budget for the year starting July 1 is not balanced at this session.



OGDEN MILLS.

President Hoover had planned last week to send a message to congress to put the government financial house in order. He decided, however, to postpone it when President Elect Roosevelt and the Democratic leaders in congress stirred up a controversy of their own over whether income taxes should be bosted.

May Rush Message.

Following a White House conference today attended by Secretary of the Treasury Mills and Budget Director J. Clawson Roop, it became known that President Hoover has gathered data for a message to congress, declaring steps must be taken to balance the budget at once. It is expected the message will go to congress next week, probably Monday. Officials declined to set the date.

The President is to point out the need of balancing the budget if the credit of the treasury is to be kept at a level where its huge refinancing program can be carried out advantageously.

Regardless of what the President does, Secretary Mills will deliver a radio address this coming week. He will say the 1934 budget is far out of balance. He is expected to recommend 800 millions in new taxes and a 500 million cut in government costs.

Democrats Give Views.

As a first answer from senate Democrats Senator Millard E. Tydings of Maryland introduced a resolution ordering all committees handling appropriation bills in the senate to cut them down to the point at which the aggregate appropriations for the fiscal year of 1934 would not exceed approximately 3 billion dollars. By this means, he said, the 1934 budget could be balanced without new taxes. This would represent a 490 million dollar cut below the Hoover basic budget.

"We will have to go ahead and clean up a bad situation which we have inherited from the Hoover administration," Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], ranking minority member of the senate finance committee, asserted today. "We must balance the budget. We will do it through economies if possible. If that method fails we will study new taxes."

House Majority Leader Rainey of Illinois said the administration was trying to avoid blame.

Whether the Republicans will time their attack to stir up a budget row during the two day visit of Mr. Roosevelt next week has not been made known. It seems certain, however, that the Democrats will have to make some sort of a decision at that time.

As the Republicans and Democrats talk of budget balancing for the next fiscal year, the 1938 deficit rolls along toward the billion and a half mark. It now is approximately a billion and a quarter.

Up to date President Hoover's budget balancing program has consisted of recommendations for cuts and new taxes.

As presented to congress, the Hoover budget was approximately 500 millions out of balance. If to this were added the 329 millions in war debt payments that the treasury has little hope of collecting, the projected deficit is 829 millions. The President recommended taking up a part of this slack with slightly less than 200 millions in economies. The Democrats hope to close the gap to the extent of 100 millions in economies, 125 million revenue from the tax provided in the beer bill, and 137 million from a reenacting of the gasoline tax. This would leave a deficit of more than 400 millions if the war debts are not counted as receipts.

Sloan Demands Saving.

Matthew S. Sloan, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States committee on federal expenditures, today submitted figures to its board indicating how 800 millions could be chopped from government costs. The Sloan cuts would go 321 millions deeper into federal expenditures on veterans alone than President Hoover recommended.

It was made clear by Mr. Sloan that to make that actual reduction would require a cut in congressional appropriations of possibly as much as $1,100,000,000. That, he said, would be due primarily to the fact that there are large unexpended balances of appropriations, made in 1933, available for spending in 1934 without further congressional action.

Summarized, the proposed reductions in expenditures presented to the board by Mr. Sloan are as follows:

$250,000,000 for construction and public works, expenditures for which have been on an abnormally high level in recent years. The question should not be viewed from a longer range viewpoint than that which prevailed when the emergency construction program was initiated.

$400,000,000 from veterans' benefits. Allowing generous compensation to dependents of those who fell in battle and to those who suffered from service incurred disabilities, together with their dependents.

$50,000,000—Important non-recurring items. There are various items of this character in the budget, the two important ones being Red Cross distribution of wheat [$40,000,000], and an addition to the marketing fund for the federal farm board [$10,000,000]. This reduction is also included in the executive budget.

$170,000,000—Reductions, not mentioned above, in expenditures of the departments and independent establishments. Existing activities of government have been amplified and new ones added. Some of these compete unduly with private business. Excluding items specifically mentioned above, a reduction of this amount would bring expenditures for departments and independent establishments to substantially the same level as prevailed in 1925.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Jan Kubelik, the violinist, was injured in an automobile accident today. His precious stradivarius was not scratched and there was no harm to his hands, which are insured for $100,000 by several American companies. Holecek, the pianist, who was riding with him, was taken to a hospital suffering from concussion of the brain. Kubelik suffered several broken ribs and contusions about the chest.

HOUSE SPEEDS BANKRUPTCY BILL TO EARLY VOTE

Measure Designed to Ease Debt Burden.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The house of representatives moved rapidly today toward enactment of legislation revising the bankruptcy laws to permit a general readjustment and possible scaling down of corporate and individual indebtedness. The general lines being followed represent the views of both President Hoover and President-Elect Roosevelt.

A bill embracing the general principles of emergency bankruptcy reform recently suggested by President Hoover in a special message to congress will be reported favorably by the house judiciary early next week. House leaders had expected the measure to be brought in tonight, but final action by the committee was delayed by failure to agree on certain technical details regarding railroad provisions of the bill.

Backed by Both Parties.

The plan under consideration by the committee is a combination of bills introduced separately by Representatives Fiorello H. La Guardia [Rad., N. Y.] and Tom D. McKeown [Dem., Okla.], chairman of the house bankruptcy subcommittee. Mr. La Guardia's bill deals only with railroads, while McKeown confined his measure to individuals and corporations.

Combined, the two bills will be presented to the house by the committee, possibly on Monday. Representing not only the views of Mr. Hoover, but likewise embodying principles agreed upon at the recent New York conference between Mr. Roosevelt and his congressional leaders, the measure is assured of enthusiastic support on both sides of the aisle. Likewise it has the approval of Mr. La Guardia, recognized leader of the radical element in the house.

During the day the judiciary committee conferred with officials of the interstate commerce commission and the Reconstruction Finance corporation in connection with the railroad provisions of the measure. Members of the committee said, following the conference, that the railroad provisions of the tentative plan now drawn up meets with the approval of Interstate Commerce Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman and President Charles Miller of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Debtors May Start Court Action.

The bill upon which the committee has virtually decided provides that debtors, corporate or individual, may seek a readjustment of their affairs under jurisdiction of the federal courts without declaring bankruptcy or forfeiting all assets to creditors. The readjustment would be effected by a voluntary agreement on the part of creditors. The measure also provides that creditors may also initiate the court proceedings looking to a readjustment of debts.

The railroad section of the bill, according to Representative La Guardia, its author, will "squeeze the water" out of existing railroad securities by enabling the carriers to refinance outstanding obligations on a scale commensurate with assets.

Garner Seeks Speedy Action.

Voicing the attitude of the Democratic leadership, Speaker Garner today declared he could see no reason "why we should not pass the bill either under a suspension of the rules, by unanimous consent, or some other way."

"This is a nonpartisan proposal," he stated. "The President has sent congress a message recommending it. The joint committee of the senate and house subcommittees on the judiciary have been working on it for about two years and are now about ready to offer something.

"I believe it will be helpful in adjusting debts. There has been a great demand developing in this country for a revision of the bankruptcy laws."

According to house leaders, the only opposition yet heard to the plan has come from the so-called house inflationist group headed by Representatives Wright Patman [Dem., Tex.], John E. Rankin [Dem., Miss.], and Jeff Busby [Dem., Miss.]. Mr. Patman, speaking for the group before the committee today, declared that "we cannot deflate this country to present prices and wages; the remedy is inflation of the currency immediately and not bankruptcy."

Representative Busby, acting for the inflationist bloc, today introduced a measure providing for issuance of three billion dollars of new currency by the federal reserve banks, backed by government bonds. Under the bill, one billion dollars would be issued immediately, one billion within 60 days, and a third billion after 150 days if the first two billion did not raise commodity prices to 80 per cent of the 1921-1929 level.

Our Patriotic Statesmen in Washington Striving to Spend Nation Out of the Red

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The American citizen who is prowling the streets for a few dollar job, fighting to keep a little business together, or joining pitchfork mobs to run the bidders off the courthouse steps where foreclosed farms are up for sale cannot possibly have any conception of the trimming and chiseling which passes for government in Washington.

For all his troubles, love of country remains in his heart and he will not permit himself to realize what this is that he calls "the guv'ment." Statesmen are politicians, yes, but they are Americans, too, and in such a time as this they would not do their country that way.

O, wouldn't they?

Hopes for Session Blasted.

The conduct of the present congress, the lame duck session, as they call it, is the more cynical because when the election was over and the boys came back to Washington at great expense to a busted treasury, there was pulse of hope all over the country. Notwithstanding past failures and congressional frivolity, the boys would get together and forget all jealousy, forget the larceny which is known as patronage, and do something. Busted treasury? Is that term too strong or is a firm busted which is deep in debt, spending beyond its income, and trying to spend its way out of the red?

A lame duck senator who goes back to his home, relieved and disillusioned, after March 4, suggests that there is larceny in the very soul of the American citizen and that this is the reason why he gets the sort of treatment he does from congress. Being so constituted, he votes for men after his own heart who represent the perfection of his own vice. He doesn't want an even break. He wants an edge. He wants the difference. So he is constantly badgering his representatives in Washington to get him something out of the government.

John J. Citizen Wants an Edge.

John J. Citizen wants to sell a land site to the postoffice department and will the senator put in the fix? He is in a jam over his income tax, so, dear senator, you may not remember me personally but I am an intimate friend of Ald. Will Steel and I wish you would drop around to the department of internal revenue.

Or a pal has been put under glass for running a speakeasy and, dear senator, please ask the judge to lean a little as this was a quiet, homelike place that you could take your wife to and no dump in any sense of the word.

Or, dear senator, I see that Corporal Joseph What has received a medal and I was braver than he was, so please get the secretary of war to award me a better medal.

Maybe He Wants Job.

Or he wants a job. Not heavy work, but filing documents or opening doors. Or a business firm wants to write some government business and apprehends that other firms will be trying to get an angle on this job, so will the senator please be good enough to "see" the proper authorities and outchisel their senators, who doubtless are active in this matter?

"I always wanted to be a senator," the lame duck said. "Next to the presidency, I thought it was the highest office in the world. Other kids wanted to be the heavyweight champion or dreamed of playing ball in the world series, but I had noble aspirations.

"I know better now. I am out money and I have more enemies than I ever had before. My illusions about the high office are gone, but, what is worse, my illusion about the citizenship of the people is gone. They don't want to serve their country. They think of the government only to wonder what they can get out of it. Gimme, gimme."

Accomplishment—Zero.

Be that as it may, the present congress which went into session on Dec. 5 has accomplished nothing and will not accomplish anything before adjournment except perhaps a bill to legalize an insipid counterfeit beer in liquidation of the Democratic pledge to repeal the eighteenth amendment. This beer bill represents a discount of about 99 per cent on the party pledge. President Hoover might then veto the beer bill and that would be just as well, too, because once this beer reached the market repeal could be postponed, fumbled around and perhaps ultimately used over again in another campaign.

But the fact which the people probably cannot bring themselves to believe is that congress doesn't even try to do anything but only work to prevent the accomplishment of anything. Mainly the motives are partisan or sectional or otherwise selfish, as opposed to the general good, and Huey Long had the frankness, at least, to say in the senate at a time when more constructive works might have been under way, "We want whatever jobs are coming to us. We want to get ours."

Huey Long in Limelight.

For days Mr. Long has been yelling away in the senate chamber, stalling, killing time, a childish procedure permissible under the rules, in a filibuster against the Glass banking bill. And it begins to appear as if he had succeeded. His remarks, of course, are unintelligible. He rambles, he picks an irresponsible letter at random out of a pile, reads a phrase and wanders off into a discussion suggested by that phrase or something he heard a fellow say somewhere once. He reads from the Bible. He tells bum jokes.

He leers at the senators, flaunts his uncouthness, shoots his cuffs and yells "ain't" and "he don't" for that is Huey's act. His act is the common people act, although Huey, of course, has plenty of money and embarrassed himself once during the Chicago convention when he peeled a thousand dollar bill off a roll to cover a bet. That was out of character.

Huey fights free style. Like Ty Cobb, who used to fight tomcat rules against ball players who expected him to box the regular way, Mr. Long took the senate by surprise. Etiquette was declared off and he is a hard man to handle because just when he ought to be leading a left hook he is fetching a kick to the abdomen followed by a thumb in the eye.

He fills the galleries and he struts his stuff, a tailboard herb doctor or a county fair tub thumper heating up the hicks from the platform in front of the kootch tent.

Regardless of the merits of the now almost defunct Glass bill, Huey's filibuster, be it remembered, was intended to obstruct, not to expedite, and, of course, to indulge the vanity of a queer character who has a great way with a rabble and lives on attention.

Two Other Statesmen.

Borah and Johnson got into a fight the other day, leaders in the greatest deliberative body on earth, squabbling and spatting in a clothesline feud which contributes again to the accomplishment of nothing, net, while idle men walk the streets and farmers take to their pitchforks with a look that has nothing to do with hay. A pitchfork doesn't make a half bad sort of bayonet and there have been three marches on Washington already.

Relieved of political necessities, Mr. Hoover is going out more a citizen of the nation than any of those who remain or any of those lame ducks who hope to come back. The Wickersham report was his crisis and he was as much a politician as the worst of them, when he had his chance. It was not the most important event of his career, but it was peculiarly contrived to show him up one way or another. Now he would do something worth while, but they are not going to let him run up any credit to carry over toward 1936. But they will be sending up bills to him which are tempting in appearance, but rotten in fact to make him use his veto. Thus he will put himself in dutch with the larcenous instincts of the citizens who would get theirs in the form of counterfeit beer or the farmers' bounty if he were to sign them.

Nothing in Sight.

Of this congress, the man out prowling for a few dollar jobs may feel assured of one thing. Though the statesmen holler and yell from now until March 4, orating words by the hundred thousand which cost 25 cents a hundred words for stenographic reporting alone, they will do nothing whatever to help him. He will be worse off than ever when they get through.

So they whoop through the days in noisy competition with the riveting machines which chatter among the skeletons of new government buildings, helping to spend the treasury out of the red.

Crippled Girl's Coaster Wagon Stolen by Thief

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 14.—Virginia Leach, 11, today was denied one of the few pleasures she gets out of life by a "meanest thief." Virginia has been paralyzed since she was three, and every day her 12 year old sister took her riding in a coaster wagon. Today the wagon was gone. Police are seeking the thief.

GRAPE GROWERS, DRYS PROTEST 3.05% BEER BILL

Same Limit on Ales and Wines Opposed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Opposition to the senate judiciary subcommittee beer bill was expressed today by the professional drys and the California vineyardists represented in Washington by Marion De Vries, counsel for the Grape Growers' League of California.

The drys charged nullification, while the grape interests charged that the alcoholic percentage allowed by the bill for wine would not permit manufacture of either "a wholesome nor a commercial product."

Press Revision of Bill.

Notwithstanding the new opposition, senate leaders of the judiciary and finance committees went ahead with their revamping of the Collier 3.2 or 4 per cent by volume beer bill. Democratic members of the finance committee, which receive the measure next, has called for estimates of the probable receipts to be derived from a tax on the manufacture and sale of the type of wines and fruit juices permitted by the measure as redrafted by Chairman John J. Blaine [Rad., Wis.] and members of his subcommitee.

Reports today were that the wine tax could be expected to yield another $25,000,000, bringing the total tax probabilities for the beer and wine bill up to in excess of 150 million dollars. Attempts are being made to obtain treasury estimates of the probable revenue which could be obtained from a tax on 3.05 cider.

Affects Ale and Wine.

The redrafted bill will be acted on by the senate judiciary committee Monday. If approved it will go to the finance committee. From that committee it goes direct to a place on the senate calendar. As now written it removed federal penalties from the manufacture or sale of beer, ale, wine, and fruit juices if their alcoholic content does not exceed 3.05 per cent.

Senator Morris Sheppard [Dem., Tex.] termed the bill unconstitutional. "If it proposes to legalize 3 per cent beer it is nullification," he asserted today.

The study to determine how much revenue could be depended upon from legalization of light wines was undertaken by Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.] and Senator Clarence C. Dill [Dem., Wash.]. Senator Dill said he believed the wine clause would raise substantial revenues. He said he had been advised by internal revenue experts that the revenue from cider would be considerable. His opinion was that a "delightful light wine" could be produced with a 3.05 alcoholic content.

Senate Debates Prevents Veto of Filipino Independence Bill

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Freedom for the Philippines today was caught up in the radical runaway which has been going on in the senate for the last five days, with Senator Huey P. Long, the untamed "kingfish," in the lead.

The independence measure, fresh from its passage over the President's veto in the house, was roped in by the filibuster which the Louisiana radical has been successfully conducting against the branch banking provisions of the Glass banking bill.

Vote Is Postponed.

Instead of a vote late today, as had been expected, the senate's decision on whether it will sustain or override the veto was postponed to some indefinite time next week.

The inclusion of the Philippines bill in the filibuster was an act of defiance by Senator Long, and an indication of the growing power of the radical group in the senate.

It foreshadowed—so some predicted—the job of President Elect Roosevelt is going to have in the next congress to keep some of the uncurried "sons of the wild jackass" from kicking over the traces.

Conservative Democrats have viewed with dismay and something close to disgust the antics Senator Long has cut up ever since feeding on the oats of last November's victory. With the cleverness which no one denies him, he has seen to it that he never staged a sortie without allies to back him.

Signed by 16 Senators.

It was the answer of the "kingfish" to a threat of cloture by his own Democratic leadership. The imposition of cloture first requires a petition signed by sixteen senators. Such a petition, asking limitation of debate on the Glass bill, was in the hands of Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, and Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], author of the banking bill, this morning.

Senator Long demanded the withdrawal of the petition under threat of delaying passage of the independence measure. He was refused, and the filibuster of the Philippines bill was his retort.

The incongruity of Senator Long's filibuster of the Philippine independence measure lies in the fact that he himself is one of its supporters. His excuse for the delay, however, is that if it brings defeat to the measure the next congress, with Mr. Roosevelt's help, will pass a bill providing for freedom after an even shorter probationary period than the ten years carried in the present bill.

The filibuster was a direct slap at the attempt of Senator Robinson, the minority leader, to throw the Democratic strength back of the bill and pass it promptly over the President's veto, as the house did yesterday, 274 to 94. It was the Democratic leader who moved to take up the veto message and who began the debate with an energetic plea that the senate disregard Mr. Hoover's warning and insist on passage.

Senator Hiram Bingham [Rep., Conn.], chairman of the committee on territories and insular affairs came forth with an attack on the President and his message that surprised the senate.

Bingham Assails President.

His reference was for an independent bill calling for a 25 to 30 year probationary period instead of the ten years stipulated in the present measure, Senator Bingham declared. He foresaw economic disaster for the islands. But since the Filipinos insisted and since this seemed to be the best measure that could be arrived at by compromise, he intended to vote for it.

"The President ought to have been more frank," said the Connecticut Republican. "He should not have attempted to mislead."

ROOSEVELT SEES SPECIAL SESSION ALMOST CERTAIN

Dismayed by Discord and Delay in Congress.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The delay of congress in its consideration of legislation which is part of the Roosevelt rehabilitation plan has convinced the President elect's closest advisers, that the only salvation for his program is the wielding of a big stick.

Mr. Roosevelt is reported as dismayed at the spectacle of a congress striking discord in all the features of his program for immediate action, and according to reports, he is becoming convinced that he must assume the responsibility for executive action, and force his proposals through congress by direct measures.

Three Join Filibuster.

With three of his own party leaders, the radical senator, Huey P. Long of Louisiana; Burton K. Wheeler of Montana and Thomas of Oklahoma, leading a filibuster against a bank reform bill, and demanding recognition of their schemes for wild inflations, and with the beer bill amended by the senate leaders, the farm bill choked up with amendments making the original plan almost unrecognizable, and no certain guarantee of a balancing of the federal budget in prospect, Mr. Roosevelt's advisors are reported resigned to the necessity for his calling a special session of the new congress after his inauguration on March 4.

The President elect intends, it is said, to adhere to his original intention of keeping his hands off congress until he receives the authority as President. At the present time, it is reported, Mr. Roosevelt's only plan for immediate entry into national affairs, apart from the exhaustive study he is making of his duties, will be to obtain the appointment of men of his selection to diplomatic authority for the purpose of collecting information on foreign tariffs and the war debts.

Refuses to Disclose Position.

Mr. Roosevelt has been represented, during the course of the Long-Wheeler-Thomas filibuster, as being on both sides of the dispute over the bank bill, and he has refused to disclose his position. On the beer bill the President elect likewise has refused to state his approval or disapproval of the senate proposal to change legal alcoholic percentage from 3.2 to 3.05 but it is known that his advisors have told him that if the beer bill is to produce the revenue expected, the alcoholic content ought to be about 3.75 per cent.

Mr. Roosevelt's only statements on the farm bill is that he stood for "the principles" of the bill, but he has had several visits recently from farm experts who have been outspoken in their criticism of the amendments tacked on to the bill.

So far as governmental economy is concerned, the President elect has expressed hopes that congress at this session might effect substantial savings in the budget, but he has been told by the Democratic leaders themselves that political expediency makes it impossible for them to vote for drastic cuts and that it will be up to him after March 4 to effect the economies under which the budget can be balanced.

To this end the Democrats in congress have promised they will give Mr. Roosevelt more drastic powers to effect cuts on his executive authority than have been given to any President in the past.

MERRIAM TELLS WOMEN CHICAGO MAY BE STATE

Independent statehood for Chicago may, in the long run, be the solution if feeling between Illinois' principal municipality and the remainder of the state persists, Prof. Charles E. Merriam of the University of Chicago, told the Cook county League of Women Voters yesterday at the Palmer house.

Prof. Merriam and State Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg spoke on plans for the consolidation of local and state taxing bodies and the elimination of unnecessary offices.

Prof. Merriam found justification for the suggestion that Chicago secede from the other 101 counties, in downstate's refusal to reapportion senatorial districts, a move which would give Chicago control of both chambers of the general assembly. 'The constitution requires it," he said, "but thirty years have gone by without redistricting. I don't think our downstate friends would object very strongly to cutting away from 'the wicked city by the lake.' It would save us a lot of money and we would not have delay in getting our own measures passed."

Mr. Schnackenberg discussed the consolidation report prepared by Griffenhagen and associates for the state cohhission on taxation and expenditures, part of which will be introduced in the assembly, perhaps this week.

DIES OF KNIFE WOUNDS.

Edward Isreal, 37 years old, 1501 Hastings street, a Negro, died in the county hospital yesterday of knife wounds which he had told police were inflicted by Miss Thelma Moore, 27 years old, 1317 South Laflin street, also colored, who is sought.

Attract Children

Shrieks of joy from children visiting the Lincoln park zoo these days testify to the popularity of the newest arrivals there—a baby donkey and a baby guanaco. The guanaco is native to South America and is the wild type of llama, it was explained yesterday by Floyd S. Young, director of the zoo. It is a member of the camel family and brings the total of the guanaco group on display in Lincoln park to eight. The donkey, born on New Year's day, is a constant source of amusement to the spectators because of its antics. The young guanaco is about a week older.

EX-CROWN PRINCE OF GERMANY BUYS A RURAL ESTATE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—Former Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm has acquired the Hohenhaus estate near Cassel from Baron von Schuzbar-Milchling. This was announced today in the Cassel Post, which forecasts that the prince will spend a considerable part of his time there.

The younger sons of the crown prince are interested in agriculture. Hohenhaus lies in the center of the richest soil of Germany.

Primkenau castle, in Silesia, with its park and another princely castle in it, will be sold at compulsory auction on April 11 by order of the Sprottau District court. The castle was built by the former kaiser's brother-in-law, Duke Ernst Guenther von Schleswig-Holstein, at the end of the last century. The property passed on at his death to his widow, the Duchess Dorothea.

AMNESIA VICTIM RECOVERS.

DENY E. R. GRAHAM PAID NOVELIST TO DROP HER SUIT

No Cash Settlement, Both Sides Declare.

Reports that a cash settlement was paid to Mrs. Alma Newton Anderson, novelist, to drop her $500,000 conspiracy suit against Ernest R. Graham, the architect, and Thomas McGuire, a private detective, were emphatically denied by counsel for both sides yesterday. A directed verdict of not guilty terminated the case Friday in the court of Superior Judge Paul McWilliams, following a conference of attorneys in chambers, on Friday.

None of the lawyers in the case would make any statement when asked about the reported cash settlement at the conclusion of the case on Friday, but Judge McWilliams remarked, after the jury had signed the directed verdict, that he understood a settlement had been made. Mrs. Anderson said she had been instructed to remain silent, and her only comment was an expression of satisfaction with the outcome of the case.

"I am not worried," she said.

Ask for Directed Verdict.

The conference in the judge's chambers came after Mrs. Anderson had taken the stand to tell of "a violent and passionate love affair" with the noted architect. When the court and counsel emerged, the defense attorneys made the motion for a directed verdict, and Mrs. Anderson's attorneys did not contest the motion.

Attorney Maurice J. Nathanson, for Mrs. Anderson, said yesterday he knew nothing about any settlement.

"The case was ended when the judge sustained the motion for a directed verdict," he said. "We believe we have a much stronger case in the $250,000 libel suit against Graham now pending in the Superior court and we intend to press it in the near future."

Issue Formal Statement.

A formal statement issued by Attorneys Daniel J. Schuyler, William C. Graves, and John C. Richert, counsel for Graham, said:

"We desire to state, on behalf of Ernest R. Graham, one of the defendants, that no payment whatsoever was made in this suit for the purpose of a settlement or to induce Mrs. Anderson to rest her case."

Attorney Graves, elaborating on the statement, said no payment was made or agreed upon for any other purpose.

Although refusing to discuss the trial outcome, Mrs. Andreson made this comment yesterday:

"I am writing a book which will draw some sharp comparisons between the newly rich society in Chicago and the flower of the old south. The book is to be published shortly."

Mrs. Anderson comes from a distinguished Louisiana family, according to the opening statement which her attorney, Leo G. Hana, made to the jury on Friday.

SHOT BY POLICE; FINED $1.

John Fricaso, 21 years old, 1516 Taylor street, who was shot in the arm Thursday night by Policeman Stephen Stock when he failed to obey a command to halt, was fined $1 and costs yesterday by Judge Francis Borrelli.

GIRL SUPPORTS WIDOW'S STORY IN MURDER QUIZ

Schildhauer Kidnaping Details Corroborated.

Corroboration of some details of the story told by Mrs. Frances Schildhauer concerning the murder of her husband, Edwin O. Schildhauer, bandmaster at the Austin High school, was given to the police yesterday by Miss Hazel La Fay, 28 years old, who lives in the first floor apartment at 3435 Fulton street. The Schildhauers lived on the second floor.

Miss La Fay was one of two woman witnesses questioned during the day by Lieut. Thomas Duffy at the Fillmore street police station. The other was Miss Roberta Lubbock, a music student, who once roomed in the Schildhauer home. Both had been questioned previously.

Quizzed on Time Element.

Lieut. Duffy asked Miss La Fay if she recalled any unusual occurrence on the night of Dec. 10—the night of Schildhauer's murder. According to Mrs. Schildhauer, her husband was kidnaped in front of his home by two men in an automobile about 8:20 p. m. The police doubt this. Miss La Fay said she remembered the night and the hour.

"I was preparing to take a bath," said Miss La Fay, "when I heard Mrs. Schildhauer running down the stairs and screaming. I put on my robe and went into the vestibule. Mrs. Schildhauer was outside by that time and I waited for her to return. When she came back, I asked her what had happened.

"She said: 'I just saw a car with two men in it. Edwin was walking to the car with his hands up, and it looked like one of them hit him with something.' I asked her where this had occurred, and she said: 'Right in front of the house.' She then went upstairs to tell her father. The time was before 8:30, because I left the house at 8:30."

Story of Miss Lubbock.

Miss Lubbock in her story asserted that Mrs. Schildhauer was "crazy about Paul Walton." Walton is a disbarred lawyer. Miss Lubbock said that she and Mrs. Schildhauer left the Fulton street residence in 1930 and lived for a while at the Devonshire and Lacon hotels. At that time Walton and Mrs. Schildhauer were frequently together, Miss Lubbock said.

During the day Dr. Clarence W. Muehlberger, coroner's chemist, reported to Coroner Frank J. Walsh that a small stain found on a railing on the front porch of the building where the Schildhauers resided was caused by human blood. Other stains found about the house were not human blood, Dr. Muehlberger said.

The significance of the stain lies in the theory of police that Schildhauer might have been slain inside the apartment building.

Mrs. Hutton, Ill in Bed, Ordered to Appear in Court

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—While the Rev. Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton lay ill in bed, papers were served on her to appear in court next Tuesday to answer a law suit in which Roy Stewart, film producer, charged her with breach of contract and asks $240,000.

A Blow Starts Evanston Battling Over the 'Pinks'

Charges that at least two Evanston churches and many prominent Evanstonians are aiding in the spread of communism were forcefully made yesterday and were as forcefully met with direct statements that it isn't so.

The principal attackers were Mrs. Albert W. Dilling, 545 Essex road, Kenilworth, militant foe of pinks and reds, and Albert E. McKeighan of Wilmette, head of the Paul Reveres, a patriotic organization. Their statements were made after they had attended a Friday evening meeting in the First Methodist church of Evanston, sponsored by the American Civil Liberties union.

A number of things of which they disapproved occurred at this meeting and after it was over there was an incident that further upset Mrs. Dilling.

"Liar" and Then a Blow.

"We were talking in front of the church," she said, "when a man who was opposed to my views came up and remarked: 'The American Civil Liberties union approves upholding the constitution.' I replied: 'You're a liar.' He tried to hit me when I said that, but one of my friends hit him first and he ran down the street."

Mrs. Dilling then outlined her reasons for an appeal that the churches of Evanston refuse in future to have any such meetings in their buildings.

First, she said, Carl Haessler was there. He is head of the Federated Press, is known as a lecturer who favors communism more than he favors socialism, and both more than he favors the present economic setup.

Wanted to Impeach a Judge.

"Haessler appealed for money to be used in the impeachment of a judge in Chicago who was not treating communists well," Mrs. Dilling continued. "He wanted funds also to aid communists in suing the village of Melrose Park for injuries to rioters there.

"Then circulars were distributed at the meeting, calling attention to the fact that Romania Ferguson, back from a school in Moscow, is to speak Tuesday night in the Unitarian chuch of Evanston. That meeting is sponsored by the Evanston branch of the International Labor Defense league."

The hand bills stated that Mrs. Ferguson, who is colored, wolud speak on "How the Soviet Union Solved the National Minorities Problem."

"To bring atheism and communism into the churches is the same thing as introducing Judas," Mrs. Dilling asserted.

McKeighan Backs Her Up.

Mr. McKeighan also criticized the use of places of worship as places of meeting for either the Civil Liberties union or the International Labor Defense league.

"Nobody would try to deprive the union of free speech," he declared, "but when sedition is preached it's time to 'do something. When the churches permit such meetings it is dangerous."

The Friday night meeting was presided over by Mrs. Catharine Waugh McCulloch. Among those who attended were the Rev. Ernest Fremont Tittle, pastor of the Methodist church; the Rev. Raymond B. Bragg, formerly a Unitarian minister in Evanston, and Prof. Thomas F. Holgate of Northwestern university.

Deny Aid to Communism.

Each of them declared emphatically they had no sympathy with communism and that, on the contrary, they were anxious to guarantee to all citizens the rights of free speech, a free press, and peaceful assembly, as guaranteed in the constitution.

"Some call us radicals and communists," said Mrs. McCulloch. "Nothing is further from the ideals of the Civil Liberties union. We are good citizens who want our government bettered by legal means. I am a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and of the union. There is nothing inconsistent in that."

Prof. Holgate declared that he was not a member of the union and that he, too, was opposed to communism. He added that he did not know Haessler and that he had spoken himself only to support "a great American tradition."

Pastor "Won't Be Bluffed."

To their voices was added that of the Rev. Mr. Tittle who, like Mrs. McCulloch and Haessler, is a member of the Civil Liberty union's executive board in Chicago.

"Why shouldn't we rent the church hall to the union?" asked Dr. Tittle. "I belong to the union and I believe in free speech and a free press. Communism was not discussed at this meeting and Haessler was the only radical present. I shall not be bluffed by persons claiming to be super patriots. We don't want Russia; we want free speech."

LATVIA OFFERS U.S. MORE TRADE FOR CUT IN DEBT

Proposes New Agreement Be Negotiated.

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Jan. 14.—Latvia is willing to negotiate commercial concessions to the United States, providing they do not affect Latvia's relations with other countries, in return for a reduction of the debt owed by this country to America. This was announced today by Foreign Minister Charles Zarin.

[Latvia was one of the six European nations which paid their obligations to the United States on Dec. 15. Five nations repudiated their debts to America. Latvia on Dec. 15 paid $148,852. The total Latvian debt to the United States is about $6,740,000.]

Attacks in the Latvian press against making any payment to the United States, the minister explained, do not reflect the opinion of the government, which realizes that the debt must be paid. Latvia, he continued, is handicapped in the coming negotiations because the Letts closed their legation at Washington several years ago owing to the expense entailed. However, it is possible that Latvia will send another minister to Washington next spring.

Admits U. S. Faces Loss.

Latvia is the first country in Europe to admit that the requested debt readjustment would cause losses to the United States and to suggest negotiations for concessions to compensate for the reduced payments.

Latvia, according to Zarin, is combating the depression successfully. A monthly budget system has been organized by which the government can spend only the amount obtained from the revenues of the preceding month. Salaries of government employés have been cut about 30 per cent and further reductions are not contemplated.

"Latvia is also determined to remain on the gold standard," the minister continued. "Our country has survived four different currencies, and experience has taught us that inflation is dangerous. We estimate that present hoardings amount to $6,000,000. If faith can be restored and if money can again be brought into savings institutions and business enterprise, then the crisis for Latvia will be nearly over."

Herriot Denies Reparations Link.

PARIS, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Former Premier Herriot today took sharp issue with assertions that the Hoover moratorium established a link between interallied war debts and German reparations.

An article in his Lyons newspaper, Democrate, expressed astonishment at the light manner in which foreign affairs are treated in some quarters.

"It appears," said the article, "that to repudiate the December payment on the debt to America was not a repudiation of the signature of France. The Hoover moratorium has been invoked. I have shown—and it is sufficient to read the text of the moratorium declaration—that it contains a formal disavowal of all corelation between debts and reparations."

Respect for signatures is imperative, the article said.

Laval Dodges Issue.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Jan. 14.—Former Premier Laval today again refused to be drawn into the discussion of what was said and what was not said and of what was understood and what was not understood at his interview with President Hoover at Washington in October, 1931. In a formal statement the former premier said:

"Since the vote in the French chamber, as was to be expected, a controversy has arisen in the press of this country and in the American press on the problem of debts.

"I have been often mentioned, but the articles published on my conversation with Mr. Hoover have not been communicated to me. There has resulted some confusion and some errors. For example, [this was in reply to a statement published in Paris newspapers this morning] I never wrote to the President of the republic on the question of Lausanne, as stated this morning.

"To put an end to all these interpretations, I shall myself, if I judge it useful when the time comes, make a declaration for which I shall assume entire responsibility."

Laval Blames Intermediaries.

While Laval refused to make any further statement for publication, he conveyed his opinion of what has been published in these words:

"In reporting a conversation which was as full of nuances as ours, the whole spirit can be easily falsified by even a single intermediary."

That is why he intends, if he says anything at all, to write his statement carefully himself and deliver it either in a speech in the senate or through the press agencies and accept full responsibility.

"I don't want any intermediaries," he emphasized.

Fifty to Get Places in Her Court.

to each, will go to one hundred girls whose photographs are published by THE TRIBUNE in the course of the preliminary selections leading up to the three final decisions by the judges.

The Newspapers Coöperating.

The sixteen newspapers, representing thirteen states of the Union and the national capital, which are to work out the plan sponsored by the Century of Progress are:

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and its Paris edition.
The Herald-Traveler, Boston, Mass.
The Public Ledger, Philadelphia, Pa.
The Post, Washington, D. C.
The News-Leader, Richmond, Va.
The Courier-Journal and the Times, Louisville, Ky.
The Journal, Atlanta, Ga.
The Item-Tribune, New Orleans, La.
The Arkansas Gazette, Little Rock, Ark.
The Journal-Post, Kansas City, Mo.
The Oklahoman, Oklahoma City, Okla.
The Express, San Antonio, Tex.
The Chronicle, San Francisco, Cal.
The Journal, Portland, Ore.

A World-wide Response.

The combined circulation of these newspapers is nation-wide and through their foreign affiliations they will make this quest for feminine charm and character known abroad. Thus the response to it will be world-wide. Place of residence will have no bearing upon the selections made by the judges. The Queen of the Fair—no pun intended, but the phrase does have a double significance—may come from Davenport on the Mississippi or perhaps from Belgrade on the Danube.

What the newspaper publishers of the coöperating newspapers and the officials of the Century of Progress wish to emphasize is that this is no tawdry beauty contest but an introduction to the nations of the flower of womanhood.

No Stage Beauties to Enter.

To avoid commercializing the project no artists' models and no stage beauties will participate in it and the blight of the press agent will not be upon it. As a matter of fact, participants do not have to be "beauties" in the showman's sense of the word. What they do have to be is girls who fulfill the lofty ideal of character and loveliness which sensible people delight to recognize.

On those fundamentals the decisions of the judges will be made. The girl chosen for the queenship may be a Cinderella unknown to any save those of her own little circle and she may turn out to be the admired honor scholar of a great university. One thing is certain: So scrupulously has the plan been made that any mother can safely let her daughter take part in it.

An example of the care which has been taken to avoid the cheapening of the project is one of its outstanding conditions. It is that the girls chosen as queen and court of honor shall not accept a theatrical, movie, or talkie engagement for a year after the opening of the exposition without the written consent of parents or guardians and the Tribune company.

No Limit on Age.

Other than the provisions against professionalism and exploitation there are no limitations except that entrants shall be either unmarried or widows. There is no age limit.

Preliminary selections by the judges will be made from photographs, the publication of which in THE TRIBUNE'S rotogravure section will begin on Sunday, Jan. 29, and will end on April 2. On each of those ten Sundays photographs of ten entrants will be printed, and to each entrant so distinguished the sum of $100 will be presented.

It should be noted that all the one hundred dollar awards, of which there will be one hundred, will be made on the basis of photographs.

All photographs must be in Tribune Tower by April 15. Although there will be no publication of photographs after April 2, those received subsequent to that date will none the less receive the careful consideration of the judges in their work of selecting the queen and her court of honor.

The selections by means of photographs will be followed by the assembling of facts concerning the vocation, environment, and status of the girls who have come successfully through the preliminary judging.

Final Judging Begins April 16.

Final judging will begin April 16 and continue until the middle of May. Announcement of the names of the 51 successful entrants will be made as soon thereafter as possible.

Then will come the making of gala gowns for the chosen ladies and the completion of plans for their entertainment in Chicago. During their visit they will live at the best hotels and will be under the chaperonage of leading Chicago women. From the moment of their departure from their homes for Chicago until their return all their expenses will be paid by THE TRIBUNE, which, being on the scene, will make it a special obligation to see that the guests are looked after as if they were members of THE TRIBUNE'S own family. If any of them come from abroad their expenses will be met as completely as if they came from a neighboring state.

List of the Judges.

The names of the seven judges in this festival of girlhood indicate the dignity which will distinguish it. They are:

Mrs. Waller Borden.
Mrs. Howard Linn.
Mrs. Robert R. McCormick.
Mrs. William H. Mitchell.
Mrs. Pauline Palmer.
Wallace Kirk.
John T. McCutcheon.

In addition to the gifts aggregating $20,000 to be presented by THE TRIBUNE to entrants, gifts will be made by newspapers associated with THE TRIBUNE in carrying through the festival. They will also spend many thousands of dollars in making known the quest for character and charm.

Vaida-Voevod Heads New Cabinet of Rumania

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Alexander Vaida-Voevod formed a cabinet tonight, members of which took oath before King Carol shortly before midnight. Premier Juliu Maniu's government resigned as a result of the resignation of Minister of the Interior Ion Michalake because the king would not comply with his demand that certain police officials be supplanted by civilians. The ministry of interior was given to George Mironescu, vice premier without portfolio in Premier Maniu's cabinet. The other ministers served in the cabinet Maniu formed Oct. 19, 1932.

EUREKA COLLEGE TO GIVE STUDENTS CHANCE TO EARN EXPENSES

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Eureka college, through its president, Cldye L. Lyon, announced today a new policy of student institution coöperation. Emphasis is put upon the coöperative educational features of the plan which will effect a tremendous cut in the present cost of attendance at the school for those students who wish to perform work in exchange for reduction in tuition, room and board costs.

As President Lyon explained, there is always a large amount of work to be done about an institution of the magnitude of Eureka college. In the past this has been done by workers paid from the receipts of tuition and other supporting funds. It has been found that students can do this work. In effect they are paid by way of reduction in educational costs what otherwise would be paid by them and in turn to some hired worker.

The advantage of the plan is to permit a larger number of students to enter the school who otherwise might find the costs prohibitive. Under the new policy each student is offered the opportunity of doing 12 hours work each week outside of class hours in exchange for a stipulated reduction in tuition, board and room costs. The work is varied including almost everything from janitor and maid service to confidential clerks in the office of administration.

DROP IN SCHOOL BURGLARIES FOR 1932 IS REPORTED

John Howatt, chief engineer for the public school system, announced yesterday there were 675 burglaries and cases of vandalism in the schools during 1932, a decrease of 223 over the previous year. The property loss for last year amounted to $25,366 and property valued at $7,287 was recovered.

School fires caused damage estimated at $12,020 and thirteen of the 32 blazes were reported as of incendiary origin. The loss for fires in 1931 was $159,665, most of which resulted from the fire at the Curtis junior high school.

The police arrested 426 persons, most of them boys, for vandalism and burglary of school buildings during the year, and there were 166 convictions. There were 477 arrests in 1931, and 282 convictions.

Mr. Howatt declared that because of the activity of inspectors under him the property losses from various forms of malicious mischief were on the decrease.

FIND 4,763 GEMS THROWN AWAY BY FLEEING JEWELER

MANILA, P. I., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Searchers reported today that 4,763 small diamonds scattered along the roadside 20 miles from Manila had been recovered. A hunt continued for several thousand more of the tiny stones.

Police said the diamonds were tossed there on Jan. 2 by Emmanuel Strauss, member of a Manila jewelry firm, who was charged with a $57,000 shortage, and that he confessed he had planned to commit suicide, but weakened and returned with a tale of being kidnaped and robbed.

Two truckloads of soil were brought into the city for closer examination today. Most of the stones were mere chips, with the largest valued at $50. Jewelers valued all of the diamonds at between $35,000 and $40,000.

"FRIENDS" ROB BUTCHER.

Two gunmen, who gained entrance to the meat market and dwelling of James J. Bruk at 3213 West 22d street early yesterday by posing as his friends, robbed Bruk of $172.

IRISH ELECTION A TOSS UP; BOTH SIDES CONFIDENT

Police to Guard Cosgrave Dublin Rally Today.

BY HUGH CURRAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Jan. 14.—After a week of bitter electioneering, both President Eamon de Valera's Fianna Fail and former President William T. Cosgrave's Cumann na Gaedhéal [League of Gaels] announced today that they are assured of success at the polls on Tuesday, Jan. 24.

Both the government and the opposition bloc assert they will have an adequate majority in the dail eireann to form a government.

Neutral observers have a feeling that the majority will be infinitesimal—one or two votes either way. This would make the formation of a government virtually impossible and would precipitate another election within a month.

May Not Want Job.

It is questionable, indeed, whether Cosgrave would undertake the responsibility of leading a government with such a narrow majority. In this case De Valera probably would continue in office, but would be unable to initiate any new measures.

Such a position would, it is believed, prove highly dangerous in the Free State and might provoke unexpected developments. The expectations and hopes of the more moderate elements are that Cosgrave will obtain an adequate working majority. He could not get this majority in his own party but with the aid of the independents and centrists, a stable government could be formed.

It is clear that if De Valera wins a majority, settlement of the tariff war with Great Britain over land annuities is improbable. Without such a settlement and recognition of the grave financial crisis which seems imminent, close observers predict that a period of instability and chaos is around the corner.

Police to Guard Cosgrave Rally.

Cosgrave will be the principal speaker at a big rally in Dublin tomorrow. Two hundred police will be on duty to prevent rioting and troops will be held in readiness in the event of serious disorders. These precautions were a sequel to the fierce fighting at a Cosgrave party rally here a week ago when 30 persons were injured.

The Irish Times today praised Cosgrave's campaign pledge regarding the land annuities which it describes as "a dramatic appeal to English generosity and Irish sanity and self-interest."

[Cosgrave advocated remission of annuities for two years and reduction by one-half thereafter. He declared for negotiating with London on the basis of the farmers' capacity to pay.]

The Times added that if the cost fell upon the Free State taxpayer alone it would be unbearable but said it believed "the English government will be no less liberal than it was to the distressed of Europe at the Lausanne reparations conference."

The British government is responsible to bondholders for the Irish land loan. In fact, it has guaranteed all loans issued up to last December, when its ten year undertaking ended. All bonds issued on future land sales will be guaranteed exclusively by the Free State government.

But by an act passed in 1931 by the Cosgrave government, land transfers were expedited and little remains that has not been purchased. The Cosgrave government, however, secured only a slight public acknowledgement for its foresight.

Cuba Ends Censorship of U. S. Publications

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Censorship on United States publications circulating in Cuba has been removed Secretary of State Ferrara said tonight.

200 HOUSES VANISH WHEN OKLAHOMA TAX OFFICIALS TRY TO LEVY

Wilson, Okla., Jan. 14.—[U.P.]—Two hundred houses was the game Carter county tax officials stalked today, with the authority of Attorney General J. Berry King in their pockets.

The houses disappeared from their sites between tax assessment and collection time.

Many Oklahoma oil field workers live in small "shotgun" homes, light enough to be raised on skids, hooked on behind oil field trucks and dragged to new locations. Others live in "ready-made" sectional homes that may be dismantled and re-erected by a couple of men in a few days.

CHINESE UNITE TO FIGHT JAPANESE DRIVE ON TIENTSIN

Business Leaders Form Defensive Union.

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TIENTSIN, China, Jan. 14. — Convinced that a crisis is impending here similar to that when the Japanese attacked Shanghai a year ago, Chinese leaders and public bodies in the Tientsin-Peiping district are taking steps to cushion the shock, financially and commercially, as well as to unite public opinion.

The chief objective is to prevent the Japanese from fostering a puppet government in this district similar to the one in Manchuria. Hsiung Hsi-ling, who served as assistant viceroy to Manchuria under the Manchu empire, and later was military governor of Jehol province and finance minister in the republican government, yesterday formed a union of banks, commercial bodies, and educational and industrial organizations. He appointed committees of public safety for the double purpose of presenting a solid economic and political front against Japan and of supporting the Chinese troops at the front.

Convinced Japs Plan Invasion.

Hsiung said that Chinese of all factions, even those who are opposed to the Nanking government, including the so-called Anfu faction, which cooperated with the Japanese and received extensive Japanese loans during the world war, are now convinced that the Japanese intend to invade North China.

Hsiung declared that "the Japanese have themselves in a position where they cannot stop. A military campaign leading to an invasion of North China is inevitable either following or simultaneously with the conquest of Jehol province."

The Japanese army, he said, is now talking of the creation of a Tayunkuo, or great Mongol empire, similar to that of Genghis Kahn, which dominated most of Asia and Russia and much of Europe for several centuries prior to the discovery of America.

Educator Urges Resistance.

Dr. Chang Po-ling, 60 year old founder and president of Nankai university, a graduate of Columbia university, a trustee of the American Boxer indemnity refund commission, and an outstanding educational leader, echoed the views of Hsiung.

The said that while China is unable to defeat Japan in a frontal attack and while it is also futile to expect outside help, Chinese leaders are convinced that the only recourse is continued resistance, making the Japanese conquest as costly as possible and causing Japan's ultimate financial and economic collapse in a domestic revolution which will unseat the now dominant military faction.

Dr. Chang declared that "even though China loses 100,000 soldiers, the result will be beneficial if it causes the unification and rebirth of China and at the same time breaks the power of the Japanese military imperialism, which is a greater menace than former Kaiser Wilhelm's military machine."

Enroll Students to Fight.

Dr. Chang and other educational leaders are organizing students to assist troops at the front. Yesterday they sent a bicycle corps to the front to serve as couriers. Medical schools are organizing medical and surgical relief, while women students are making clothing.

A semi-military report tonight claimed that Chinese troops are still holding the line between Chiumenkow and Shihmenchai, north of Shanhaikwan, where fighting is going on for the control of access to Jehol province.

It is claimed that 10,000 Chinese troops, formerly under Gen. Su Ping-wen, leader of the revolt in northwest Manchuria, and Gen. Ma Chan-shan, Chinese hero of the Nonni river battle in Manchuria last winter, about whose existence conflicting reports have been made, have succeeded in reaching the Jehol border and are being reorganized for the defense of Jehol.

33,000 Chinese Ready to Fight.

TOKIO, Jan. 14. — (AP) — Chinese troops, numbering 33,000 and known as the "Red Spears" and "Big Swords," have been concentrated near Kailu in northeastern Jehol, the Rengo [Japanese] News agency reported today.

The Rengo correspondent at Tungliao, across the Manchurian border from Jehol, said these troops included a motley array of volunteer bands and the remnants of the army of Gen. Su Ping-Wen, which was dispersed in North Manchuria last month by the Japanese. The dispatch said the volunteer general, Chu Ching-Lun, was in command.

Japanese asserted this Chinese force was preparing to "attack" Tungliao, which is about 140 miles northwest of Mukden. The Japanese were making adequate disposition of their forces to meet any "attack."

Order Renewal of Boycott.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 14. — (AP) — The Greater Shanghai Chamber of Commerce, representing the majority of local Chinese business interests, called today for a revival of the boycott against Japanese goods.

[This boycott was advanced by the Japanese as one of their reasons for attacking Shanghai a year ago. It resulted from the Japanese occupation of Manchuria, which began in September, 1931.]

In a circular sent to all commercial and industrial guilds, the chamber of commerce said the boycott had been relaxed and urged that it be made effective again.

"There are only two ways China can oppose Japan," the statement said. "They are by boycott and guerrilla warfare. Shanghai, being the nation's leading commercial city, should set the example by intensifying the boycott and simultaneously assisting Manchurian volunteers."

China Serves War Warning.

GENEVA, Jan. 14.—(AP)—As leaders of the specially assembly of the league of nations were arriving to resume their efforts Monday for a conciliatory settlement of the Manchurian dispute, Dr. W. W. Yen notified the league today that China reserved the right to offer armed resistance to Japanese military action at Shanhaikwan.

Japanese troops, the Chinese minister asserted, have "taken an unlawful advantage of the special privilege claimed under the protocol of 1901" to attack and occupy Shanhaikwan.

He accused the Japanese of "slaughtering thousands of peaceful Chinese citizens" and said they were "further concentrating in large numbers near Shanhaikwan and along the Peiping-Mukden railway."

Dr. Yen's notice to the league was conveyed by communicating to Sir Eric Drummond, secretary general, the contents of identic memoranda which the Nanking government addressed Thursday to all signatories of the Boxer protocol in 1901. This memorandum said, in part:

"The Chinese government is constrained to declare that it cannot assume responsibility for any situation in law or in fact which results from the exercise by Chinese defensive forces of their legitimate right in resisting the aggressive action of the Japanese troops.

Italian Soldier Reported Slain.

TOKIO, Jan. 15.—[Sunday.]—[U.P.]—Reports received here from Chin-Chow today said Chinese soldiers had fired upon three Italian soldiers at Kouchuchai, seven miles southwest of Shanhaikwan, killing one. The shooting was said to have occurred Thursday morning.

[Reports that three Italian marines were missing after an encounter with Chinese forces in the territory mentioned in the above dispatch were "categorically denied" by the Italian legation at Peiping.]

JAP STATESMAN INVITES FOES TO ASSASSINATE HIM

Says He Prefers to Be Slain in Diet.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—When Yukio Ozaki, veteran Japanese political leader and champion of disarmament, left recently for Japan he was convinced, the London Herald said today, that he was soon to be assassinated by fellow countrymen who considered him unpatriotic.

He knew his "death warrant was signed," the newspaper explained, because certain Japanese objected to his recent utterances in the United States and London.

[In speeches in the United States a year ago Ozaki said Japan was making a mistake by opposing participation of America in efforts to conciliate the conflict between Japan and China.]

Writes Poem for Assassins.

Before sailing Ozaki, who is 73 years old, wrote his son in Tokio that "for a public man, the best form of death is to fall at the cold hand of an assassin." He dedicated a little poem to his anticipated murderers. It was translated thus:

"Praise be for the men who may attempt my life,
"If their motive is to die for their country."

"One of the instructions I received from my mother was that one should die with a smile," the Herald quoted Ozaki. "I always kept this in mind. I do not dread death, but would not like to die in a sick bed. I would like a death which may prove a lesson to posterity.

Hopes to be Slain in Diet.

"If anybody feels the necessity of assassinating me, I hope he will do so when I am making a vigorous speech on national policy in the diet."

Ozaki formerly was leader of the constitutional party. He served as mayor of Tokio before the world war.

In 1917 two men with drawn swords jumped on a platform on which Ozaki was making a speech demanding the resignation of the Japanese cabinet. They were overpowered before they were able to carry out their plan to assassinate him.

CHARLOTTE H. HUME AND JOHN MERRITT GET LICENSE TO WED

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Mrs. Charlotte Hanna Hume, 22 year old granddaughter of Mark Hanna, today obtained a license to marry John W. Merritt, 26, of Chevy Chase, Md. Heralded as the prettiest debutante in New York in 1927, Mrs. Hume, who is the daughter of Mrs. Stuart Hanna and the late Daniel Rhodes Hanna, eloped that year with Richard Hume of Washington. They came to live in the capital.

In 1931 Mrs. Hume announced that she was "in love with somebody else," and would divorce her husband. The trouble was patched up, the couple adopted a child and everything went smoothly until last winter, when they separated and Mrs. Hume went to Reno. In October she was granted a divorce on the grounds of cruelty.

Today's marriage license was to have been a secret. When the news leaked out, the prospective bride and groom declined to say when the marriage would take place.

Dr. Arthur F. Schuettler Gives Bond in Fraud Case

Dr. Arthur F. Schuettler, a son of the late Herman S. Schuettler, once chief of the Chicago police department, was released on bond of $1,000 at the detective bureau yesterday on a charge of operating a confidence game. Thomas J. Bargehr, 5524 Drexel avenue, charged that a year ago he gave Schuettler $250 for a part interest in a proposed medicine business and never heard from Schuettler again. Schuettler lives at 4720 North Sacramento avenue.

Christensen will lose pay for the thirty day period of his suspension.

STIMSON CALLS ARMY CHIEFS FOR ADVICE ON JAPAN

Administration Eyes New Attacks on China.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—Conditions in the far east, where Japan is rapidly expanding the area of its control in Manchuria and Jehol, was the subject of a protracted conference this morning between Secretary of State Stimson, Secretary of War Hurley, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, army chief of staff. Brig. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, a member of the Lytton commission which investigated Japanese activities in Manchuria, also participated.

Beyond the disclosure that the Manchurian situation was discussed, officials declined to comment on the conference. It was learned, however, that Secretary Stimson is now engaged in making a complete study of Japanese activities in Manchuria as well as of possible Japanese inroads into China proper. Since his return from New York, where he conferred with President Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt on foreign affairs, he has conferred with army and navy officials conversant with Japanese military movements.

Discuss Possible U. S. Action.

What steps this country would take to protect its citizens in event Japan moves on Peiping and Tientsin, where American marines and soldiers are maintained, is one of the questions before the secretary.

It is believed that the differences between Japan and the league of nations over whether the United States and Russia should be permitted to participate in the league's conciliation moves in Manchuria, was one of the matters discussed today.

Notwithstanding the fresh interest being taken by the secretary in the Manchurian situation, it seems certain that no new communication will be dispatched to Japan at this time. A majority of the cabinet is reported to be against any further American diplomatic move at this time.

Frown on Note Writing.

As the situation now stands, it is understood, there is little apparent administration sentiment in favor of any duplication of the Stimson note writing activities which marked the earlier penetration of Manchuria by Japan. The majority feeling seems to be that the best thing for this country to do is to keep a close watch on the situation and remain silent.

Secretary Stimson has shown anxiety to maintain the American position on nonrecognition of seized territory, but he has not disclosed publicly whether he favors any new additions to diplomatic correspondence on that point.

The Stimson theory has been that it would be possible to mobilize public opinion sufficiently to frustrate Japan's aims in Manchuria. Those in the administration opposed to this theory have taken the view that the United States should not take any steps in the far east which it is not prepared to back up.

Foresee Seizure of Jehol.

For several months the consensus of opinion among naval and army officers has been that Japan intended to seize Jehol and enough of inner Mongolia and neighboring territories to form a stiff defense against possible Russian attack at some later date, and to take over the Peiping-Tientsin area. Some have taken the view Japan intended to make Peiping the capital of the new Manchurian state.

Six Girls Are Accused on "Love Nest" Charges

San Pedro, Cal., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Four complaints charging statutory offenses against six Wilmington High school girls ranging in age from 13 to 15 years were issued today. Other girls are said to be involved. Juvenile officials said girls told of an asserted "love nest" where the girls were said to have met young men and high school boys.

INCOME TAX LAW AND DEMANDS ON YOU EXPLAINED

Below is the fourth of a series of ten concise articles on the income tax prepared for THE TRIBUNE. The articles explain provisions of the new income tax law, known as the revenue act of 1932, under which income tax returns are to be filed in March.

BY WILLIS NANCE.

Item 10 on form 1040 (large form) has been changed so as to separate the dividends received by the taxpayer on stocks of corporations into three groups: (a) dividends on stock of domestic corporations subject to taxation under the revenue act of 1932; (b) dividends on stock of domestic corporations not subject to tax; and (c) dividends on stock of foreign corporations.

Dividends received by most taxpayers will be returned under item 10 (a) or (c) as the ordinary domestic corporation is subject to tax. Only a limited number of special types of corporations, such as labor and agricultural organizations, building and loan associations, chambers of commerce and civic leagues, fraternal insurance associations, farmers' and fruit growers' associations, and the other organizations set out in section 103 of the 1932 act and owned and operated as required by the act, are exempt from tax. It is any dividends received from such organizations that are required to be listed in item 10 (b).

Item 32 on form 1040 provides a place to bring over to the front of the return the amount of capital net gain or loss shown in schedule D. The adjustment of 12½ per cent of such capital gain or loss should be shown under item 37.

Another new item on the return (large form) is item 21. Under this item is to be placed the "net loss" sustained by the taxpayer for 1931. A schedule must also be submitted with the return showing how the taxpayer arrives at his "net loss" for 1931.

The term "net loss" is purely a statutory conception and the "net loss" for 1931 must be determined in strict accordance with the provisions of the revenue act of 1928 and will be allowed as a deduction for 1932 only to the same extent and in the same manner as a "net loss" is allowed as a deduction under section 117 of the 1932 revenue act. In general, the "net loss" for 1931 which a taxpayer may use as a deduction in computing his net income for 1932 is the "net loss" incurred by him in the operation of a trade or business regularly carried on by him.

The changes heretofore mentioned constitute the major changes appearing on the individual income tax return forms (1040 and 1040A) for 1932.

JARECKI REPORTS $997,871 ELECTION SAVING IN 10 YRS.

A salvage of $49,137 in the 1932 appropriation of $775,543 to the board of election commissioners was reported yesterday by County Judge Jarecki, who is head of the county election machinery. The total salvage during the last ten years was given in the board's financial report as $997,871.

"The policy of conducting elections as economically as possible was not brought about by the city's recent financial distress," wrote Judge Jarecki in the report, "but was inaugurated and proclaimed on the day that we assumed office and responsibility for the conduct of elections and the things incident thereto. This policy has been maintained consistently throughout our connection with the election board."

During the ten year period, the board supervised 98 elections, canvasses, revisions, and primaries, as well as 64 vote contests and ballot recounts, the report said. The cost of elections is borne by the city in some years and by the county in others, although the city annual appropriates for the routine work and the permanent employes of the board.

INCOME TAX FOR 1932 LIKELY TO SET RECORD

Lowest Total for Years Expected.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Incomes which individuals and corporations earned in the calendar year 1932 will yield only about 622 million dollars of federal income taxes, probably the lowest total in the history of the American income tax, according to treasury department estimates and records made public today.

The decline in income taxes reflects decreases of between 44 to 47 per cent in the taxable incomes of the country from 1931 to 1932, according to treasury experts. They predict that 1932 will be found to have set a new post-war low for national net earnings.

Total income tax collections during the calendar year of 1932 based on 1931 earnings, amounted to 785 million dollars. Of that sum between 163 and 157 millions came from collections of back taxes. Only the remainder, about 622 or 628 million dollars came from 1931 incomes, official figures show.

Corporation Taxes Lower.

Corporations paid almost 60 per cent of the taxes collected in 1932, and the other 40 per cent came from individual incomes. The aggregate corporation tax is estimated at 372 millions and the individual aggregate at 250 millions. Corporation taxes have dwindled—they are only about one-third of what they were in the peak year of 1928. The decline in individual taxes has been even more drastic; in 1932 collections amounted to only about one-fifth of the 1928 total.

Fewer Large Incomes.

This reflects decline in the number of large incomes. For 1931, a preliminary survey showed that only 75 persons in the country had incomes of $1,000,000 or more, while in 1929 more than 500 persons had such incomes. The federal government's tax is designed to draw most of its yield from large incomes.

Behind the shrinkage in large incomes is a shifting in the relative importance of income sources. Wages and business are looming larger in the aggregate national income, while profits on speculative sales and on sales of capital assets are shrinking.

TWICE CONVICTED RAPIST SEIZED AS GIRL'S ATTACKER

Screams of Young Victim Arouse Neighborhood.

Peter Balla, 47 years old, who completed his second term in Joliet prison last July for rape, was captured yesterday by Policeman Oliver McCormick and Herman Grasser of the Chicago Lawn station a few minutes after he had attempted to attack an 11 year old girl.

Within an hour after his arrest three other girls living in the neighborhood of Archer and Mobile avenues identified Balla as the man who had recently taken indecent liberties with them.

Both of Balla's prison sentences were imposed for attack on young girls. Under his own name Balla was first convicted of rape on Dec. 11, 1916, and was sentenced to Joliet by Judge William V. Brothers. He was paroled on March 2, 1920.

Again Sent to Prison.

Less than a year later, on Feb. 10, 1921, he was arrested on a new charge of rape. He gave his name as Peter Bola and at the first court hearing the case was stricken off. Six days later the charge was re-instated and at the subsequent trial before Judge John J. Sullivan Balla was found guilty and again sentenced to prison.

He served the full term of 11 years and was discharged last July 27.

Since then, according to Capt. John Egan of the Chicago Lawn district, complaints from women and the parents of children in the district have steadily increased. A squad was detailed more than a month ago to capture the man described in the complaints, now believed to be Balla.

Special Showup Planned.

Capt. Egan last night notified more than a dozen persons, some of them women who have been molested and some the parents of small girls, to appear at the station for a special showup to be held today.

Balla was captured near the home of his brother-in-law, Peter Jaskowich, 5323 South Mobile avenue, as an angry crowds of residents in the neighborhood, aroused by the screams of his 11 year old victim, was surrounding him.

Balla fought arrest by Policemen McCormick and Brasser, inflicting injuries on Brasser's face for which treatment at the Southtown hospital was necessary.

INJURIES KILL WORKMAN.

Carl Olson, 50 years old, 56 West 109th place, a laborer, died last night in the St. Francis hospital, Evanston, of injuries incurred Friday in an accident at a building under construction in Glencoe.

U. S. JUDGE DENIES BAIL TO 5 GUILTY STONE OFFICIALS

Must Stay in Jail Here Pending Appeal.

Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward yesterday denied bail for five former officials of the defunct H. O. Stone and company real estate investment house, who have been sentenced to 20 years each in the penitentiary and fined $15,000 each on charges of using the mails to defraud.

The defendants, Henry F. Norcott, Harold D. Bennett, Charles P. Packer Jr., W. Scott Carroll, and Leslie A. Needham, have been in the county jail since their sentencing on Jan. 6. Unless they are granted bail by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals they must remain there at least four months pending appeal. Judge Woodward extended a stay of execution of the penitentiary mittimus for two weeks to permit an application for bail in the higher court, and counsel said this would be done tomorrow.

Cites Public Welfare.

In overruling the motion for bail, Judge Woodward read a memorandum holding that bail is not necessarily a right of a person after he has been convicted, the court having discretion in this matter.

"The public welfare in this case, in which a gigantic fraud has been perpetrated and thousands of innocent investors have been swindled, demands that punishment be executed without delay," said Judge Woodward.

Attorney Gerald T. Wiley, counsel for the defendants, said they were not gangsters or criminals who might go out and commit further crimes to raise money for appeal costs. As to the statement in the government's answer that one of the defendants was contemplating suicide in the event of bail, Attorney Wiley said: "You can't read people's minds."

A New Type of Criminal.

"These men are worse than gangsters," said Federal Prosecutor Joseph Struett. "They represent a new type of criminal. A robber who holds up a man merely takes what cash he carries with him, but these robbers took everything."

Government counsel, including Thomas Dodd Healy, then informed the court that mail fraud cases are not extraditable and read an opinion of the attorney general to this effect. They referred to the flights of Samuel and Martin Insull to Greece and Canada respectively, and said the Stone officials would flee rather than go to the penitentiary.

Motions for probation for David A. Coleman and Marshall W. George, two other former Stone officials, each under sentence of two years in the penitentiary, but at liberty in bond, were taken under advisement for two weeks.

FLYER CARRYING INDIAN PRISONER KILLED IN CRASH

THE PAS, Man., Jan. 14.—[U. P.]—A relief plane roared through a northland blizzard today carrying medical aid to a Canadian mounted police constable and two Indians, injured in an airplane crash that killed William A. Spence, one of Canada's leading pilots. News of the accident, which occurred during a forced landing near Moose lake, came to The Pas when Harold Wells mushed his dogs in from northern Manitoba to seek medical aid for the injured men.

They were Corporal Graves of the mounted police, an Indian prisoner he was bringing here and an Indian interpreter. All were said to have been hurt seriously when the plane Spence was piloting turned over after striking a fisherman's road cut through snow on the ice of Moose lake yesterday.

In the relief plane that took off in today's storm were Dr. N. G. Trimble of The Pas and Sergt. Percy Rose of the mounted police. S. J. McRorie, Canadian airways pilot, was at the stick. Pilot Spence was a verteran of air fighting during the world war and gained recognition when he participated in the aerial search in 1929 for the missing McAlpine party of prospectors. He was crushed to death when the engine tore loose and fell on him.

COAST GUARD OFFICER KILLS RIDING MASTER

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A 32 year old coast warrant officer, Harvey Parry, confessed today, police said, he shot to death Garnet Brotherton, 25, a riding master, employed by him, because of the younger man's attentions to Mrs. Parry.

Parry is the father of four children. Brotherton is the father of two. Parry, who recently opened a riding school, hired Brotherton to run it.

The shooting occurred in the riding master's furnished room on Staten Island last night. A few hours later Parry was arrested while driving aimlessly about Elizabeth, N. J. He was arraigned there as a fugitive from justice this morning, waived extradition, and was turned over to two Staten Island detectives. Parry was shot seven times.

CAN'T SEND ME TO JAIL, HE TELLS JUDGE; HE'S RIGHT—HERE'S WHY

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 14.—For the moment, things looked pretty complicated for Magistrate John A. Meyer. James S. Harris had been brought before him for parking a truck in a prohibited zone.

"It'll be $2.45," said the magistrate.

"But I haven't got $2.45," said Harris.

"Then you'll have to go to jail," responded Meyer.

"But I am in jail," came the reply.

It developed that Harris was serving two years in the Maryland state penitentiary for burglary and even then was in court under supervision of a guard. He was arrested when he left a penitentiary truck in the street while he delivered supplies to the parole commissioner's office.

Warden Patrick Brady, who was consulted by telephone, partially disposed of the problem by promising to settle the fine and Harris did the rest.

"If he won't pay it," he promised, "I'll try to raise it myself."

POLAND ARRESTS G. P. U. SPY ON TRAIN TO MOSCOW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, Poland, Jan. 14.—The suspicion that foreign businessmen and engineers residing in Russia are constantly under the Gay Pay Ou [secret police] control, as well as when traveling abroad, was confirmed today by the arrest at the Warsaw railway terminal of the notorious Polish communist, Wladyslaw Stein, who for many years eluded Polish authorities by flight to Russia.

Using a forged German passport with the name of Paul Schiller, an engineer, Stein joined a group of foreign engineers returning to Moscow from vacations, and listened to their conversations.

He was arrested, and detectives on searching him, discovered incriminating documents confirming Stein's participation in the Gay Pay Ou. Letters addressed to foreign communists, a large sum of money and notes relating to the engineers' discussions of soviet conditions, were found on his person. Several engineers, learning of Stein's identity, decided not to return to Russia.

KARL EITEL ASSAILS INFLATION PROPOSALS; POINTS TO GERMANY

Proposals for inflation of the currency were attacked yesterday by Karl Eitel of the Bismarck hotel. Mr. Eitel recalled a visit he and his family made to Germany in 1923 during the height of the inflation of the German mark.

He said that one night it cost him 450 billions of marks for two theater tickets, 20 billions to tip the bellboy, and 50 billions to the hotel management as a commission. The mark in normal times amounted to about 24 cents in American money. He asserted that during the period of inflation German bank statements were written in astronomical figures.

"When the rare wines of the king of Wurtemburg were to be sold," said Mr. Eitel, "the admission to the auction was announced as 10,000 marks. The mark dropped so fast that when the sale started the admission was 100,000 marks." He added that he bought 100 bottles of wine at 200,000 marks each for his father, Emil, 92 years old, who is living in Stuttgart, Germany.

The inflation worked untold hardships on German laborers and property owners, according to Mr. Eitel. He said that even if a landlord tripled or quadrupled his rents the lessee would still be ahead because of the rapidity with which the mark fell. Laborers' pay checks dwindled in value and wage scales were constantly being adjusted, he declared.

American Girl Writes of Her Adventures.

Soldiers Posted in Trees.

We wanted badly to be glad we were at last in soviet Russia, the workers' paradise, but passing through a narrow gate with electrified barbed wire on all sides and Red army soldiers posted in trees, and with drawn bayonets facing us, we began to feel that the worst was still to come.

While our papers were being examined the Moscow-Paris express train passed by. One young American, a passenger, shouted to us: "Take it easy." We puzzled over his meaning and finally concluded he meant the roads were terrible. The papers were all right, but we still had to go through the customs at Negereloye.

The First Soviet Trick.

The Russian embassy in Warsaw had wired the border to give us a guardian angel to accompany us there and on to Minsk. This angel was a GPU man who—it was said—spoke no foreign language. Mary L. and I are willing to wager he spoke English better than most university graduates in America. He listened attentively to every word we said. Later we learned a great deal more about this little trick of the soviets.

With our GPU man we started out. Roads, which is too optimistic a word to describe them, meandered in all directions. Lanes of gummy black mud, they wandered across fields and through streams. It took us a terribly long hour to get to Negereloye and we secretly hoped we wouldn't find the customs station.

Smuggle In 200 Rubles.

But we did. Officers came out to inspect us. They took one long look into the back of Beckie and were defeated by the size of the pile of baggage. Only two suitcases were carelessly examined. So far so good.

But I didn't feel right yet. In my hip pockets were a Browning pistol and 200 rubles. A former Intourist traveler had told us about the difference in value of dollars traded to the government and traded on a business basis. Under one kind of trading a bottle of mineral water in Russia would cost $2; under the other it would be 7 cents.

Demand $600 Deposit on Car.

As for the pistol, we had been advised by an attaché of the soviet legation in Warsaw to smuggle it in. Of course, if we had been caught we might be languishing now in a Siberian prison. Any way you look at it, I felt guilty about the weapon and the soviet money as the customs inspection continued.

The customs men had been told three or four days earlier about our coming with a car. However, it seemed that no course of action had been decided on. The question was: what to do with the car? Eight men sat down and held a long conference. They finally agreed that we would have to pay $600 duty, to be regarded as a deposit. Then they held another conference, a longer one. We were told the money must be in valuta [American dollars].

We had in American money only $66, although we had also declared $2,000 in American Express checks. We told the eight men they would have to take checks. After another long session of hemming and hawing and arguing it was agreed that checks would be taken.

While Mary L. signed them, I was ushered into a room with only a woman. I felt that my fate was sealed, that the outline of the pistol must be plain and that I would be searched. I sat down and tried to be nonchalant. When a couple of men drifted in I offered them tailor made cigarets a friend had given us in Warsaw. We had heard Russians would do almost anything for the American kind.

An Error in English.

The woman made no attempt to search me. I kept on being nonchalant, although those sharp edges on the pistol in the hip pocket were getting quite painful. Soon Mary L., having finished the financial operation with the customs, also was brought in. Next followed a man who thought he spoke English, whose duty it was to interrogate us.

"You have a gun," was the first thing he said, accusingly.

"What?"

He repeated the sentence. I recovered enough to understand that the man knew hardly any English and thought he was asking a question. Both of us relaxed and Mary replied:

"Goodness, no! We wouldn't know what to do with one."

Their First Meal.

The day was saved then. But we had wasted five and a half hours of it in the customs. We were released and had our first food in Russia. Our meal in the station buffet consisted of brownish white rolls and weak tea.

We were utterly exhausted by our first encounter with red tape. We were discouraged. Lack of knowledge of the language almost broke our morale. The two or three words of Russian we had learned in New York had been forgotten. We couldn't have made any sentences if we had remembered them.

Still we whipped up our determination and resolved to go on to Minsk, where the Polish consul had been asked to give us any assistance we needed.

It was 7 o'clock in the evening when we were all set to push ahead. The express from Berlin had pulled into the station, stayed a short time, and passed on. Two pathetic American girls, standing by their lonely flivver, waved a forlorn farewell to that train.

COMPLETE SHIP TO BE USED AS AIR STATION IN OCEAN

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Tageblatt announced today the practical completion of the liner Westfalen, which has been reconstructed for use as a floating air station in the mid-Atlantic to facilitate regular air mail service between South America and Europe.

The ship will be given trial trips soon in the North Sea, at which time catapult and other tests will be made. The remodeling has been done at Bremerhaven. The Tageblatt says engineers are confident that regular air mail service linking Europe, Africa and South America can be established this year.

The North German Lloyd company has announced that the Westfalen, a liner of 5,124 gross tons built in 1906, will be permanently stationed midway between Bathurst, British Gambia, or a nearby point on the African coast, and Fernando do Noronha, an island off Brazil.

CULT OF NUDITY STIRS HONOLULU; 4 COUPLES ARRESTED ON BEACH

HONOLULU, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The cult of nudity became an absorbing topic of conversation in Honolulu today following the arrest of four couples on Kailua beach minus clothing and the announcement of Johan Von Schmaltzumberg in a letter to a newspaper that he was starting a nudist colony at Kaena point.

Arrests made Thursday night after one newspaper described midnight parties at Kailua park, across Oahu island from Honolulu, and editorially demanded police action, were followed by an assignment of a police patrol to the beach section there.

Believe Newberry Was Slain for Betraying Drug Peddlers

The theory that Ted Newberry was killed for betraying the secrets of the narcotic traffic to federal agents was advanced yesterday following a further checkup of the slain gangster's list of coded telephone numbers.

Among the numbers on the list, it was learned, were those of Ralph H. Oyler, chief federal narcotic inspector in this district, and Jack Wall, drug addict and reputed federal informer. Wall's number was given as Diversey 9630, the Casa Nova cafe at 456 Wrightwood avenue.

Inspector Oyler said he was unable to explain how his number was included on Newberry's list. He knew the gangster only by general reputation, he said. The inspector recalled Wall as a drug addict, who had been indicted for peddling drugs. The suggestion was advanced that Newberry might have provided information to Wall, who relayed it to the government agents, and was therefore killed.

Other Names on List.

Among other names on his code list, it was learned, were Al Brigar, Lakeview 7010; Amy Dunn, 5128 South Union avenue; Tom Tulett, Yards 4360, described as a west side gambler, and George Reedy, Longbeach 5353.

On information that Newberry had shared a safety deposit box with Edward B. Liedensberger, described as a north side gambler, Chief of Detectives Shoemaker sent his men to Liebensberger's establishment at 225 East Superior street yesterday but were informed that he was out of town.

Following the discovery of Newberry's body on a country road in northern Indiana on Jan. 7, Liebensberger, according to the police, went to the safety box he and Newberry shared in the Capitol building, 159 North State street, and removed its contents. When police opened the box later with a key found on Newberry's body they found it empty.

Due to Be Indicted.

It was learned in the federal building yesterday that Newberry was due for indictment for violating the income tax laws within the next fortnight. Internal revenue agents had completed a case against him and were ready to begin grand jury proceedings when his murderers forestalled them, it was said.

Sam Hunt, golf bag gunman, and Ralph Pierce, bodyguard for Murray Humphries, underworld chieftain, who were seen motoring in northern Indiana shortly after Newberry's death, won a continuance to Jan. 27 yesterday when arraigned before Judge Frank M. Padden in State Street court. They are charged with disorderly conduct and possession of concealed weapons.

The record of continuances granted Humphries and William J. [Three Finger Jack] White on charges of carrying concealed weapons was revealed yesterday. Their case comes up next before Judge Harold P. O'Connell on Jan. 25.

Starts on Nov. 7.

The record is as follows: Arraigned Nov. 7, 1932, before Judge Padden; continued on motion of state to Nov. 21; on Nov. 21, continued to Nov. 23, motion of state; on Nov. 23, continued to Dec. 19, motion of state; on Dec. 19, motion for jury trail by defense; set for hearing Jan. 3; on Jan. 3, motion for change of venue from Judge Padden by defense; case assigned to Judge O'Connell and set for Jan. 5; on Jan. 5, continued to Jan. 11 on motion of defense because of illness of Defense Attorney W. W. Smith; on Jan. 11, continued to Jan. 25 on motion of defense, same reason.

Frankie [North Side] Pope was arrested last night in the quarters above the cigar store of his brother, Ben, at 3214 Sheffild avenue, and taken to the detective bureau. Police refused to explain Pope's arrest, but it was reported that he might be questioned about the murder of Newberry. Pope is listed in police records as a gambler.

A poolroom at 602 South State street was raided by police yesterday and seventeen men were arrested. Five of them had criminal records and the others were youths under 21 years of age.

Do You Shop for the Pleasure of Shopping?

FIFTY years ago A & P had many customers who loved to shop around for shopping's sake. It was their outing for the day, their chance to get around, their opportunity to meet a friend in this store and another friend in that.

But times have changed. The woman of today has more interesting things to do than to track down foods and friends in scattered grocery stores.

Because we believe women have better ways of spending their time than in hunting up one street and down another for the food they want, we keep A & P stores stocked with all the foods modern women need. And they can do their shopping as well as their visiting under one roof.

For in collecting the modern woman's own particular foods together in one place, we have also collected her friends. Thus simplifying the business and multiplying the pleasures of shopping.

REVEAL ESTATE DEMANDS MADE BY MRS. BUSBY

Asks the Replacement of $507,344 Net Assets.

Disclosure of the full text of a secret petition filed in the Probate court by Mrs. Esther Busby last Dec. 29 revealed yesterday that she demands the replacement in the estate of her husband, Leonard A. Busby, of $1,407,344 in assets. The estate of Mr. Busby, late Surface Lines executive, is now insolvent, according to the petition.

[Paul Stone-Raymor Photo.]

It was pointed out that the $1,407,344 represents the gross value of the assets sought by Mrs. Busby. From this amount debts of approximately $900,000 must be deducted. Thus Mrs. Busby demands the replacing of net assets of $507,344 which she alleges were lost to the estate because the executor failed to sell speculative securities from the estate while their market values were high.

Estate $150,000 in Debt.

The petition asks that the present executor, the First Union Trust and Savings bank, be removed by court order. It declares that net assets of $690,911 on hand at the time of Mr. Busby's death on Sept. 9, 1930, have declined until the estate actually is insolvent to the extent of $150,000.

This condition was brought about, the petition says, because the executor failed to sell, after Mr. Busby's death, a group of securities which were posted as collateral on debts with brokerage houses and banks. The debts at that time totaled $946,433, and the market value of the securities pledged as collateral was $1,448,216, according to Mrs. Busby's petition.

The petition alleges that the executor "negligently and improvidently" failed to follow the advice of its own investment committee, but let the securities remain unsold until their value had diminished to the point where their sale would have meant a substantial loss.

Table of Assets Given.

The petition includes a tabulation showing the pledged and unpledged assets in Mr. Busby's estate on the day of his death, the banks and brokerage houses with which the pledged assets had been placed as collateral on debts, the amount of the debts, and the net value of the securities over and above the debts. The tabulation follows:

UNPLEDGED ASSETS.

Cash	$ 16,195
Income	13,000
Life insurance	10,000
Unpledged securities	149,932
Total	$189,128

PLEDGED ASSETS.

	Market value.	Debt.	Net value.
Thomson & McKinnon	$ 510,351	$324,832	$185,518
Babcock, Rushton & Co.	467,889	336,221	131,668
National Bank of Republic	295,062	182,507	112,555
Northern Trust company	119,867	75,000	44,867
First National bank	45,876	27,872	18,002
Iron Mountain bank, Ironton, Mo.	*9,170	....	9,170
Totals	$1,448,216	$946,433	$501,783

*Pledged as a guarantee.

The attorneys representing Mrs. Busby are Anan Raymond and Edward R. Johnston. They explained that Mr. Busby carried more than $10,000 in life insurance, but only $10,000 of it was payable to the estate.

Charges Sale Recommended.

Mrs. Busby's petition says that the executor was fully aware of the "precarious condition of the estate" at the time of Mr. Busby's death. The investment committee, the bill asserts, recommended the immediate sale of the securities and liquidation of the debts outstanding. On Oct. 7, 1930, a month after Mr. Busby's death, the petition says, $173,614 worth of the securities were sold. This, it is alleged, was the only effort at liquidation.

By May 16, 1931, the petition asserts, the collateral pledged to the Northern Trust company had depreciated until it was worth $38,807 less than the debt of the estate to this bank. This balance was paid by the executor, who then assumed the note given the Northern Trust by Mr. Busby and took over the collateral, the petition says. On June 3, 1931, the petition states, a similar transaction was completed with the National Bank of the Republic.

Tells of Loan Negotiation.

Soon afterward, the petition declares, the executor negotiated a loan with the First National bank, turning over the Babcock, Rushton & Co. collateral and note and the Thomson & McKinnon collateral and note in return for a note for $523,000. The petition says that the First National bank is a business affiliate of the First Union Trust and Savings bank.

"By means of the loan," it declares, "the executor unlawfully converted to its own use the assets of the estate. The loan actually is not binding on the estate, but the executor is liable for the market value of the securities as of Sept. 30, 1930 (the date of Mr. Busby's death)."

The loan, the petition charges further, never was authorized by court action, and actually was outside the powers of the executor. After making the loan, the petition says, the executor purchased a group of new securities in an effort to rehabilitate the estate. These securities also declined until the deficit of $150,000 existed, the petition asserts.

GREECE MAKES DEBT PAYMENT AFTER DEFAULT

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Greece, the first foreign nation to default on her debt to the United States, has made a 30 per cent payment on her defaulted installment, Secretary of the Treasury Mills announced today.

The Greek payment, the first advance received from any defaulting nation, brought the American war debt collections for the current fiscal year up to $98,751,286. It cuts the amount of defaulted payments down to $25,376,055.

To date America has been able to collect only 70 per cent of the war debts which have come due in this fiscal year, treasury records show. Beside the $25,376,000 which is still in default $17,993,556 has been postponed under the terms of the war debt funding agreements between the Unitd States and the debtor governments.

The Greek payment was received Jan. 7 and amounted to $65,376, or 30 per cent of the $217,920 interest payment on which Greece defaulted on Nov. 10, Secretary Mills said.

FIND BANK GUILTY OF MISMANAGING $6,000,000 FUND

Removal of Trustee and Accounting Ordered.

Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel yesterday returned a decision finding the Foreman State Trust and Savings bank now defunct guilty of malfeasance as trustee of a $6,000,000 investment trust. He ordered the bank removed as trustee and also ordered the bank and A. G. Becker and company, brokers, also defendants, to make an accounting of funds which approximate $800,000.

The plaintiffs in the suit were eight men and women who were purchasers of notes against the investment trust created by the Becker company. They sought the removal of the trustee, and the return of certain funds allegedly transferred to the bank from the trust for securities which have since declined sharply in value.

Charge Excessive Commissions.

They charged that securities were purchased by the bank for less than par values and then resold to the investment trust at par. Thus, the plaintiffs charged, the bank was able to extract excessive commissions while conducting its trust business.

In a verbal opinion Judge Gentzel said: "The court finds that the Foreman State Trust and Savings bank has disqualified itself as trustee by selling its own securities to the investment trust. Thus the bank was dealing with itself as trustee.

"The evidence shows that the accounts of the transactions were entered on the books of the bank rather than on those of the trustee. This was done, it appears, to prevent the fact that the securities actually were bought by the trustee from showing on the trust books."

Issue Notes Against Principal.

The trust was created by the Becker brokerage concern on Aug. 1, 1927. Notes were issued against the trust principal which was to consist of income bearing securities, and sold by the brokerage concern. When the Foreman banks were consolidated with the First National bank in June, 1931, the First Union Trust and Savings bank, a First National affiliate took control of the trust department of the Foreman Savings bank.

Judge Gentzel held that the acts of malfeasance were committed before the First Union Trust and Savings bank was given control of the Foreman trust department. He said, however: "The control which the Foreman bank granted to the Union bank constitutes a violation of Illinois law which holds that no trustee has the right to delegate his powers or rights.

Fails to Consult Beneficiaries.

"This the Foreman trust department did, and automatically disqualified itself by the action. In effect the bank granted its trusteeships to the Union bank, without consulting the trust beneficiaries."

Judge Gentzel announced that he wished to inform Attorney Oscar Wolf, counsel for the note holders, of the exact terms of the final decree. He stated that he would hold a court session on Monday afternoon at which the decree will be formally drawn.

GEO. KAFANDARIS WILL FORM NEW GREEK CABINET

ATHENS, Jan. 14.—(AP)—George Kafandaris, leader of the progressives and premier in 1924, will form a coalition cabinet, including former foreign minister, Andrew Michalakopoulos, former Premier Alexander Papanastasiou and several prominent Venizelists. Kafandaris is the most prominent financier among Greece's politicians. The new cabinet will take the oath Monday. Political commentators said the solution of the ministerial crisis was the best in the circumstances, as a coalition of all parties was impossible.

CRUSADE TO STIR CHURCH GOING SPIRIT IN CITY

800 Groups of 19 Denominations Aid Drive.

A city-wide crusade to "instill a church going spirit in 500,000 inactive church members and nonchurch members" will be launched tomorrow when ministers, church executives, and staff workers meet in the Chicago Temple, it was announced yesterday.

Eight hundred churches of nineteen denominations represented in the Chicago church federation will take part in the crusade, which will continue until Easter, April 16.

Lutherans May Join.

Several other denominations, including the Lutheran and Episcopal, have indicated they are considering joining in the movement, it was announced by the federation.

Among the pastors who will outline a program for the proposed season of "intensified church activity" tomorrow at the Chicago temple are the Rev. Robert Clements, president Chicago church federation; Bishop Ernest L. Waldorf, Methodist Episcopal church; the Rev. Joshua Oden, chairman of evangelism Chicago Lutheran council; the Rev. Henry S. Brown, general superintendent Presbyterian church extension board; and the Rev. Ernest G. Guthrie, general director Chicago Congregational union.

Seek to Help Finances.

According to a statement issued by the Chicago Church federation, three major objectives in the crusade were described as:

"1. A genuine spiritual awakening of the present church membership.

"2. A rehabilitation of church finances, helping each church to meet its economic problem.

"3. The winning of unreached masses outside the church for Christ."

With the Century of Progress exposition bringing hundreds of thousands of visitors to the city, the churches of Chicago, according to the statement, "are organizing to meet the challenging necessity of presenting the Christian gospel to the transient multitudes who will carry with them to all parts of the world their impressions orf Chicago."

Dowey Leads Campaign.

The Rev. George G. Dowey of the Home Missions council, which comprises the home missions' boards of 28 denominations in the United States, was appointed by the commission on evangelism of the Chicago Church federation to lead the campaign, which is called "a united church loyalty crusade."

"This movement differs greatly from the old line evangelistic campaigns," the statement issued by the church federation said, in that "the crusade program is church centered."

Following the pastors' meeting tomorrow more than 20,000 workers will be trained to take part in the crusade.

BODY FOUND IN TREE AT NILES; SUSPECT MURDER

Carl Fisher, a Lake county rabbit breeder, was driving along Waukegan road between Oakton and Howard streets, in an unsettled section of Niles, yesterday when he glanced up at an elm tree and saw a man hanging by the neck from a limb, with his hands thrust in his trouser pockets.

Fisher notified the highway and Niles police, who identified the man by insurance papers in his pocket as Stanislaw Kubala, 52 years old, a machinist, of 933 North Mozart street. Although no marks of violence were apparent, the police concluded he had been murdered and strung up after death.

On his clothing were weed burs of a kind not found within a mile of the spot. At the base of the tree were fresh tire marks. The body was taken to Park Ridge for an autopsy to determine the cause of death.

WHITING LEADER GIVES BAIL.

John A. Tokarz, city collector of Whiting and a leader in Lake county, Ind., politics, who was arrested by federal dry agents Friday night in a raid on his home, was freed yesterday on a bond of $2,000. A hearing was set for Jan. 20 before David Rosenthal, East Chicago justice of the peace.

POLICE REPORT 31% DECREASE IN AUTO THEFTS

Automobile thefts in December decreased 31 per cent as compared to the number of cars stolen last July, according to figures given to Mayor Cermak yesterday by the police department. The figures show also that the percentage of stolen cars that are recovered has steadily increased since last summer. Six months' figures on the number of cars stolen and recovered and the percentage of recoveries follow:

	Stolen.	Recovered.	Per cent recovered.
July	3,266	2,729	83.6
August	3,558	2,990	84.0
September	2,915	2,606	89.3
October	3,062	2,767	90.3
November	2,738	2,582	94.3
December	2,231	2,171	97.3

"I ascribe the marked improvement to greater police activity and more efficiency in the stolen auto bureau under Acting Captain Philip Parodi," said the mayor. "Also the revocation of licenses of second hand dealers in automobile parts who have been found guilty of receiving stolen property has served as an effective method in reducing the number of so-called 'fences,' where thieves and strippers could sell their wares."

It was also mentioned that seasonal changes might have had some part in cutting down the activities of the automobile thieves. Fewer cars, it was remarked, are left out in the winter than in the summer.

W. R. Folsom Will Give Historical Lecture Today

Attorney William R. Folsom, a director of the Chicago Historical society, will be the speaker at the second of the society's winter lecture series this afternoon at 3 a'clock. His address will be given in the society's building in Lincoln park at Clark street and North avenue. It will be illustrated with lantern slides and will be a discussion of the Revolutionary war, with special reference to the naval control of Lake Champlain.

Canton, Ill., Couple Marks 65 Years of Wedded Life

Canton, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Strube will celebrate the 65th anniversary of their marriage Monday. Mr. Strube is 93 and his wife is 89.

20 Cases of Liquor

Policeman Lambert Barsema and Harry Mau of Oak Park yesterday captured two suspected Chicago bootleggers after an automobile chase through Oak Park and into Chicago. The policemen fired eight shots, all of which struck the fugitive car. The suspects surrendered in front of 2019 North Neva avenue. Twenty cases of whisky were found in their car. They gave their names and addresses as Thomas J. Wilson, 31 years old, 4585 Elston avenue, and Charles A. Carter, 28 years old, 4519 North Racine avenue.

CHAMPION AUTO THIEF OF CITY IS HELD TO JURY

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Automobiles stolen, 64; recovered, 105; stripped, 19 (from Chicago police records for the 24 hour period ending at midnight Friday).

Court action: Steve Garbociak, Joseph O'Gara, Jack Gains, Harry Rakowski, and Frank Tracy, larceny of an automobile, each held to the grand jury; Louis Schrader, attempted larceny, held to the grand jury; Joseph Giviazdowski, larceny, given probation; all by Judge O'Connell. Max Golden, charged with stealing gasoline, and Charles Lupoe, with having fictitious license plates, each fined $5 by Judge Gutknecht.

Raymond Ramazini, 16 years old, considered by police as the "champion automobile thief of Chicago," was held to the grand jury yesterday on four charges of automobile larceny by Judge Mary Bartelme in the Juvenile court. Ramazini has been committed to St. Charles reformatory three times for stealing automobiles and has escaped each time.

He was arrested at his home, 1830 West Chicago avenue, shortly after his last escape by Detective Edward Palzynski. He told the detective he had stolen four cars after reaching the city. Police believe Ramazini has stolen more than 200 cars. Judge Bartelme held him in bonds totaling $6,000.

YEAR OF PRAYER WILL DO WORLD GOOD, SAYS POPE

Will Issue Papal Bull for Event Today.

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The year of prayer will do a great deal of good to humanity, Pope Pius said tonight in receiving the executive committee for the holy year in the throne room. A papal bull for the promulgation of the Holy year beginning April 2 will be issued by the pontiff tomorrow.

A wider extension of spiritual practices that the Holy year will bring, Pope Pius told the committee, will lead to many benefits for mankind.

"More Hope in Spiritual Things."

The world is placing more hope in spiritual things, he added, "and it will be good to see mankind at the foot of the cross.

"'Jesus Christ, we worship and bless thee because on the cross thou has redeemed the world.'"

The committee for the Holy year, headed by Augusto Ciriaci, director of the Vatican publishing plant, includes also Msgr. Francesco Marchetti-Selvaggiani, and Marquis Serafini, governor of Vatican City.

THE PAPAL BULL.

In issuing a papal bull for the promulgation of the Holy year beginning April 2 Pope Pius once more has made use of the most important document of the Roman Catholic church, around which a vast amount of history and legend has grown.

The bull for the Holy year, to be promulgated Jan. 15, adds another to the tens of thousands issued in the 1,900 years of the church's history. In the early days of the church these documents were used to convey every pontifical decision. Later they were restricted to the most important pronouncements.

The present bull follows a form established for hundreds of years. In it the pontiff calls himself in Latin, "Episcopus, Servus Servorum Dei"—"Bishop, Servant of the Servants of God."

Written on Sheet of Vellum.

In contrast with the vast majority of papal bulls, it is readable by the ordinary reader who understands Latin. It is written in a clear Roman hand on a sheet of vellum.

Until fifty years ago the engrossers of papal bulls used an archaic, highly artificial type of Gothic writing known as "Scrittura bollatica," employing many contractions and completely leaving out punctuation. Consequently these documents were equivalent to ciphers for the average reader. In fact, the bulls were customarily accompanied by a copy, called a "transumptum," in ordinary handwriting. Pope Leo XIII. ended this practice.

The papal bull announcing this Holy year bears a stamp as a seal. In olden times these papers carried a heavy lead seal, later a wax one.

BANK RECEIVERS' PAY TIED UP BY ORDER FOR ECONOMY QUIZ

About 2,000 employés of closed banks received no pay yesterday because of a letter sent more than 400 receivers directing them not to pay salaries to themselves or their employés until it had been decided whether expenses of liquidating the banks could be reduced. The only payments besides expenses, which will be made at present are dividends which will be made when they have been approved by State Auditor Barrett's office.

The letters authorized the receivers to pay light, gas, and similar bills, including taxes, but to refrain from paying masters' fees, their own salaries, and the salaries of persons employed by them. They were directed to send data on their employés to Mr. Barrett, presumably for a check upon the amounts being paid them, and were told that further orders would follow.

"I want to make as large payments of dividends to the depositors of these closed banks as are possible," said Mr. Barrett last night. "It is hoped that we will be able to make reductions in the cost of liquidating the institutions and that prompted the request for data on receivers' and their employés' salaries. We will approve payment when we are convinced expenses listed by the receivers are necessary."

Division Street Bridge Will Be Closed for Repairs

The Division street bridge across the Ogden canal will be closed to vehicles on Tuesday for a period of three months, Thomas G. Philfeldt, city bridge engineer, announced yesterday. The closing of the span is necessary, he said, to permit the reconstruction of the bridge floor and a general reinforcement of the structure.

ORDERS HALT TO FORECLOSURE SALES IN IOWA

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—L. A. Andrew, state superintendent of banking, announced tonight that receivers of the 348 closed state banks in Iowa have been ordered to hold no more farm real estate or chattel mortgage foreclosure sales and to postpone those which have already been scheduled.

The order is to prevail, he said, until real estate and chattel prices are higher. This order, Mr. Andrew said, does not apply to cases in which holders of second mortgages foreclose on debtors or in which property securing the mortgage is being dissipated.

Receivers of closed banks, Mr. Andrew said, have been holding few public foreclosure sales, preferring to effect settlements with farm debtors. It is the plan of the banking department, he said, to set a precedent for other mortgage holding agencies in the state.

Farmers Balk Sheriff's Sale.

Logan, Ia., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Four hundred farmers, milling about the courthouse here today, succeeded in stopping a sheriff's sale on the 160 acre farm of Ernest Ganzhorn, near Woodbine.

The sale was called to satisfy a $4,237 judgment held against the farm by Fred D. Wead, Congressman H. Malcolm Baldridge, both of Omaha, Neb., and others. They had submitted a bid of $3,000, which would have left a deficiency judgment.

Hearing of this, the farmers sent a committee to see Sheriff C F. Cross and the sheriff agreed to send the execution back to the court unsatisfied.

Ganzhorn is now working in an Omaha auto parking station.

MAN'S BODY TAKEN FROM LAKE.

The body of a man, about 45 years old, was taken from the lake yesterday off Grant park at the foot of Jackson boulevard by police of the Central station.

WEBER REVEALS EXCESS PAY IN IDLE SHELTERS

Bares New Evidence of Pay Roll Padding.

Examination of pay rolls of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission disclosed new evidences of pay roll padding yesterday, according to County Commissioner Charles Weber. He asserted unauthorized jobs have been created in the shelters for idle men and that positions have been given to several members of the same families in violation of the commission's rule to grant relief jobs to only one member of any family.

At the Clearing House for Men operated by Robert W. Beasley, Weber, who is investigating expenditures in the shelter houses, discovered that 10 jobs of a type not specified in the regulations of the emergency relief commission were held by 40 men who draw total monthly pay checks of $2,000. On the same pay rolls, he said, he found 12 cases where two, or even three, members of one family all held jobs.

Finds Excess Salaries Paid.

The commissioner also charged that salaries far in excess of those authorized by the relief commission are being paid to relief workers of all types. Among those receiving the highest salaries were Beasley and his assistant, R. C. Jacobson, who is designated as a building superintendent. Each receives $250 a month. The standardized salaries of the relief commission authorize the payment of only $200 a month to directors or superintendents of shelters.

Dozens of clerks receiving salaries ranging from $100 to $120 should not be receiving pay in excess of $90 a month, and case workers whose salaries should average $120 a month, were receiving from $135 to $150 a month, the commissioner said.

Call on Idle for Help.

A joint committee of the county board and of the relief commission met yesterday and agreed that all employés other than professional social service workers will be recruited from the ranks of the idle in the future.

The committee also recommended that no case worker be given more than 250 families to handle. Case aids, whose salaries will be paid on the basis of the commission's family budget from actual relief money, will be appointed to aid the case workers.

WILMETTE WIFE, ILL, ENDS HER LIFE IN LAKE

Mrs. Edna W. Brooks, 32 years old, of Wilmette, wife of H. F. Brooks, office manager of W. H. Miner, Inc., railroad supply concern at 209 South La Salle street, drowned herself in the lake yesterday off the Maple street beach, Winnetka.

Her body was recovered by coast guards under Capt. John Janssens of the Wilmette station after her fur coat and shoes had been found on the beach pier. In one of the shoes was a note which said: "I am Mrs. H. F. Brooks. Notify my husband, Central 0110."

The husband, who was summoned from his office, told police his wife had disappeared Friday morning from the Illinois Research hospital, where she had been under treatment for melancholia. Until his wife became ill they had lived at 419 Prairie avenue, Wilmette. Since then Mr. Brooks has been living at the Shawnee Country club, he said.

TRADES' DIVISION FIXES GOAL FOR WELFARE DRIVE

The trades' and industries' division of the Emergency Welfare fund announced yesterday that it would make an effort to obtain enough additional contributions to raise the fund from the present total of $4,500,000 to $5,000,000. When the latter sum is reached the division will end its solicitation of business firms.

Robert A. Gardner, general chairman, said that a plan to raise the remainder of the $7,500,000 fund for the city's private charities, is being perfected to take up the campaign where the trades' and industries' division leaves off.

Yesterday's contributions included $13,520 from the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad employés; $12,800 from the Chicago Surface lines employés; $12,561 [additional] from Chicago packing firms; $6,007 from the wholesale employés and $4,528 from the retail employés of Marshall Field & Co.

Dine in an environment that even before you are served, convinces you that here is excellence extraordinary. Charm, gentility exquisite good taste. Quiet, restfulness—meticulous and alert service. Menus that provide a varied selection—food of extra fine quality—and skillful preparation. In short, a lovely room to dine in, such as one would expect to find in the hotel-home catering to so many of Chicago's most distinguished people. Yet prices are invitingly moderate.

BEVERLY HILLS CHILDREN HELP HUNGRY PUPILS

Raise $10 Through Home Movie Shows.

Two little girls in Beverly Hills put their heads together recently and made some ambitious plans to help the Hungry School Children's fund. Yesterday they realized $10, and, more than that, 50 other Beverly Hills children had a good time helping.

The children were Mary Frances Reed, 7 year old daughter of the George Reeds at 2122 Hopkins place, and Jo Ellen Murdock, her playmate. Yesterday they gave two motion picture shows at the Reed home, one in the morning for small children and another in the afternoon for the older ones.

Tickets had been printed especially for the occasion. The children's contribution will help provide the milk that will be served the needy youngsters at the lunch hour in the public schools.

The children of the Avalon park playground gave an entertainment and show and raised $4 for the fund, and Girl Scout Troop No. 195 sent $5.50. The gifts for the day are acknowledged as follows:

$31—Ber-West Bridge club.
$20—J. Smith, Anonymous, A Friend.

LOST OR STOLEN! CONSTITUTION OF CUBAN REPUBLIC

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 14.—The original document of Cuba's constitution, which set the republic in operation on May 20, 1902, is lost or stolen and today police, soldiers, government officials, governors, and mayors launched a nation-wide search to find it. Secretary of Interior Zubizarreta expressed the belief that it was stolen by guardians and sold abroad as a relic.

Congress met in special session and ordered a search of all government and private museums as well as archives and offices, and Washington has been asked to hunt for it in the United States. The document was last seen in 1923 in the desk of Santiago Verdeja, then president of the senate. The desk was later occupied by Representative Enrique Villuendas who was killed in the Santa Clara political riots of 1924.

HURLS BOY OF 10 6 STORIES, THEN LEAPS TO DEATH

New York, Jan. 15 [Sunday].—[Special.]—While a patrolman in the street below looked on helplessly, a man pushed a boy from the roof of a six story dwelling on 33d street early this morning and then jumped off himself. Both were killed. The body of the boy, who was between 10 and 12 years old, landed on the roof of an adjoining one story building; the man's crashed to the street.

The man was tentatively identified as Otto Klein, an idle printer. A woman tenant on the top floor said she heard footsteps and a child's screams, but paid no attention to them.

The screams also were heard by a youth in the street, who summoned a patrolman who got to the house as the boy was being pushed from the roof. The policeman yelled to the man to stop and fired one shot in the air, but the man paid no heed.

A letter in the man's pocket was the only clew to his identity. It was from "the Lincoln Society of Friends" and had borne a Bronx address which was crossed out. It read: "Dear Friend Klein: We're sorry to hear of your misfortune," and was signed "Charles Solomon," the police said. None of the neighbors recalled having seen the boy before.

Oak Park Bandits Rob Conductor and Motorist

Two bandits held up Charles Brasel, conductor on a Chicago and West Towns street car, at Roosevelt road and Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park, last night, and robbed him of $40 and his money changer. They next approached Harvey L. Linn as he was putting his car in the garage in back of his home at 1170 South Cuyler avenue, Oak Park. They drove him in his car to 31st street and Oak Park avenue, Berwyn, and robbed him of $21 and the automobile.

FLEEING SPANISH EXILES LAND AT FISHING VILLAGE

LISBON, Portugal, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Twenty-nine Spanish monarchist exiles who escaped on Jan. 1 from the penal settlement at Villa Cisneros, West Africa, landed this evening at Sesimbra, a little fishing village south of Lisbon. They intended to proceed immediately to Lisbon, they said. Their journey from the prison colony took nearly a fortnight.

Several times they changed from one vessel to another on the open sea. The ship in which they finally reached Portugal immediately put out to sea again.

The monarchists were believed to have escaped West Africa on a boat flying a French flag while the ship guarding the colony was away on a coaling expedition. One report was that the exiles, a part of the 138 monarchists who were deported to the colony four months ago after the August uprising, conducted foot races among themselves and on the day of their escape raced farther than usual to a spot where a Breton craft was awaiting them.

DEMANDS BOARD THROW OUT BIDS ON CHARITY COAL

P. M. Kelly Would Admit All State Mines.

Commissioner Peter M. Kelly of the county board announced yesterday that he would demand that the bids received by the board on charity coal contracts covering 300,000 tons be thrown out and that compromise specifications be drafted that will allow the best mines in both central and southern Illinois to compete on an equal basis.

He said he was opposed to the specifications signed by four of the six experts who met on Friday under the auspices of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, which allow a maximum variation of no more than 2 per cent" in the moisture, ash, and BTU content. That variation allowance, he said, would leave the door wide open to substitution.

Guards Against Cheating.

"I have talked to many coal dealers and operators and the specifications I have prepared are the best that can be drafted, in their opinion. My plan also includes an air tight means of policing the coal deliveries by means of which substitution can be eliminated.

"In order to police these specifications properly and to eliminate all possibility of substitution and fraud, I plan to propose complete composite analyses on each ten carloads of coal delivered by each contractor. The total cost of this policing will amount to no more than approximately 1.6 cents per ton of coal delivered, which would be paid by the contractor and would assure the county of getting what it pays for.

"I plan to ask the board to advertise for new bids on 'Illinois coal screened over shaker screens with apertures of not less than 2 inches in diameter and contents of not more than 11 per cent moisture, 10 per cent ash and 2 per cent sulphur as received, and not less than 12,500 B. t. u. by dry count.'

"The new specifications should include a penalty on each 1 per cent in excess of the maximum stated above for moisture, ash and sulphur content.

Penalty Equalizes Grades.

"These penalties would place competition between central and southern Illinois mines on an equal basis. The inferior coal is closer to Chicago, and enjoys a 30 cent freight rate differential. If it is bid on, the contractor will know that he will have to accept penalties which will amount to more than the 30 cent differential.

"These specifications will allow more than forty Illinois mines to compete for the charity business, including strip and shaft mines. The coal furnished under them will be of good quality, suitable to be used in domestic stoves, but will not be an extravagance. There are no jokers in these specifications."

Collusion in Pending Bids.

Bids on the specifications Commissioner Kelly outlined will range from about $5 a ton downward. The bids received on the former specifications contained collusion at prices of $5.46 and $5.66 a ton by southern Illinois operators and dealers. The specifications prepared by four of the six experts were influenced by George Reed of the Peabody Coal company, largest operators in the central Illinois fields. The "variations" effectively restricted bidding to those fields and favored specifically the Peabody mines at Taylorville and Kinkaid, Ill., while eliminating the strip mines because of 1 per cent excess moisture content.

Charles B. Goodspeed, assistant to the chairman of the relief commission, denied yesterday that such a restriction was the intention of the four experts. He presided at their meeting.

Commissioner Kelly's specifications would take final authority on the quality of coal from Frank H. Chambers, supervisor of public service.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

REFORM THE SENATE.

A new plank appears today in the platform for America. It reads: Reform the senate. By that we do not mean reform the senators. They are no more in need of reformation than any other body of public men or we, the people who elect them. Our concern is with the consequences of unequal voting strength in congress, created by the provisions giving two senators to each state of the Union, regardless of size, population, or economic conditions.

This device was adopted reluctantly by the framers of the constitution, some of whom at least recognized its unsoundness in principle and its possibilities of mischief. But the main need at that moment was to form a Union and it was feared that the smaller colonies would not ratify unless their fears of domination by the larger states were in some degree quieted. Accordingly it was provided that each state should have two members of the senate and "that no state, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage" in that branch of congress.

We shall not attempt to analyze the effects of this provision in the period or periods before our own. They became serious with the rapid making of new states from the federal domain of the west. Shortsighted party interests indorsed this proceeding by which new votes were added to the party strength in congress without heed to the general welfare of the nation. The Republican party in its long reign following the civil war has much to answer for and the premature admittance of new states may prove to be the most serious count in the indictment of history.

We no longer can be blind to the evils inherent in this unequal representation. Analyzing the voting strength of the states in the senate we find that a majority of that body—that is, 25 states—has only about one-fifth of the population of the Union, or 23,428,923 inhabitants of the 122,475,946 inhabitants of the United States, according to the latest census. All of these 25 states have a combined population only a little more than that of New York and Pennsylvania. They have 50 votes in the senate to 4 for New York and Pennsylvania. In other words, about 23 million citizens—in fact, a majority of them, or about 12 millions—can rule—and ruin—one hundred million, if they see fit, and they seem headed in that direction.

This discrepancy must in the long run arouse a deep feeling of injustice which will strain the unity of the American people perhaps beyond the breaking point. It is a form of oppression imposed by a minority of our people upon a majority and it will not be forever tolerated. But in the meanwhile it creates a recklessness and irresponsibility in federal expenditures which already threatens, and will soon bring about, federal bankruptcy with all its disastrous consequences to every citizen of the nation, whether he pays federal taxes directly or not. No nation can survive the burden we are piling upon our shoulders.

How this process is to be checked is the major problem and duty of this time. Representation in the senate is the one provision in the constitution which cannot be changed by the method of amendment to which all other provisions are amenable. It could not be amended probably by that method, for the states now profiting could defeat amendment. But either there will be a voluntary change in the present situation or consequences will compel a change even if it comes in the form of civil war. The productive states are being bled white. They represent ultimate power and they will be forced to exert it if present conditions of injustice and irresponsibility continue. We believe there is political ability enough in the nation to devise less deplorable methods of correction. It is of vital concern not only from the standpoint of recovering from this depression but from that of national unity that this duty be performed without delay. Not only must expenditure be drastically reduced for immediate relief but means must be found to establish a just control over expenditures.

WHAT'S WRONG HERE.

A favorite illustration of the technocrats in support of their thesis that the machine is destroying employment is the incandescent lamp industry. The lampmaking machine has been so perfected, they assert, that a few hundred men can supply all the requirements of the American people.

The lampmaking industry happens, also, to be the favorite illustration of the Buy American propagandists. The nation, they say, is being swamped with imported electric light bulbs, with the result that thousands of American workmen are being deprived of their livings.

They can't both be right. If the machine has already destroyed or is about to destroy the jobs of men employed in bulb manufacture there is no need for getting into a sweat about foreign competition destroying the same jobs at the same moment. The same thing cannot be destroyed more than once. Likewise, if the lampmaking machine is as good as the technocrats say it is, the probability that less highly mechanized foreign factories can undersell the American product does not seem to be considerable. The probability, indeed, is that the American product will invade the foreign markets precisely as machine made cotton prints have, for the most part, driven homespun out of the markets in countries where coolie labor is available.

AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY. III.

In a previous editorial we have recalled the passage of the Kellogg-Briand treaty, the effort of the foreign relations committee of the senate to limit and define its scope, and the later interpretations by the state department which, in our judgment, transcend that limit and constitute a radical alteration and departure in American foreign policy. We shall not follow the steps by which this diplomatic transformation has taken place. The rebuke to the soviet republic for its action in northern Manchuria for the protection of its treaty rights there marked one step. The activities of Mr. Stimson in the Japanese-Chinese imbroglio measured another extension. Finally the secretary of state delivered an address last August which has been accepted in Europe as an authoritative interpretation of the treaty and of American policy in this regard.

In ratifying this treaty the senate and the nation understood that it "does not either expressly or impliedly contemplate the use of force or coercive measures for its enforcement as against any nation violating." But Secretary Stimson has declared that it necessarily implies consultation; that is, an engagement for concert of measures to enforce the treaty. He explains that as the treaty has made war henceforth illegal belligerents no longer have equal rights from the standpoint of neutrals. Thus by necessary inference the traditional doctrine of neutral rights maintained by the United States since the first years of the republic is now in the discard. We are told that the treaty now imposes upon us the duty of refusing recognition of any "situation, treaty or agreement which might be brought about by means contrary to the covenant and obligation of the pact of Paris"—that is, the Kellogg treaty.

Mr. Stimson has been wary of suggesting the use of armed force and indeed has explicitly repudiated its use, but only sophistry can deny that his interpretation of the treaty involves "coercive measures," although the senate committee expressly denied any such implication. Refusal to "recognize a situation, treaty or agreement" is and is intended to be a "coercive measure." Abandonment of our right to trade with a belligerent or an alleged offender against the treaty is a "coercive measure." They and other pacifist alternatives, such as a boycott, would be meaningless if they were not "coercive measures."

By this treaty, Secretary Stimson asserts, "we have made obsolete many legal precedents and have given the legal profession the task of reexamining many of its codes and treaties." But the senate report recommending ratification of the treaty declared that "this treaty in no respect changes or qualifies our present position or relation to any pact or treaty existing between other nations or governments."

In short, what the senate and people of the United States in 1928 took to be merely "a voluntary pledge upon the part of each nation that it will not have recourse to war except in self-defense" is now in Secretary Stimson's interpretation transformed into a sweeping obligation to enter into every controversy which we think threatens the use of war wherever it occurs in the world. The American people have refused and still refuse to enter the league of nations because it would involve permanent entanglement in the political vicissitudes of Europe, but Secretary Stimson, President Hoover approving, now makes of the Kellogg treaty an entanglement at least as permanent and inclusive as entrance into the league.

The assumptions and reasoning upon which this departure are sought to be justified will be discussed another day. But, whatever their validity, we suggest that this transformation of our foreign policy is an irresponsible diplomatic enterprise initiated and carried on without the consideration or authorization of the American people. No such departure from American policy is justified without that consideration and authority.

IN THE COMMUNIST UTOPIA.

Reference has been made on several occasions to THE TRIBUNE'S policy of withdrawing correspondents from soviet Russia. Its reason for doing so, as explained, is the official censorship of the bolshevik government. The alternative to complete withdrawal was submission to the garbling or suppression of dispatches. THE TRIBUNE was and is unwilling to be the agent of the soviet despotism to that extent, deceiving our readers with the appearance of information while publishing only what soviet propaganda approves. Inevitably the result of such a policy is a picture of Russian conditions distorted in the interest of the bolshevist tyranny.

We publish in the third column today the first extract from an article on soviet espionage of foreign correspondents which not only supports THE TRIBUNE policy but presents a remarkable picture of life in the communist Utopia. We invite especially the attention of our self-styled liberals who are so critical of individualist democracy and so complaisant as to the amiable practices of communist rule.

Editorial of the Day

RICHMOND'S "GAG RULE."

[Philadelphia Public Ledger.]

The mayor of Richmond, Va., has severed relations with the newspapers of that city because one of his recent acts has been the target of editorial criticism. The chief of police has backed up the stand of his superior by serving notice that "there will be no police news for either newspaper until they play fair with the head of the city government."

If Richmond's mayor expects to eliminate criticism by "gagging" the press he is gravely mistaken. He has, in fact, invited more serious criticism than any previous act aroused; for he is not harming the press so much as the citizens of Richmond, to whom he has barred the only means which a majority of them possess for keeping in touch with municipal affairs. He seems to have assumed, very mistakenly, that the citizens and voters are not entitled to any news and views which are not complimentary to his administration.

The mayor of Richmond is not the first official who has made such a mistake. But he apparently has not heard of—or, at least, has not profited from—the lessons taught to others who attempted to curb the constitutionally guaranteed freedom of the press.

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENTS IN SOVIET RUSSIA

By I. VURIEVSKY.

[The following is a translation of part of an article published in the Jewish Socialist newspaper Forward of New York City. The writer is vouched for by the editor of Forward as "an eminent Russian scholar and economist who for a number of years occupied a very high rank in the 'supreme economic council' of the soviet government at Moscow." He left Russia recently For obvious reasons he uses a pseudonym. The article, which will be continued in this column next Sunday, is republished through the courtesy of Forward.]

In order to give the reader a clear picture of the environment in which a foreign correspondent finds himself in Russia, let me submit here instead of logical arguments a few simple facts. I shall take as an example Herr Scheffer, the Moscow correspondent for the Berliner Tageblatt. I cite his case, first, because it is very typical; and second, because I chanced to learn "behind the scenes" a number of details about his case, of which it appears Scheffer was himself ignorant during his stay in Moscow—he is likely still unaware of these facts to the present day.

I ought to remark at this point that Scheffer came to soviet Russia, not in quest of sensations, but with the most upright of intentions. The Berliner Tageblatt, the outstanding democratic newspaper in Germany, had from the year 1923 assumed a very friendly attitude toward soviet Russia. Consequently, the management of the paper directed its representative to concentrate his attention upon the favorable aspects of soviet life, institutions and projects.

To the readers of Scheffer's dispatches, as they appeared in the Berlin newspaper at that time, it must have been apparent that although the "tone" of the articles was consistently impartial, he nevertheless endeavored to emphasize the positive achievements of the soviet government and refrained from mentioning the dark and horrible phases of the soviet régime.

The soviet government was highly appreciative of Scheffer's articles, as well as of the general attitude of the Berliner Tageblatt toward soviet Russia. As recognition and reward for this sympathetic attitude, the Moscow rulers permitted the distribution of that paper throughout soviet Russia. As a result, Moscow newspaper readers were able to observe, much to their astonishment, that on the official newspaper stands, both on the street and in the railway stations, there lay peacefully side by side the bourgeois Berliner Tageblatt, the Russian communist Pravda, the German communist Die Rote Fahne, and the Red French daily, L'Humanité.

Not content with this, the soviet telegraphic agency would submit to the various soviet newspapers extracts from Scheffer's correspondence. The Moscow newspapers would then reprint such material, regarding it as perfectly "sound," inasmuch as the government permitted its publication. These extracts were printed, of course, as proof that "even the bourgeois newspapers can no longer deny our great achievements and triumphs."

Thus for a time everything seemed to proceed very smoothly and to the utmost satisfaction of the Moscow authorities. It seemed reasonable to expect that Scheffer would "adjust" himself and follow along the same smooth path which had already been paved for him by Walter Duranty, correspondent for the New York Times.

That Duranty's attitude is sanctioned by the government in Moscow is obvious from this fact alone: That when he sends off his dispatches he pays a lower fee at the soviet cable office than do the other correspondents. It is said that he is allowed a reduction of two-thirds from the normal charge made to others. What this signifies is that Duranty's articles are so helpful to the bolshevik government that it does what it can to facilitate their dissemination.

But to return to Scheffer—I must not be unjust to him. As he gradually became better acquainted with soviet life he learned more and more of what really goes on behind the glittering façade. And the more that he saw the more the desire grew upon him to be a truly impartial observer and correspondent. He was no longer content to merely carry out instructions and to trumpet to the world outside just that news which suited the purposes of the Moscow rulers.

Accordingly, one began to detect in his communications from time to time a note of criticism; some of his observations recorded a measure of skepticism; in very polite phraseology he nevertheless gave the reader the feeling that he was adopting a critical attitude toward the boastful claims of the soviet government. Yet withal there was not a sharp or offensive word in his dispatches. A few of his comments were rather ambiguous; so that it was not apparent whether he was praising a certain decree of the government or whether he was censuring it. However, he always enveloped his critical observations in a maze of words, like in a mass of cotton, so that the note of censure was pretty thoroughly stifled and was sure not to grate upon the tender sensibilities of the dictators of Moscow—who cannot tolerate any sort of unpleasant sound about them. Nevertheless, there was agitation in the higher circles of the Moscow government. The foreign division of the G. P. U. and the press division in the ministry of foreign affairs now commenced to sift carefully every line of Scheffer's correspondence, just as though it were a bomb or else a summons calling for the overthrow of the bolshevik government.

From diverse official sources Scheffer would from time to time receive a gentle hint to "change the tone" of his articles, and when he failed to comply—inasmuch as his "tone" was already gentle—the inevitable fate befell him that has befallen a host of other foreign correspondents. He was told to clear out. Scheffer then obtained a temporary leave of absence from his newspaper and left for Germany. But he could no longer return to soviet Russia for the simple reason that he was refused a visa.

This briefly tells the story of Scheffer in its external, literary and political aspects. It is as much as he himself knows of it. Now let us have a glimpse of the "inside," unrevealed details of this episode. What actually happened was this: That Scheffer, serving as he did in the capacity of foreign correspondent, was surrounded by a complete network of espionage, and that every step and movement of his was trailed by spies. Now let us see how this system of espionage operated.

KEEPING MENTALLY HEALTHY.

MORE than one-half of the taxpayers' money spent by state governments goes for the support of hospitals for the mentally sick and hospitals for the enemies of society. This is true of funds raised by general taxation. It is not true of moneys raised by sale of bonds and by special taxes such as that on gasoline.

Furthermore, this burden is increasing rapidly. It threatens to result in confiscation of all taxable private property. There can be considerable saving by the erection of simpler and less expensive buildings. People who have never lived in marble halls are somewhat ill at ease in some of the palaces that we call state institutions. But the saving in per bed cost of erection of institutions will be much more than offset by the increase in the number of beds required to take care of the growing number of persons who are not sufficiently adjustable to fit into our complex social structure and who, therefore, become wards of the state. To be saved we must have a program of prevention of mental and moral disorders comparable with that we have for physical disorders.

Like its predecessor it must learn by trial and error, by success and failure, by experience. Fifty or a hundred years ago the pioneers of public health did not sit by waiting for a perfect program When Pettenkofer started in Germany he knew nothing of the bacteria which caused the diseases he tried to control In fact, he knew very little about the science of the subject, and what he knew was mostly wrong. This basic fact he had right. A certain group of diseases, such as typhoid fever, principally diseases of the abdomen, were due to filth in the food and drink and if people, collectively and individually, would be more cleanly in their customs and habits they would gain therefrom. On this theory he pitched in. The remainder of the program was worked out by experience.

We need to launch a program of prevention in the mental, emotional, and social field. Now is the time to begin. We will make headway if we can start right on one great fundamental point. Experience will teach what to do next.

MIGRAINE.

M. H. writes: Between my nineteenth and forty-sixth years I had attacks of migraine at less than monthly intervals. I found that if I took medicines for relief when the eye symptoms started I got by with less than half the medicine required when I failed to start treatment promptly. Back of my migraine was indigestion.

Last March I had a perforation of a duodenal ulcer and had to be operated on in an emergency. Since then I have taken the ulcer diet and the alkali treatment for ulcer.

In the eight months since I have had only two attacks of migraine and they were mild. In the same period of the preceding year I had forty attacks and many of them were severe.

BOILING WATER.

H. E. C. writes: We are told that our city water, while pure, is very bad for the kidneys and we have been using boiled water for some time. We have been advised to use distilled water from the ice plant. Will you kindly advise us as to which, in your opinion, would be the best, or if either is advisable; our city water comes from wells about 80 feet deep and, when boiled, there seems to be a brown sediment.

REPLY.

Nothing in your letter indicates any reason for not using the city water. Old man "I've been told" is not much of a guide counselor, and friend and, as a doctor, he is very poor.

Most waters that contain any considerable amount of mineral matter—good, bad, or indifferent—throw down some sediment when boiled. Heating expels some air and other gases and makes some chemical changes, and these effects are apt to throw some minerals out of solution.

WHOOPING COUGH.

M. S. P. writes: I would like to know your opinion on inoculations for whooping cough. Doctors nowadays seem disinclined to give them until the case has developed. Seven years ago a doctor inoculated my children when they became exposed to the disease in the household of relatives whom we were visiting and, although they were in close contact, my children did not take the disease. It seems to me that if inoculation after the disease develops lightens the case that inoculation before would prevent it.

REPLY.

Inoculation for whooping cough has proved disappointing both as a preventive and as a cure in most places where it has been tried. In your case possibly the vaccine worked Maybe you were lucky.

TOO MUCH FLUIDS.

C. C. W. writes:

1. What particular benefits accrue to one who drinks a quart of buttermilk daily, six days a week?
2. Does it act as a blood purifier?
3. What should the daily consumption of water be for a perfectly healthy man?
4. Would drinking about a quart or a quart and a half of water a day benefit one physically?

REPLY.

1. He gets a considerable amount of a wholesome food.
2. No.
3. Most persons find three or four six ounce glasses enough. Something depends on the amount of fluids eaten as food, such as soups and other liquid foods and beverages, and the amount of sweating the person indulges in.
4. Water acts as a solvent and, in that way, does good. If taken in excess it throws an extra strain on the heart or the tissues may become waterlogged. You appear to want to go too far with fluids.

TERMS OF WILL.

La Salle, Ill., Jan. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A makes a will leaving certain definite sums to his children by his first wife. These children are named first and each one is given a definite sum, then his widow is given her third, after which her children are each named and given a definite sum. The estate will not pay all bequests after expenses of the funeral are paid. 1. Will the first named be paid their money as stated? 2. Will the second children be paid after the other bequests are paid? 3. Or will the widow first be paid and then the others be prorated on a percentage basis, even though the children will only get half of what they were supposed to receive?
B. C. E.

1. Yes.
2. As far as the bare facts stated are concerned, we see no reason why all of the definite legacies should not abate equally, but obviously we cannot give you advice of any value without having the exact wording of the will before us.
3. You do not even tell us what it is that the widow is to take one-third of. It might be one-third of the entire estate or one-third of what is left after the preceding gifts, or one-third of what is left after all specific legacies.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

ADMINISTRATOR VS. EXECUTOR.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—What is the difference from a legal standpoint between the [1] administrator of a will and an [2] executor of a will? 3. Is it legal for one who has had herself appointed administratrix of an estate in California to withhold information in regard to its affairs from one who has equal claims upon it, but who resides in Illinois?
M. L. B.

1. This term is used to designate the personal representative of a deceased person where the appointment is not made by will You should say administrator of the estate rather than administrator of a will.
2. He is the personal representative named in a will.
3. In general the obligation of the personal representative is to report to the court rather than to the beneficiaries of the estate. The beneficiaries can examine reports in the court files.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 15, 1917.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Great Britain has addressed to President Wilson a series of sensational charges that the United States has been guilty of numerous violations of neutrality from which the entente allies have suffered great damage. These charges are to be made the basis after the war for claims upon the United States for reparation compared with which the Alabama claim against England after the civil war will shrink into insignificance. The British embassy disclosed the fact that the foundation for these claims had been laid in a note delivered recently to the American government by Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador. Charges that the United States permitted German agents to carry out arrangements on American soil to inaugurate a revolution in India compose the burden of this communication. The ambassador's note has not been made public by the administration. Its existence was disclosed in connection with the investigation of the mysterious explosions in New Jersey munition plants, in which millions of dollars' worth of shells and other explosives destined for the allies were destroyed.

TOKIO. — The Japanese battle cruiser Tsukuba was destroyed by an explosion in the harbor of Yokosuka. Fire on the Tsukuba caused the magazine to blow up. One hundred and fifty-three members of the crew were killed and 157 injured, many of them seriously. The Tsukuba was laid down in 1905 and displaced 13,750 tons. Its complement was 817 men.

LONDON.—Berlin reports the town of Vadent, on the eastern skirt of the marshes north of Braila and about six miles southwest of Galatz, fell into the hands of the Teutons. Thus it is seen the drive on to the Sereth river is succeeding afresh. Galatz, on the Danube, is the prime objective of the present attack of Von Mackensen's troops. The Russians attempted an advance on the Sereth northwest of Braila, but were repulsed, according to Berlin. Petrograd admits the further withdrawal southwest of Galatz and the abandonment of the village of Kotumikhali. Berlin reports German grenadiers penetrated Russian positions north of the Golden Bystritza, in the eastern Carpathians.

CHICAGO. — Chicago's coal shortage reached the most serious proportions of the winter, and unless relief is had within forty-eight hours the existing supply of fuel may be entirely exhausted. The acute aspect of the situation dawned when the Norfolk and Western railroad, which hauls the bulk of coal used for heating office and apartment buildings in Chicago, placed an embargo on shipments west of Columbus, O., according to reports coming to Fred W. Upham of the Consumers company. The situation was further aggravated by the fact that a strike of the 1,200 apartment house janitors is threatened Jan. 17.

DENVER, Colo.—The west today bade farewell to all that was mortal of Col. William F. Cody ("Buffalo Bill"). And the west, in its own words, "did itself proud" in its parting with the man who helped to make its history. From the moment the body of the scout and hunter was brought into the state capitol to lie in state until it rested in the vault of an undertaker to await final burial on the summit of Lookout mountain, all honors were accorded to the departed plainsman. Two state governors, a lieutenant governor, officials and legislators from three states, the United States army, fraternal organizations of which he was an honored member, former cowboys, the Grand Army of the Republic, and men, women and children—thousands of the latter—paid tribute to the illustrious son of the prairies.

CHICAGO.—Dr. Samuel A. McWilliams, probably the oldest physician in Chicago, died at 3456 Michigan avenue, where he had lived for 40 years. He was 81 years old Dr. McWilliams was born in Ireland and came to the United States as a child. He was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1856, after which he came to Chicago and entered the first class of the Chicago College of Medicine, now the medical school of Northwestern university.

THE NAVY IN CHINA.

Chicago, Jan. 6. — In your issue of Dec. 31 there appears a letter under the heading, "The Navy in China." This article is particularly interesting to me as I was indirectly connected with the building of the six new gunboats mentioned therein.

In so far as the premise of their being built and maintained at the instigation of a missionary lobby is concerned I am unable to voice an opinion. We maintain gunboats in certain parts of Latin America where there are no missionaries, and we do not maintain gunboats in Persia, Turkey and other areas where there are missionaries. Suffice it to say these six replaced an almost equal number of antique gunboats taken over from the Spaniards in 1898, which vessels had been under our flag on the Yangtze for nearly thirty years. Even during the days of the empire it was necessary to maintain a patrol on the river to prevent depredations of pirates against foreigners and foreign commercial traffic and of bandits against commercial establishments in river cities. Protection has become even more essential in recent years. Strong patrols are maintained not only by ourselves but the French, British, Italians, and Japanese. Formerly the Russians and Germans were also well represented.

Gunboats suitable for service on the Yangtze are of unusual construction and of necessity possess peculiarities which render them unsuitable and unsafe for use on the open sea. They are of very shallow draft and low freeboard, the stern tubes for the propeller shafting are of special design to prevent the silt in the river water from seeping in to cause destructive friction, there are three rudders instead of the usual single rudder and all vulnerable parts must be protected by bulletproof steel, which makes them topheavy.

After considerable study the navy department recommended to congress that it was to the best interests of the government, if new boats were to be built at all, to construct them in the locality where they were to be used. This would give us the advantage of utilizing the experience of a builder specializing in river craft and would eliminate the long and hazardous voyage for nonseagoing vessels from the United States. The projected boats were too heavy and unwieldy to permit of shipping in larger vessels. Congress accordingly authorized the construction of the new gunboats at Shanghai, and experienced naval engineers and constructors were assigned to the builder's plant to supervise the work.

Some twenty years ago the first two of the eight gunboats mentioned by "Land Lubber" were constructed in the United States, then dismantled, shipped to Shanghai, and reassembled by a commercial yard at that port. No saving in cost was effected by this procedure and in several respects these two boats have not proven satisfactory. The six new boats are most successful in nearly all details, and furthermore are considered not only the finest gunboats on the station but the best river craft on the Yangtze.

One would infer from "Land Lubber's" letter that the building of the six new boats was entirely a foreign transaction. He states that they cost about $300,000 each and further avers that each is manned by upwards of 100 men. The average contract price of the group was $240,000 per vessel for hull and machinery. The complements of these vessels vary from 50 to 70, according to size. I don't think they would hold 100 men each unless one were to use a shoe horn. I am sure he will be relieved to learn that all of the steel for the hulls of these vessels came from the United States; that the main engines for all except the two smallest boats were built in one of our navy yards; and that the dynamos, electric motors, refrigerating equiment, electric wiring and fittings, a considerable amount of special piping, the medical equipment, culinary and messing equipment, also the radio outfit, came from this country. In fact, a great many appliances were fabricated in Chicago and contiguous territory.

It is probably unnecessary to add that the guns and bulletproof shields are entirely of U. S. manufacture. Except in cases where it was clearly to the advantage of the government to obtain it locally, every item going into these vessels was procured in this country and that policy will be maintained throughout their life as repairs and modifications become necessary.

Considering the magnitude of our trade with China it would seem that the profits derived therefrom, which eventually accrue to our taxpayers, would easily offset the upkeep cost of these vessels plus that small portion of their building cost which did not directly find its way back to our shores.

THE DES PLAINES PLAN.

Such a plan is obviously unsound, being helpful only to a few and founded on false economic ideas. Out of all the fiat money schemes that have been tried around the country, the plan that has been in operation in Des Plaines for more than a year apparently is the only one that stands up against all the tests [fraud, forgery] and has proved of the greatest good.

The plan is founded entirely on the desire to unfreeze the deposits tied up in closed banks. The Des Plaines clearing house plan makes available a part of such frozen assets as purchasing power through a method of assigning in whole or in any part to merchants. In Des Plaines it has been proven that the turnover of these assignments is anywhere from two to five times. Thus a bank with $1,000,000 on deposit when it closed may be intending to pay a dividend of 5 per cent some months hence. This would mean a minimum of $50,000 in trade and up to $250,000.

W. L. AYERS.

THE SEAWAY ATTACKED.

New Orleans, La., Jan. 3.—Aside from the severe blow the construction of the proposed 27 foot St. Lawrence seaway would deal Atlantic and gulf shipping, the railroads and the inland waterway system, the American taxpayers would be forced also to suffer.

America would pay $339,347,000 while Canada would only pay $103,900,000 for this eight months a year project. Then, in addition, the United States would surrender the soverignty of Lake Michigan, supply millions of dollars of electric power to the Canadian province of Ontario and at the same time cripple half the American steamship companies and seriously impair the business of American railroads.

With hundreds of thousands of people unemployed in America at this time it seems unwise that the American government would blithely go in and squander more than a third of a billion dollars to pay the lion's share of the cost of a project that would impoverish thousands more American people in order to provide prosperity for a foreign country whose domain the project would largely traverse.

And then finally all this would be sacrificed to create a seaway that would only be used eight months a year because during the other four months the St. Lawrence river is made unnavigable by ice. This is too much to pay for a part time proposition.

JOHN MCKAY,

NEW LOOP CLINIC CHALLENGES OLD MEDICAL ETHICS

Aim Is Medical Service at Lower Cost.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

With the opening Wednesday of the clinic of the United Medical Service, Inc., in its new four floor home in the Finchley building, 23 East Jackson boulevard, done in soft tones of blue and yellow, glittering with the latest in mechanical equipment, Chicago becomes the center of a new experiment in organized medical practice which promises to have nation-wide reverberations.

It brings to trial the theory that the day of the old fashioned general practitioner is passing, that the only way to bring a complete medical service to the low and middle income public is through group practice, and that this can best be done on a business basis.

Old and New at Odds.

Orthodox medicine, through its societies and publications and individuals, has already come to battle with these "respectful rebels," on the basis of an old ethical code which is still held vital, condemning corporate practice in which laymen hold financial interests, condemning advertising of treatment, and still holding that the mental relations, the personal contact, of doctor and patient—that which is called the "intangibles" of healing—cannot be improved upon in this way. Both sides take their stand on the ground that they are best serving the public.

More than three hundred physicians have signed a protocol giving support to United Medical service, thus throwing down the gauntlet to the Chicago Medical society and the state and national organizations. The organizer and president of the clinic, which is prepared to receive patients sent by any physician, is Dr. Joseph G. Berkowitz, former head of the Public Health institute, who has had this extension into general medicine in preparation for two years and who has obtained adequate financial support for the work as well as the quiet backing, it is reported, of many more doctors who hesitate to jeopardize their position by signing up with the clinic.

Schmidt Ouster Recalled.

This situation is considered an outgrowth of the old fight between the Chicago Medical society and the Public Health institute and the stand taken by Dr. Louis E. Schmidt, noted physician and surgeon, in favor of low cost clinics, and a new ethical code modeled on the complex developments of medicine and modern needs. It was this stand which resulted in his ouster by the medical organizations. Dr. Schmidt is sympathetic with this experiment, finding nothing intrinsically "unethical" in the practice of medicine "for profit," and believing that it will meet a definite need of these times, when many are evading or neglecting medical care because of its cost.

The board of directors of the United Medical service are Dr. Berkowitz, Brig. Gen. James A. Ryan, U. S. A. [retired], vice president and treasurer; Dr. Charles R. Wiley, heart specialist and member of the council of the Chicago Medical association, vice president; Hamilton Loeb, insurance, son of Jacob M. Loeb, secretary; Samuel Stein, Clifford Templeton, and Mrs. G. Berkowitz.

Twenty on Regular Staff.

A full time staff of twenty physicians, experts in all branches of medicine, dentistry, and eye work, is ready for work at the clinic, which is said to have one of the most elaborate X-ray departments in the central west, and a pharmacy. In addition there is a part time staff of specialists, thirty-two physicians designated as the associate staff members, and fifteen more outside consultants and advisers. Stock in the organization has been sold to many physicians and profits depend on volume of business.

The salaried staff is made up as follows:

ERNEST BLOOMFIELD ZEISLER, M. D., graduate of the University of Chicago, S. B. 1919, Ph. C. L. MORRIS, M. D., graduate Tulane university, 1916; assistant Roentgenologist Edward Hines hospital.

LYMAN C. MURPHY, M. D., graduate St. Louis university, 1920; approved pathologist Council of the American Medical association.

Doctors Pledge Support.

The three hundred and more physicians who have come to the support of the clinic have signed the following:

"We, the undersigned, agree that the best interests of the public and the medical profession can be served through the establishment of low price, fixed fee clinics, making medical service available to all low income groups. We agree to support the United Medical Service, Inc., in all its policies and activities. We give permission to the officers of the organization to use our names as associates in this effort."

The names are not being made public at this time, however, as some sort of protest is expected from the Chicago and state medical associations which may take the form of a court action against the corporate practice of medicine.

There was no statement forthcoming from the office of the Chicago Medical society yesterday, although they were asked to state their objections, if any, to this experiment. The Rosenwald Fund medical department, which has defended low cost clinics, has taken no stand in this matter, although Dr. Michael M. Davis, medical director, has informed physicians of the new clinic that he is not in favor of the practice of medicine by corporations for profit.

An Independent Clinic.

This new Chicago clinic is not associated with any philanthropic, charitable, educational or tax supported group. It is incorporated for profit, as are many hospitals, and the directors believe it can confront the cost problem, extend facilities, and meet medical requirements of the highest sort. The organizers expect their patients to come from the group of distressed persons who are unwilling to accept treatment from charitable institutions and who think they have not enough money to get aid from specialists and practicing doctors.

"Medical care brings about the greatest single burden on charity," said Dr. Berkowitz. "If medical care is made generally available many afflictions will be checked as near the inception as possible. When this is accomplished the burden of taxation on charity will be greatly diminished."

Comment of Medical Journal.

The Journal of the American Medical association says in its issue of Oct. 8 last, in discussing new forms of medical practice and in particular "the scheme proposed by J. G. Berkowitz and his associates," that:

"The Journal opposes such schemes not only because they are bad medical practice but also because they must inevitably result in an inferior type of medical practice for the people of this country. The laws of the state of Delaware and of Illinois are quite clear in opposing the practice of law or of medicine by corporations.

"The suitable committees of the state medical societies in these states may well consider carefully whether or not it is advisable to set in motion at once the necessary legal machinery to oppose the establishment of such corporations as being directly opposed to the laws of the state."

PARENTS CALL TO SEE LIBBY HOLMAN AND BABY IN HOSPITAL

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Holman of Cincinnati, parents of Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds, visited their daughter and new grandson at the Pennsylvania hospital today and reported that the "baby is fine."

"Libby is doing beautifully," he added, "and everything is great."

Mr. Holman termed "absolutely untrue" rumors that the 3½ pound infant was failing and a similiar denial was given at the office of Dr. Charles A. Fife, the attending pediatrician.

After leaving the hospital Mr. and Mrs. Holman posed for photographers. Mr. Holman refused to answer questions concerning rumors that his daughter was not entirely in sympathy with his announcement of yesterday that she would seek "only a modest share" of the estate left by her husband, Smith Reynolds, preferring to have it used for charitable purposes.

"The statement speaks for itself and I have nothing to add," he said.

ALLMAN ADOPTS NEW SYSTEM FOR MARKING POLICE

Commissioner of Police Allman yesterday adopted the Probst service report system as a method of recording and keeping on file an efficiency rating for each patrolman and sergeant on the police force. The system has been tried out for several months, but only gained final approval yesterday after the commissioner had met with the supervising captains.

The system comprises a chart on which some ninety human characteristics are listed. Some of the qualifications on which the policemen will be marked are "lazy," "quick and active," "cranky disposition," unusually courteous," "not generally reliable," "is highly expert in own work," "too lenient in maintaining discipline," "maintains good discipline," "makes poor written reports," and "makes unusually good written reports."

Behind each item are places for check marks. Each patrolman and sergeant will be marked on all of the items by two lieutenants and the captain of his district. The commissioner plans to have this done every six months. When the report is turned in to the commissioner the rating is determined by an examination of the chart.

This Cigar Thief Has a Surprise Coming

A thief who early yesterday smashed the show window of Joe's Smoke shop, 329 South Dearborn street, and removed several boxes of cigars will be surprised if he tries to smoke them. They are made of wood, wrapped in cellophane, and were put in the show window as a permanent display.

MISSING FRENCH SAVANT FOUND IN ITALIAN PRISON

PARIS, Jan. 14.—Authorities today confirmed that Prof. Denis Eydoux, director of the famous Polytechnic school of Paris, has been imprisoned in Italy since he spent a vacation in the Italian Alps last October. The French ambassador, Henry de Jouvenel, has received special instructions to take up the savant's case which still remains a mystery to his family and French officials.

Eydoux, who is a noted engineer and etcher, went to the headwaters of the river Adda intending to inspect Italian hydraulic works and take a holiday but failed to return. His family finally received a communication in his own handwriting stating he had been arrested at Tarvisio and transferred to Rome where he is held in prison. Since then several other letters have been received but never any explanation of his arrest. His trial has been steadily deferred.

In Paris today Gen. Royer, head of the Polytechnic school, said he had communicated with the war ministry which in turn took up Eydoux' case with the foreign ministry. As yet no action has been obtained from the Italian government.

"It is believed here Eydoux might have been making sketches without knowing he was in territory where it is forbidden," Gen. Royer said. "Probably through a misunderstanding he had been charged with espionage."

MINE PARLEYS DELAY HORNER'S CABINET WORK

May Not Have Names Ready Tuesday.

Discuss Jobs Today

Gov. Horner arrived in Chicago last night from Springfield. He is expected to confer with Democratic leaders today on the filling of state jobs. It was reported that, at a long meeting held yesterday in Mayor Cermak's office, Democratic leaders decided on recommendations for the filling of the available offices. The list will be submitted to the governor. Among those who attended the patronage meeting were State's Attorney Courtney, President Whealan of the county board, County Judge Jarecki, County Treasurer McDonough, State Auditor Barrett, and Secretary of State Hughes.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Efforts to end bloodshed and bombing in the central Illinois coal district have so occupied the time of Gov. Horner during the first week of his administration that he probably will not be able to submit even the first of his cabinet appointments to the state senate next week.

That was his statement today at the close of another five hour conference on the war between the Progressive Miners' union and the United Mine Workers of America.

Meets Coal Operators.

Although it was a "half day" at the state house, the governor was closeted with representatives of the Illinois Coal Operators' association from 10 in the morning until after 3 o'clock in the afternoon, missed his luncheon, and managed barely to dispose of a few pressing executive matters before rushing off to a train for Chicago. There he had conferences scheduled for tomorrow.

A formal statement covering his meeting with the coal men was issued. That and what he added verbally indicated the conversation had been chiefly informative. He will resume this work again on Monday.

"You will have to get my state of mind," he said to newspaper men who talked with him as he drank a glass of milk following the departure of the coal men. The newspaper men had asked him about "jobs."

"As you know I have devoted almost my entire time to this coal situation which I regard as a grave emergency. My mind has been entirely occupied with it. I have not had an opportunity to give thought to appointments, except those few that have required immediate attention.

Awaits Spare Moments.

"I cannot make appointments without giving them serious thought. So, when you ask me whether I shall have any appointments for the cabinet to submit to the senate next Tuesday or later in the week I must reply that I doubt it. I shan't have any, unless I have opportunity to think them over carefully in the meantime. I doubt that such an opportunity will present itself. I expect my time to be fully occupied on Sunday in Chicago and I shall return here Sunday night so as to be back on the job Monday morning."

Gov. Horner said one of his appointments—for Sunday morning—is with Edward L. Ryerson Jr., chairman of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission. He turned the next question off with a laugh.

Has no Private Life.

"Have you any other engagements for publication?"

"I have no private life," he said with a chuckle.

"The governor had invited the operators to meet him," the official statement read, "in order that he might get their views as to the situation existing in their respective fields. The operators expressed themselves frankly and gave the governor their views regarding the difficulties.

"The governor also conferred with John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers' union. He also called into the conference John Walker, Illinois president of the United Mine Workers; Fox Hughes, vice president, and Walter Nesbit, secretary of the same organization.

"There was also present Victor Olander, secretary of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, who had been invited by the governor to confer with him.

"The operators present, representing their association, assured the governor of their full coöperation in attempting to restore peace in the Illinois fields.

"The governor will again confer with the representatives of the Progressive Miners' union on Monday."

BOMB HOMES OF TWO MINERS' UNION OFFICIALS

West Frankfort, Ill., Jan. 14.—[U. P.]—The bombing of homes of two mine union officials in southern Illinois coal fields today shattered the quiet of a truce arranged between the United Mine Workers of America and Progressive Miners' unions.

The homes bombed were occupied by provisional officers appointed by John L. Lewis, U. M. W. A. president, in an effort to curb the spread of Progressive Miners' unions into the southern coal belt of the state.

A dynamite bomb hurled against the home of O. J. Sharp, a provisional vice president of a local union, early today shattered windows and damaged the building. Joseph Piper, a provisional president of the same local, also was living in the house. No one was injured.

Sheriff Browning Robinson and Chief of Police George Nipper began an immediate investigation. The bomb was hurled from an automobile which sped away immediately afterward.

Two men were arrested at Zeigler last night and held in Franklin county jail at Benton today for questioning in connection with the bombing of the home of Frank Moulin, provisional president of a Zeigler U. M. W. A. local at Zeigler yesterday.

Lewis had revoked the charters of the West Franklin and Zeigler unions for alleged "sympathies with the progressives."

Eddie Heckelbeck and Clinton Boucher were in Benton jail in connection with the bombing of the Moulin home. Heckelbeck recently was expelled from the local union of which Moulin is provisional president. Boucher was at liberty under bond on charges of shooting Moulin last September.

Leaves Bridewell Friday; He's Back In on Saturday

Released from the Bridewell Friday, Effin Polk, 33 years old, 3813 Cottage Grove avenue, went home and discovered that his clean underwear had disappeared. When he asked his wife, Madie, what had become of it, she replied, "I sold it to buy bread." Then, according to the police, Polk chased his wife out of the house with a razor. Judge Matthew D. Hartigan yesterday fined Polk $10 and costs. Unable to pay, Polk was taken back to the Bridewell.

Bandits Put Four in Office Vault and Flee with $239

Four employés in the offices of the Quaker Manufacturing company, Room 701 in the Builders building, 228 North La Salle street, were bound with ropes and forced into the office vault yesterday by two gunmen who robbed them of $239. The robbers also took $55 from the office cash box.

Harry A. Ash resigned yesterday as head of the inheritance tax division of the Illinois attorney general's office, a position he held for eight years as an assistant to former Attorney General Carlstrom. In his letter of resignation to Attorney General Kerner, Attorney Ash said he had formed an association for the private practice of law with Attorney Joseph Rolnick. They will have offices in the Foreman State National Bank building, 33 North La Salle street.

HARRY A. ASH.

Before accepting the state position, Mr. Ash was a tax expert for investment houses and an accountant. He became known as an expert on tax matters and security valuations. In his capacity as assistant attorney general he was in charge of all appraisals for inheritance tax purposes and gained wide experience in evaluating unlisted stocks and closed corporations.

LIFE PRISONER ASKS CANADA FOR WAR PENSION

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A plea for help has come from a life prisoner in the Marquette, Mich., prison to the Canadian Pensioners' association.

Raymond Blandon writes he has served 11 years of a life sentence. He asks aid in getting a pension so he can get artificial supports made necessary by a leg injury. He says he served in the 70th and 21st battalions and offers the pension to the asosciation to carry on its work.

Disabled by Wounds.

Marquette, Mich., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Raymond Blandon is 90 per cent disabled because of wounds suffered in the world war, Dr. L. L. Youngquist, physician at the Marquette prison, said today. He is barely able to walk, the doctor said. Blandon was sentenced to life imprisonment Oct. 2, 1923, for first degree murder in Wayne county, Mich.

400 Volunteers Fight Fire at Freeport, Long Island

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Four hundred volunteer firemen fought for five hours early today to check a fire that swept an entire business block in Freeport, L. I. Damage estimated at between $100,000 and $200,000 had been done before it was finally brought under control. The fire started in a shoe store. That and all but one of the buildings adjoining it were one story structures owned by the Merrick Road and Church Street corporation.

MANY RELATIVES RETURN AS FEUD FLARES UP AGAIN

Carbondale, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Release today of Andrew Reiman, 38, held as a witness for the coroner's inquest into the death of his cousin, Fred Reiman, 50, who died from bullet wounds inflicted last Tuesday was accompanied by the return of many Reimans to the settlement of the family name in the hills northwest of here.

This is the fourth violent death of the Reimans in 10 years that remains unsolved. Andrew was given his freedom after a coroner's jury found an open verdict in the death of Fred, who was under indictment for the slaying of Andrew's brother, Otha, in a family feud, the flames of which were ignited last August when Fred's son, Howard, also under indictment, is alleged to have shot Otha and wounded Andy in an argument over the killing of a dog.

Reiman kinsmen consist of numerous families who live in the same neighborhood. Today, they were back at their tasks of the soil, but with closed lips. Fred Reiman, who died from a bullet wound, said in an antemortem statement that Andrew entered the house, killed him to avenge the slaying of his brother, Otha, who was the fourth of the kinsmen to die a violent death in 10 years.

No one has answered to the law for any deaths. Three have been given up as mysteries while only the slaying of Otha last August is on the docket for trial.

Bandits Hold Up Cafe as Police Rest Outside

While two policemen sat in a squad car parked in front of the Eden restaurant, 33 North Cicero avenue, early yesterday two gunmen walked into the restaurant and robbed the proprietor, Peter Romanos, 2306 Belmont avenue, of $7. After the bandits left Romanos ran out and gave the alarm to the squad car which started in pursuit. The police did not return, however, and no report of an arrest was received at the Austin station.

Arrest Jewel Swindle Suspect Sought 6 Years

Abraham Schwartz, 49 years old, 1422 South Halsted street, was arrested in the loop yesterday on a six year old warrant. The complainant is Mrs. Yetta Feldman, 1310 South Harding avenue, who alleges Schwartz sold her fake jewelry in December, 1926. Schwartz was arrested once before on the same charge, but forfeited his bonds and fled. The amount of the alleged swindle is $1,447.

GERMANS RENEW POLITICAL RIOTS; SCHLEICHER ACTS

Parties Warned Disorders Must Cease.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—A renewed wave of terrorism and increased political tension since President Paul von Hindenburg's political truce expired a fortnight ago has caused Chancellor Kurt von Schleicher to issue a final warning that the strictest measures will be taken to enforce peace and order.

The warning is interpreted as an indication that the government anticipates that the struggle with its opponents may be intensified despite Von Schleicher's efforts to win their toleration.

Farmers Defy State.

The revolt against the authority of the state is exemplified by today's proclamation of the Pomeranian Farmers' society. Referring to compulsory farm sales, the society calls upon its members to defend their soil with all the means in their power. Several newspapers, it is charged, have sought to arouse hatreds by references to a "peasants' war."

The government intends to suppress newspapers inciting the public to riots. Persons responsible for inflammatory articles will be jailed. It is further hinted that a system of "precautionary arrest" may be enforced under which dangerous agitators can be detained.

Hitler's Bid for Votes.

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The tiny free state of Lippe, with a population of 164,000, finds itself today in the center of the German limelight to an extent it never dreamed. Its 115,000 voters tomorrow choose a new diet—an event to which ordinarily only slight attention is paid by the nation as the state ranks fourteenth among the reich's seventeen and is a mere speck on the map.

Adolf Hitler, National Socialist leader, decided, however, to stage a comeback in Lippe after his reichstag setback Nov. 6. The little state, therefore, has been deluged with his brown shirts, storm troopers from every part of Germany arriving to help in a house to house and farm to farm campaign.

The Nazi's biggest oratorical guns—Hitler himself, Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Joseph Goebbels, Wilhelm Frick, Gen. Karl Litzmann, Hans Kerrl, and Prince August Wilhelm—spoke in every village.

Make or Break for Nazis.

The Nazi activity compelled the other parties to expend unusual energies in Lippe. Should Hitler, despite this supreme effort, fail to win back an appreciable number of the Nazi voters, who in the November reichstag election dropped to 33,038 compared with 42,280 in July, his claims to head the reich must be considered damaged.

Should he win decisively Chancellor Kurt von Schleicher will have a difficult time realizing his aim of including the Nazis in the government.

Meanwhile Von Schleicher's political decisions, especially concerning the question of appointing Gregor Strasser, Nazi, who recently broke with Hitler, to the post of vice chancellor and commissar of Prussia, were being held in abeyance because of the Lippe election. Newspapers predicted the appointment of Strasser as a method of forcing Hitler to decide whether to support the government of risk new elections.

COURTNEY NAMES 12 MORE AIDS; BAR APPROVES

State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney yesterday announced that the Chicago Bar association had given its official sanction to the appointment of twelve more members of his staff. The time when the new prosecutors will assume their duties and supplant those from the régime of former State's Attorney Swanson has not been decided.

RICHARD B. AUSTIN.

Philip H. Treacy, who is to be assigned to pending bank cases, is one of the new assistants expected to take office immediately. He will aid Assistant State's Attorney Edwin J. Raber.

Thomas A. Dillon, who formerly was an assistant prosecutor, is another new appointee expected to start his duties at once because of his familiarity with trial work.

The others appointed are Richard B. Austin, Frank J. Chistenson, Irwin B. Clorfene, Philip Kobylinski, Joseph Grigal, William J. Lynch, Melvin S. Rembe, Marshall V. Kearney, Julius L. Sherwin and Richard H. Regan. Lynch will be assigned to the blue sky law division and Kearney will specialize on conspiracy and embezzlement cases.

Paris Bar Introduces the Technocracy Cocktail

PARIS, Jan. 14.—[U. P.]—The technocracy cocktail, one means of overcoming the depression, was announced at Harry's New York bar here today. The cocktail costs 20 cents and five of them are guaranteed to make one forget the depression for at least five hours. The five ingredients, representing five nations, are a dash of French and Italian vermouth, Scotch rye, and vodka—the vodka symbolizing the five year plan.

YOU GET A GREAT DEAL MORE AUTOMOBILE!"
MORE ROOMINESS! MORE COMFORT!
MORE LUXURY! MORE ADVANCEMENTS!
MORE STYLE! MORE EXTRA EQUIPMENT!
FINER PERFORMANCE!

THIS magnificent new 1933 Rockne unquestionably deserves your investigation . . . but it isn't bidding for your interest on the basis of being 'way down in price.

It's sold at a remarkably low figure—yet not so low as to necessitate skimping and cheapening.

Its rivals are the $1000 cars—not the cheap cars. It reaches into the field of higher priced cars for its specifications.

In interior equipment, furnishings and upholstery, for example, it so far surpasses anything that's customary, it spoils everybody who sees it for the purely price-appeal cars.

There's big car leg room and body room and head room in the Rockne. And, without question, it's the finest performer on the getaway and the straightaway, on the hills and on the turns, that ever bore so low a price tag.

That's why we urge you to look at the 1933 Rockne—and to drive it—before you're tempted to save a few dollars on some car that gives you much less.

You'll be interested in knowing that the first Rockne, the 1932 Rockne, had the biggest per cent of the total volume ever sold by a first year car. It sold sensationally because it delivered sensational satisfaction to every purchaser. Its most effective advertisement was the unqualified enthusiasm of its owners.

And the new 1933 Rockne is its superior in every respect. It's a low-priced car but not a "price" car. In materials, workmanship and particularly in character, it's a credit to its Studebaker sponsorship . . . and to the kind of people for whom Studebaker has been building quality vehicles for 81 successful years.

COMPARE WHAT YOU GET!

Six cylinder 70 h. p. engine floated in live rubber! • Free wheeling, synchronized shift and silent second! • Automatic switch key starting! • Double-drop, rigid X-frame! • Silent threaded spring shackles! • Quadruply counterweighted crankshafts! • Electro-plated pistons! • Hydraulic shock absorbers! • Extra large brakes! • Extra large capacity batteries! • Safety glass windshields! • Closed bodies wired for radio! • Extra roomy, more luxurious interiors! • Contoured upholstery with special coil springs! • One-piece, all-steel bodies! • Full aerodynamic lines! • Smaller wheels, lower over-all height!

AMANA VILLAGE GROUP CHANGES TO CAPITALISM

Iowa Commune Now on Highway, Air Route.

In this staidly religious community money is changing hands for the first time in three-quarters of a century. More than 1,000 members of the Amana colony are purchasing food and clothing from wages received from their labors. Food is being prepared for the first time in their own homes.

Before the new year, when the capitalistic régime was ushered in, members shared alike the simplest needs, each cultivated his own plot of ground in the community field and received his food from the community kitchen.

The system functioned with little difficulty while the seven villages which make up the Amana colony were isolated from the marts of trade on the Iowa prairies and youthful imaginations could be kept within bounds.

Highway Ends Seclusion.

In recent years, however, a paved highway has cut through the center of the colony and speeding motor cars bear license plates of New York, California, and Texas. A transcontinental air line passes overhead. Coast to coast trains bring travelers through the colony's fertile 26,000 acres.

As the result it has been increasingly difficult to hold the younger generation to the humdrum life and membership in the Amana society has been steadily dwindling.

Under the new system, however, there has been a revival of hope among the members that the organization can be perpetuated. Last June the colonists voted to organize for pecuniary profit under a stock corporation plan.

All Are Stockholders.

Every member received one share of common stock and an additional share of voting stock, with additional shares allotted on the basis of length of membership in the society. Each stockholder has only one vote.

Meanwhile, Arthur Barlow of Cedar Rapids, Ia., who is not a member of the colonies, has been employed as business manager. He has started centralized management of the stores, farms, bakeries, and woolen mills. The latter is the second largest industry in the colony.

Self Contained Community.

There is no idleness, no anxiety for the future, no lack of medical attention, or loss of money.

The society maintains three physicians and one dentist who provide free medical and dental care for stockholders. Funds also are provided to aid those who through old age, misfortune, or sickness, are in want. Food supplies are sold slightly above cost at the stores, but most of the members raise their own.

The woolen mills are being operated on a double shift with most of the employés receiving 10 cents an hour.

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—What its sponsors hope will develop into a nation-wide project for the reclamation and conversion into cash of broken or obsolete jewelry for the purpose of aiding the idle has been started here by Advertising Men's post, No. 209, of the American Legion, it was learned today.

Old rings, broken watches, brooches, and bracelets of a bygone era and all the other knickknacks that have been accumulating the dust of decades in scores of homes will be put to work to help those out of work if the plans of Jules B. Martell, chairman of the Ad Post committee for reclaiming precious metals, are fulfilled.

Frederick D. Brown, president of Frederick D. Brown, Inc., silversmiths of 607 5th avenue, one of the committee of eleven, said that headquarters had been opened on the eighth floor of the Graybar building and that arrangements to coöperate in the project with the Boy Scouts, the Y. M. C. A., the Salvation Army, the Red Cross, and other welfare organizations were being made. He said advertising posts of the legion in Boston and Chicago already were interested in the scheme and it was expected that similar groups would adopt the idea all over the country.

Jewelry brought into the committee will be melted down and assayed and the coöperation of the United States assay office here has been solicited, Mr. Brown said.

FIREMAN SAVES BOY FROM RIVER

STANLEY WASNICK.

Breaks Through Ice

Through prompt action of Eugene Humphreville, a member of the Maywood fire department, a 10 year old boy was saved from drowning yesterday in the Des Plaines river. The lad, Stanley Arnold Wasnick, 311 North 4th avenue, Maywood, broke through the ice at Lake street in Maywood. A motorist saw him clinging to the ice and notified the fire department. Humphreville crawled out and seized the boy as the ice collapsed. A rope was thrown to the fireman and, clinging to Stanley, he was pulled ashore.

HUNT FRIEND OF SLAIN GIRL FOR NEW GRILLING

Rock Island, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—New interest was added today to the quest for the slayers of Miss Rose Gendler, department store clerk, whose body was found in a burlap sack on the ice under the Rock river bridge near Moline, Dec. 22, when Maurice Meyer, friend of the girl and the man with whom she had a telephone conversation the night of her death, was reported missing.

Meyer could not be located when authorities sought him for further questioning. He had been questioned several times last week and a lie detector used on him. Authorities, including crime experts from Northwestern university, did not think there was evidence enough to hold him. Meyer operates an overall cleaning establishment in Moline.

It has been acknowledged by investigators that Meyer has furnished an alibi of his movements the night of the crime. It has been established that Miss Gendler called him on the telephone a few minutes before she left the M. L. Parker company store in Davenport where she was employed, and that Meyer told her he could not take her home because he was ill.

TRUST ACCOUNT ALLEGED TO BE $750,000 SHORT

Winston-Salem, N. C., Jan. 14.—(AP)—An alleged shortage of $750,000 in a trust fund left by the late F. M. Bohannon, rich tobacco manufacturer, led to legal action today against Mrs. Maude B. Trotman, Bohannon's daughter, and the Massachusetts Bonding company of Boston.

The suit was filed by the state of North Carolina, on petition of J. C. Trotman, the present guardian, and seeks to recover the entire amount of the trust fund, $672,284.19, less a credit of $34,364.30.

The complaint does not accuse Mrs. Trotman of intentional misapplication of funds. The blame is placed on W. T. Shire, Charlotte attorney, who acted as joint control agent for the bonding company. He is alleged to have diverted the trust funds to his own use and to have lost huge sums in the stock market. Mrs. Trotman recently filed suit against Shore.

RED LEADER'S EX-WIFE HAS HIM ARRESTED

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 14.—[U. P.]—Carl Hacker, known communist agitator, was in county jail here today because he is more devoted to "communism than to his family."

Arranged on a charge of neglecting to support his two minor children who live here with his divorced wife, Mrs. Dorothy Hacker, the communist leader pleaded not guilty. Trial was postponed until Jan. 19. At the request of his wife, Judge A. L. Steuer raised the bail to $2,000 and Hacker was remanded to the county jail.

Mrs. Hacker charged he failed to help in the support of their children, Richard, 8, and Ruth, 6. She had been separated from her husband for several years and obtained a divorce a year ago. She told the court he frequently said: "My life is devoted to communism; my family comes afterward."

"He makes about $40 a week working for the communists," Mrs. Hacker told Judge Steuer, "And he could easily support the children."

U. S. ENGINEERS HIT AT CLAIMS OF TECHNOCRATS

Cast Vote of Confidence in Economic System.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The American Engineering council, public service body of the engineering profession, today cast a vote of confidence in the existing economic system and sharply denounced the claims of the technocrats.

The claims of technocracy are "exaggerated, intolerant and extravagant," the council declared in a resolution adopted after a snappy debate. The council denied that a machine economy was harmful and asserted that under the existing economic system, higher standards of living could be attained. Technocracy, according to the engineering council, proposes, in effect, a "class dictatorship."

See Confidence Undermined.

Through the resolution, the council charged that the technocrats have put out claims which may have the serious effect of undermining public confidence in "our present civilization." They asserted also that technocracy represented an attempt to capitalize the fears, miseries and uncertainties due to the depression.

"The statements of a group of men organized under the name 'technocracy' have received wide publicity through the press by reason of startling predictions which involve a complete overturn in our economic structure," the council states. "These pronouncements, circulated as coming from engineers, have led to the belief that they represent engineering thought.

Some Findings Discredited.

"The data and statistics brought forward by technocracy in magazine and newspaper articles as a basis for speculative claims, are open to question; some of the findings have been discredited or disproved by other investigations.

"These statements and conclusions may have the serious effect of undermining public confidence in our present civilization; and they hold out an unwarranted promise of a quick solution of economic ills. The method of presentation has been marked by exaggerated, intolerant, and extravagant claims. They have capitalized the fears, miseries and uncertainties due to the depression and have proposed a control which is, in effect, class dictatorship.

Heavy Production Forecast.

"Contrary to these claims, there is nothing inherent in technical improvement which entails economic and social maladjustments. Indeed, technology offers the only possible basis for continuing material progress. The volume of goods produced, distributed, and consumed during the years 1928 and 1929, was not excessive. That volume may and should be surpassed upon the return of prosperity.

"The alleged unmanageability of a machine economy has not been proven. Its dislocations are traceable to improper and unskilled use rather than to inherently harmful characteristics. Complete replacement of men by the machine is precluded by the law of diminishing returns. Contrary to the pronouncements of technocracy, applied science holds the promise of better things to come in a society which fearlessly and intelligently meets its problems."

GUARD VICTIM AFTER ARREST OF KIDNAP GANG

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Fearing that he may be "put on the spot," every precaution will be taken, the police announced today, to protect Ernest Schoeing, convicted bootlegger and briber, who is the principal witness against the five men, including two policemen and an ex-convict, who are under indictment as Schoeing's kidnapers.

Acting Capt. Patrick McVeigh, whose men rounded up the alleged kidnaping gang, said today that he would investigate the possibility of Schoeing being harmed, and that he would also warn the federal authorities of that possibility. Schoeing is at present at liberty in bail under a federal prison sentence for violating the prohibition law and for bribery.

Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney has assigned two picked men to guard Schoeing, and the kidnap victim's temporary residence is being kept secret.

VOICE TEACHER IS ARRESTED ON GIRL'S CHARGES

Charles Dobson, 45 years old, of 434 Oakdale avenue, singer and voice teacher, was under arrest at the North Damen avenue station last night on the complaint of Miss Roberta Schulski, 19 years old, of 2049 Division street. He was held on open charges, but police said he would be booked for attempted rape.

Dobson was arrested at Montrose and Ravenswood avenues by Policeman Robert Schmidt. The policeman said he was attracted to the voice teacher's automobile by the sight of some one on the inside of the car pounding at the windows. Going to the car, Schmidt said he found Miss Schulski hammering at the windows.

At the station Miss Schulski said that Dobson forced her into his car at Belmont and Southport avenues at 9:30 o'clock and held her prisoner for more than an hour, during which time he tried to attack her. Dobson denied Miss Schulski's story in its entirety.

KATE GLEASON'S WILL DISPOSES OF $1,500,000

Rochester, N. Y., Jan 14.—(AP)—Bequests of real estate and personal effects are contained in the will of Kate Gleason, woman industrialist, filed in Surrogate's court today. Miss Gleason died Monday after a brief illness of pneumonia. The estate was estimated at $1,500,000. In addition it is understood Miss Gleason made gifts totalling more than a million dollars in recent years.

Outstanding in the requests mentioned in the will is $100,000 to the city of Rochester to provide a history alcove in the public library as a memorial to Amelia Bretelle, former high school teacher who taught Miss Gleason. Another $100,000 is left to a Baltimore doctor, "to whom I am grateful for his expert knowledge in the use of radium."

The residuary estate is established in a trust fund to be known as the Kate Gleason fund.

POLO PLAYER DIES AFTER HE AIDS IN VICTORY

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—A few minutes after the finish of a polo game in the 105 field artillery armory, the Bronx, tonight, Robert G. Blumenthal, president of the Commercial Factors corporation, collapsed in his dressing room of a heart attack and died. He had played Number 3 on the Northport team which defeated the New York Athletic club, 8 to 5½.

Mr. Blumenthal, who was 37, and served as a lieutenant in the navy during the world war, finished the game apparently in the best of health and was warmly congratulated for his sterling defensive work. Alfred Jaretzki Jr., who played Number 1 for Northport, declared that it was largely because of Mr. Blumenthal's playing that they had been able to win the game.

With Mr. Jaretzki Mr. Blumenthal walked to the dressing room. He chatted gaily about various plays and said nothing of feeling ill. Then he suddenly collapsed.

MRS. ROOSEVELT AGAIN TARGET OF DRY CRITICISM

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Criticism of President Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt for their reported utterances on the liquor question was applauded today by several hundred women attending the prohibition day luncheon of the Women's Christian Temperance union.

The criticism was voiced by the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale, pastor of the Marble Collegiate church, and was directed primarily at an address made by Mrs. Roosevelt on Dec. 9 in which she said conditions brought about by prohibition "require more strength of character" than any conditions she remembered in her youth.

Gets Letter of Protest.

"The average girl of today," she continued, "faces the problem of learning very young how much she can drink of such things as whisky and gin and sticking to the proper quantity."

A group of women leaders of Topeka, Kas., sent Mrs. Roosevelt a letter of "protest" at the time, on which she declined to comment.

"I do not like to publicly criticize a woman, especially the next first lady of the land," Dr. Peale said in his address to the W. C. T. U. women today, "but in the name of heaven how could she stand up and say that every girl early in life must find out how much rum she can hold?

Go West of Hudson.

"Her knowledge of the United States does not go west of the Hudson river, and yet here is this statement by this child of the rich who doesn't know anything about American life.

"I can't say her husband is much better. He went to Pittsburgh and said the United States could raise $200,000,000 or so by taxes on beer. Does he not know that never in the years before prohibition did the United States raise more than $126,000,000 on beer?"

Mrs. Henry Peabody of Boston, head of the Women's League for Law Enforcement, said that on Monday announcement will be made of a new organization to fight any change in the 18th amendment.

TWIN SISTERS WILL CELEBRATE 99TH BIRTHDAYS

For one of the few times in their lives, Mrs. Henrietta Dannenbaum of Philadelphia, now in Atlantic City, and Mrs. Jeanette Lauchheimer of New York, who still bear a striking resemblance, will not spend the anniversary of their birth together.

Mrs. Henry C. Flisher of Philadelphia, 76 year old daughter of Mrs. Dannenbaum, says she believes they are the oldest living twins in the United States. The families of both, she explained, consider it inadvisable for either to make the trip to visit on their birthday.

Both families, incidentally, total more than 30 persons — including 11 grandchildren, 16 great-grandchildren, and four great-great-grandchildren.

Flight to Stratosphere by German Plane Is Delayed

DESSAU, Germany, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Junkers' stratosphere plane, although flyable, does not yet fill the exacting demands of engineers, and at least two or three months will be required before the plane is ready for a tryout in the stratosphere. On several test flights in the low altitudes oscillation was found to be unsatisfactory and this, as well as excessive heat development, is necessitating alterations. Willy Neuenhofer, noted altitude flyer, is the most likely candidate for the flight.

NEW DONOR PLEDGES REESE HOSPITAL AID FOR STOMACH STUDY

Expansion and endowment of the facilities for scientific study of stomach disorders at Michael Reese hospital, financed for 15 years by the late Julius Rosenwald, was announced yesterday. Louis L. Cohen, president of the Union Asbestos and Rubber company, was named as the donor of the gift to continue the work, for which no provision was made in the Rosenwald will.

Although the exact amount was withheld the sum was stated to be one of the largest made for research in Chicago in many months. It will enable an increased staff of 25 to carry on indefinitely the experiments for which the late magnate contributed approximately $10,000 a year. Dr. Heinrich Necheles, formerly of the University of Hamburg, has joined the group as full time physiologist. Prof. H. A. Carlson of the University of Chicago, and Dr. Alfred A. Strauss are other specialists included.

By combining the knowledge and efforts of physiologists, X-ray men, research workers and practicing medical men on the 1,000 cases handled yearly, vast progress has been made in the department, which is unique in this country. It is said to be the only example of such a concentration of various branches to study one branch of disease.

N. SCHREIBER, 86, DRUMMER BOY IN CIVIL WAR, DIES

Nicholas Schreiber, 86 years old, who served as a drummer in the civil war, died in his sleep at his home at 6231 South Peoria street last night.

He was commander of the W. B. Haven post, No. 7, Grand Army of the Republic, and one of the post's two survivors. The sole survivor now is Charles Moses.

Mr. Schreiber was born in Germany and came to America in his boyhood. Shortly after the outbreak of the Civil war he left his home in Joliet and enlisted in Chicago in the 14th Illinois volunteers. He was named drummer boy. He served in several major engagements and was captured by the confederates at Chickamauga. He was a prisoner at Andersonville for seventeen months.

After the war Mr. Schreiber entered the teaming business and his property was burned in the Chicago fire. He worked for Marshall Field & Co. for 22 years, retiring five years ago. Surviving him are three children, John and Clara Schreiber and Mrs. Mary Day.

INFANT DEATH RATE HERE BELOW OTHER BIG CITIES

Chicago is one of the best cities in the world from a health viewpoint to rear a family, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, declared yesterday. He released figures which show the 49.8 infant mortality rate per 1,000 births in Chicago for 1932 is lower than the rate in any of the other seven cities of over 1,000,000 population that were used for comparative purposes.

New York was in second place with an infant mortality rate of 50.9. The other cities, in order of their standing, and the rates for each are as follows: Philadelphia, 51.3; Detroit, 51.5; Los Angeles, 55.3; London, 61.9; Berlin, 67.0; Paris, 82.4.

Dr. Bundesen obtained the European figures by cabling the American counsels in those municipalities. He found out also that the estimated general death rates per 1,000 persons in the European cities for 1932 are higher than the 9.8 rate of Chicago. The rates for the European cities were Berlin, 11.3; London, 13.3, and Paris, 13.9. New York's estimated general death rate for last year was 10.3.

"Funeral by Hursen" Of Course

Hursen Chapels are today recognized as the finest institutions of the kind in this country. The North Side Chapel, particularly, is a masterpiece of beauty, massiveness, facilities and arrangements. It has recently been remodeled. The South Side and West Side Chapels are palaces, convenient for the smaller or the largest funerals.

All Hursen automobile equipment, the finest things on wheels, was built for Hursen along Hursen special designs. Yet the charge is no greater than for equipment far less desirable.

There is no charge for the use of any of the three Hursen Chapels, each equipped with organs of unmatchable tone and size. The charges for Hursen funerals are less than the charges usually made elsewhere. So, call Hursen, of course!

MRS. JUDD ASKS PAROLE BOARD TO SPARE LIFE

Repeats Killing Was Done in Self-Defense.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd, condemned to die Feb. 17 for murder of Agnes Anne Leroi, appealed today to the Arizona board of pardons and paroles to save her from the gallows.

She contended that she killed Mrs. Leroi, for whose death she was convicted of murder in the first degree, and Hedvig Samuelson during a quarrel and in defense of her own life. She added she was prevented by her counsel and her own state of "turmoil mentally" from relating the facts from the witness stand at her trial. She asked the board to grant either:

Commutation to life imprisonment.

Commutation to the lawful penalty for second degree murder [10 years to life].

Commutation to the lawful penalty for manslaughter [1 to 10 years].

A hearing will be granted, probably next week, by the board, composed of Lin B. Orme Sr., chairman; Attorney General Arthur T. Laprade, and Superintendent of Public Instruction Herman Hendrix. Denial of her plea to the board, her counsel said, would lead to an attempt to carry the case to the United States Supreme court.

PLAN SPEED BOAT RACES WHEN GULF WATERWAY OPENS

Completion of the 65 mile stretch of the Illinois waterway from Lockport to Utica by March 1 was predicted yesterday by construction officials at Joliet. Work of filling in the Brandon pool, extending from Lockport to three miles below Joliet, begins tomorrow. Other construction jobs in that region are finished or will be started soon.

Meanwhile, word as to the exact day for the official opening of the lakes to the gulf waterway is expected to be announced here soon. Preparations to celebrate the occasion are now being formulated.

Part of the celebration will include speed boat races, with owners ready to shatter local speed records to win the honor of first passing through the new waterway. These races will be two way affairs, from Chicago to Starved Rock and from Starved Rock to Chicago. Yachtsmen of St. Louis, Peoria, and intermediate cities are already enlisting in the planned races.

PEOPLE GAMBLE ON U. S. SAFETY, ADMIRAL SAYS

Navy Shrinks While Diplomats Talk.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Charges that the United States, by trusting to naval conferences to bring the fleets of other powers down to the American level, was gambling with national security was made today by Rear Admiral William V. Pratt in a message to the Army and Navy Journal. Admiral Pratt retires as chief of naval operations the latter part of next month. He has commanded the United States fleet and held virtually every high official job in the navy in addition to being the mainstay of President Hoover's technical staff at the London naval conference.

Admiral Pratt asserted that the United States fleet is rapidly assuming a third place position below that of Great Britain and Japan. He quoted former President Theodore Roosevelt as asserting in 1901 that congress must build a fleet or accept a secondary position in international affairs. Then he asked the question of whether conditions today were more stable than they were when the former President spoke of an adequate fleet.

Formerly Stood with Hoover.

The remarks of the naval officer occasions some surprise in naval ranks as Admiral Pratt always has stood squarely back of naval arms moves intimated by President Hoover when such action has meant a break with other high ranking officers. He defended the London treaty when the general board, made up of high ranking officers, attacked it as inimical to the best interests of the country.

Officials close to the admiral said his message today was the outgrowth of the failure of the Hoover administration to back up the London treaty with new building. His message in part follows:

"In attempting to analyze the reasons why our people are so indifferent in the matter of national defense, I wonder if much of the trader's methods in stock market dealings has not crept into the practical matter of the building of an adequate fleet.

Security on Margin.

"We like to buy on a margin, trusting that some day the common stock securities we hold in the shape of a navy not built up to treaty terms will prove as good an investment for us as though we had paid the price and invested our money in good substantial bonds, viz.: a navy built to treaty terms.

"What we hope to get out of the gamble is that in the turn of the market we can make a gain in capital investment through the sale of our common stock.

"Expressed in terms of naval craft, this means we hope that by further limitations of armament we may bring the stocks of ships held by others down to the margin held by us and, therefore, the relative values of our holdings increase. This is the gambler's way.

"Unfortunately, others will not sell as we have found after repeated efforts, with the result that year after year we find our margined stocks of naval security dropping lower and lower in the world markets. The secure method, that of buying outright good substantial bonds, comparable in naval terms to building to treaty strength, is the method of the sound buyer who wishes to get an interest return on the capital invested."

Gets Death Penalty

HUBERT MOOR.

DEATH PENALTY IS VERDICT FOR HUBERT C. MOOR

Teacher Convicted of Slaying His Wife.

Marshall, Ill., Jan. 14.—[U. P.]—Death in the electric chair was decreed by a jury today as the penalty Hubert C. Moor, young high school teacher, must pay for shooting his wife Marjorie, to death last August, because she was a careless housekeeper.

The jury deliberated 16 hours. Then 23 year old Carl Carother, youngest and only unmarried man on the jury read the verdict as foreman. Moor, his hands bound with handcuffs, received the news with outward calm.

His attorney moved for a new trial, the court setting early next week for hearing of the motion, which, if overruled, foreshadows fixing date of electrocution in the Chester state prison.

During the trial, Moor stressed his unhappy home life, telling how the dirty dishes his wife left piled in the sink preyed on his mind. The high point of drama was reached when he confessed while testifying that he killed his wife while on an automobile ride last Aug. 15.

"God told me to do it; I heard him," Moor shouted. "I was driven mad by her neglect of our home."

The defense was insanity.

The final court session yesterday was climaxed by State's Attorney Carson Perdunn as he repeated Mrs Moor's dying words as she lay beside Moor in the automobile. "O, papa," he intoned time after time. Many in the courtroom, including several jurors, wept.

WOMAN OPERATES PACK TRAIN OVER MOUNTAIN PATHS

Mrs. Little, last of the old time burro train packers in this region and called by many "the world's greatest woman packer," anticipates increased business in freight to the gold mines this year because of the greater interest in the search for gold.

She weighs 138 pounds and she can pack 25 to 40 burros, guide them all day from a saddle horse and finish up by unloading and caring for the animals before resting, she says. Since she was 21 Mrs. Little has operated pack trains over the steep and winding paths of southwestern Colorado.

When she was younger, Mrs. Little was a rodeo rider of note.

WORLD WORKERS WARN CAPITAL OF "CATASTROPHE"

GENEVA, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Fighting for the forty-hour week as a partial remedy for idleness, workers' delegates to the international unemployment conference warned employers today that the industrial system faces imminent catastrophe unless something is done toward relief.

Conceding that the reduction of hours, even with the maintenance of wage levels which they demand, will not cure existing economic evils, spokesmen for a large part of the world's organized labor insisted that the spread of work would be a contribution valuable to industry as a whole and would decrease the army of idle. They demanded that capital give to workers a larger share of the profits produced by machine efficiency.

Corneille Mertens, Belgian labor leader, said:

"The employers tell us the forty-hour week will kill industry, and they say that is a warning. I also give a warning. If you can do anything useful, do it now. Otherwise it may be too late. Tomorrow you may find the storm has broken over your heads and there will be no opportunity of discussing with us the possibility of shortening the hours of work."

GOV. COMSTOCK TO NAME BODY ON DRY CHANGE

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Gov. William A. Comstock revealed today that he will place the matter of revising the state's prohibition laws in the hands of a special committee to be appointed soon.

The governor believes Michigan should be in a position to take advantage of any modification of the national dry laws but he is not in favor of abolishing state control entirely by repeal of the existing prohibition act without substitution of a new law.

He has indicated that he will extend clemency to dry law violators now serving sentences in state prisons if they are first offenders or "casual" offenders rather than confirmed outlaws who have commercialised the prohibition regime.

Michigan voters Nov. 8 substituted, by a two to one majority, a liquor control commission clause for the bone dry section of the state constitution.

ARGENTINA WILL EXTEND PERIOD OF MARTIAL LAW

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A decree extending for an indefinite period the state of siege authorized by congress Dec. 17 as a result of the discovery of a subversive plot will be issued Monday, a governmental spokesman said today. The measure invoking the state of siege provided that it could be extended at the volition of the government if the legislature were not in session.

A National Transport ship, the Pampa, sailed today carrying to the southernmost bay of San Julian several alleged leaders of last December's radical plot. Among them were Honorio Pueyrredon, former ambassador to Washington, and former Mayor Noel of Buenos Aires.

SO. CONFERENCE ASKS AN INQUIRY ON RECRUITING

Would Penalize All Guilty Schools.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Charging that flagrant recruiting and subsidization of athletes, together with low scholastic standards, exisited in southern colleges, the southern conference today asked an investigation and drastic steps to prohibit such practices.

The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools was asked to institute an investigation in every school in its jurisdiction and to adopt a regulation to withdraw standard college rating from schools found guilty.

Action Far Reaching.

C. P. Miles, athletic director of Virginia Polytechnic institute and president of the conference, hailed the action as "the most far reaching and progressive legislation ever promulgated by an athletic conference" and asserted athletics in the south would be "cleaned up" if the conference recommendation was accepted.

"Its effect will be to put it squarely up to the administrative authorities of the universities and colleges as to how they want athletics conducted in their institutions," Miles said after the executive session. "To make the administrative heads and educational authorities responsible for athletics is our aim."

The action was practically the only business of the final day of the meeting and it followed changes in the conference by-laws which will require a student to pass four-fifths of his college work, where the minimum load is taken, in order to be eligible for intercollegiate athletics. Heretofore the rule has been that the athlete must live up to the scholastic requirements of his particular school. The revision means that many of the conference members must raise their requirements.

Its Bad Practice.

It was asserted today by William L. Mapel, director of the Lee school of journalism at Washington and Lee, that the conference requirement was more rigid than that of any of the member institutions with the exception of Clemson college, South Carolina, and Virginia Military institute.

The resolution asking the investigation aserted that the fundamental purposes of education are not being served "under conditions known to be prevalent in certain institutions," and that on the contrary wrong principles were being inculcated in students by examples of subterfuge and deception.

EAST SEES LIGHT.

Washington, Pa., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Dr. Ralph C. Hutchison, president of Washington and Jefferson college, says he is confident the majority of eastern colleges and universities will have eliminated subsidization of athletes by next fall.

Dr. Hutchison today said he based his conviction on two things: [1] That many schools voluntarily have undertaken to eliminate subsidization, making much progress, and [2] that a recent ruling of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary schools makes return to strictly amateur sports practically mandatory on all schools that value their academic standing and reputation.

"I do not see how any school can ignore this new standard for accrediting," Dr. Hutchison declared.

FEW BACKS INVESTIGATION.

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Dr. W. F. Few, president of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, commenting on the Southern conference's request for an investigation of southern athletes, said today such an inquiry should and probably would be instituted.

"I believe the association will comply with the request," he said. "While I do not know of many abuses, especially in colleges in Virginia and the Carolinas, there has been too much emphasis laid on football farther south where there are large cities.

"The peak of overemphasis on college sports seems to be passed. I am glad of it, but I still think sports have their proper place in college life."

Hornsby Says 'Informers' Drove Him Out

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 14.—[U. P.]—Rogers Hornsby, who left the Chicago Cubs under circumstances which an inquiry by Judge K. M. Landis did not fully reveal, tonight told what he said was the "inside story" of his deposal as manager of the National league pennant winner.

"I wasn't fired. I quit. I quit because I couldn't stand second guessing from the business office," Hornsby said as he gave a volley ball an extra hard slam.

Hornsby was working out in a gymnasium in preparation for his comeback as a player with the St. Louis Cardinals, with whom he started as a major leaguer nearly 15 years ago.

Says He Fooled Informers.

On one of the late summer swings of the Cubs through the east, Hornsby purposely omitted some of the players from the regular morning meeting at Pittsburgh. That afternoon, Hornsby said, President William Veeck, who was with the team, asked him why he had not held the regular meeting.

"I did," Hornsby said he replied, "but I didn't include those two iron heads." After the game Hornsby called for the attention of the players in the dressing room.

"Pat, what would you think of a fellow who informed your owners that you hadn't called a meeting?"

Malone painted a vivid description of such a person. Hornsby then turned to one of the catchers:

"What would you think of a fellow who was an informer?"

The catcher did not reply. A third member of the team, a veteran infielder, also did not reply to the question.

"I then told them what I thought of an informer," Hornsby said, but declined to reveal the language he used. "You wouldn't want to print it, any way," he said.

Blamed for Office Blunders.

Hornsby said he had been "second guessed" all season about the management of the club on the field. He was asked to make shifts among the players and then forced to shoulder the blame when the changes failed to "pan out."

While the club was in Pittsburgh, Hornsby said, he went to Veeck and told him he was tired of "informers running to the business office with stories about what went on between the manager and the players."

He wound up with a demand that he be paid off in full immediately. He announced he was quitting, "here and now."

"But I can't accept your resignation without consulting the board of directors," Veeck is said to have protested.

"Telegraph them," Hornsby said he replied. "I've had enough."

A LAUGH TO WRIGLEY

P. K. Wrigley, chairman of the executive committee and the board of directors of the Chicago Cubs, laughed last night when informed of Rogers Hornsby's comments concerning his ouster as Cub manager last summer.

"Hornsby didn't need to say he was not fired and that he quit," said Wrigley. "We made that plain last summer. But when Hornsby says that Veeck insisted on calling a meeting of the board of directors before accepting Hornsby's resignation — well, that sounds a little fishy to me. Veeck had full power to act as he saw fit. He didn't need to call a meeting or anything of the sort.

Committee O. K.'s Action.

"We liked Hornsby very much. He is a fine fellow, but there were some things in connection with the ball club that we thought could be done a little better. So Veeck appeared before the executive committee of the Cubs, which has more power than the board of directors, and then decided to go east with the team. He was given full power to act. He had a talk with Hornsby and he gave up the managerial job, and his salary was paid in full.

"As far as Hornsby's remarks to his players and their answers, or conversation among them about these players' meetings, I don't know a thing about that."

VEECK GOES TO COAST

Among those expected among the early callers at Veeck's suite in the Los Angeles-Biltmore is Babe Herman, whose purchase from the Cincinnati Reds. Veeck negotiated early last month.

No announcement of the response to Cub contracts sent out ten days ago has been made, but the Veeck departure each winter is interpreted to mean that no serious holdout problems are in the air.

Whether or not Herman has been signed has not been made public, but it has been intimated that the actual signing might be held up pending the arrival of Veeck on the coast, this in deference to the alert photographers.

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Ruth McGinnis of Honesdale, Pa., defeated Mildred Babe Didrikson, 100 to 13, in 18 innings, in the second block of their four block pocket billiard match tonight and gained a lead of 200 to 27.

Miss McGinnis turned in a high run of 14 and dominated play much as she had this afternoon when she won the opening block, 10 to 14. Miss Didrikson's best run was four.

WHEN SCOREKEEPERS WERE SHOUTING FOR HELP

The subs get the idea. Rosenfeld, Northwestern reserve forward, grabs ball off backboard in second half of game with Chicago last night in the Maroons' fieldhouse. The Wildcat reserves were sent in with the score 38 to 7 in favor of Northwestern and just about kept pace with the Maroons from then until the finish, when the score was 52-24. Left to right are: Johnson, Northwestern; Rosenfeld (No. 19), Parsons of Chicago (No. 3), Evans of Chicago (No. 5), Wegner, Chicago, and Kawal and Culver of Northwestern.

Newman Receives Most Valuable Player Trophy

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Presentation of eight trophies to the 1932 Michigan football team and its quarter back, Harry Newman, was made tonight.

Outstanding among the awards was the full size silver football which designated Newman as the most valuable player in the Big Ten. The trophy is awarded annually by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The presentation was made by Harvey T. Woodruff of THE TRIBUNE. Woodruff also gave Newman a replica of the football "to wear as a watch fob when not wearing the other one."

The team was given the Knute Rockne trophy by Prof. Frank G. Dickinson of Illinois, under whose system of rating Michigan was named the team "which showed most against stiff opposition." Certificates were given each member of the team by Prof. Dickinson. Michigan will hold the Rockne trophy for a year.

Prof. Dickinson declared Michigan under his system was not intended to designate the team as national champions.

Coach Harry Kipke, in accepting the award, took cognizance of the rabid partisanship of Pacific coast fans by saying that Michigan regarded "the Dickinson system as fair, always had regarded it as fair, and would continue to accept it, whether it gave disputed honors to schools other than Michigan or not."

JOLIET PRISON ELEVEN BEATS CABERY, 12 TO 6

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 14.—[U. P.]—The Illinois State Penitentiary football team, playing in mid-season form, defeated the Cabery All Stars today, 12 to 6.

Superior passing and open field running contributed to the Convicts' victory. They were cheered by some 3,000 fellow convicts and about 100 visitors. The teams played a 0 to 0 tie Dec. 26.

Brumett, former Illinois State Normal star, playing full back for the All Stars, scored first, late in the second quarter. Both the prison touchdowns came in the third quarter. Linch, right half, went around end for a 10 yard run for one and later Holden, full back, scored the other.

The All Stars' threat near the end of the game went glimmering when a prison player intercepted a pass on his own five yard line.

TUNNEY TO PAY MARA $30,000; SUIT WITHDRAWN

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Tim Mara's suit against Gene Tunney, former world heavyweight boxing champion, for $500,000 has been settled, the New York promoter announced today. Mara has agreed to drop the suit on a cash payment of $30,000 to be made next week.

Retrial of the suit, brought by Mara on a claim for 25 per cent of the former champion's ring earnings, was scheduled for next week. The case was tried originally here two years ago and resulted in a verdict for Tunney after much sensational testimony delving deeply into the inner workings of the big league fight business.

New Trial Ordered.

This verdict later was reversed by the Appellate court and a new trial ordered on the grounds that letters from Tunney to Mara, allegedly confirming the promoter's claim that Tunney had agreed to give him 25 per cent of future earnings for gaining Gene a title match with Jack Dempsey, were not admitted as evidence.

"The lawyers have been dickering for weeks," said Mara, owner of the New York Giants professional football team, and a boxing promoter, "and I have signed a release of all claims. Tunney is ill and payment of the $30,000 to me has been deferred until next Thursday or Friday.

Tunney Denies Contract.

Mara's case was based on his claim that he had agreed to use his political and other influence to persuade Tex Rickard to name Tunney as Jack Dempsey's opponent for a match in 1926 in return for a percentage of the fighter's future earnings.

Tunney claimed that no contract had been made, and that Mara's aid had been invoked only for a match to take place in New York.

Mara, who once offered his lawyers for themselves any judgment that could be obtained just so that his suit was vindicated, explained today the payment of $30,000 on Tunney's part justified his claim.

"In these times," he said, "that's a lot of money for Tunney or anyone else to pay. All I wanted was vindication. Now I've got it."

Craig and Martucci Win Miami Team Golf

Miami, Fla., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Wilson Craig of Akron, O., and Jim Martucci of Teterboro, N. J., won the annual winter pro-team championship of the Miami Country club today, defeating Walter Bourne of Princeton, N. J., and Herman Rama of Fresh Meadow, L. I., 2 and 1, in the 36 hole final round.

Iowa, Trailing 15-4, Rallies to Upset Purdue Five, 35-33

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Purdue's defense collapsed to night after piling up an 11 point lead in the middle of the first half, and the Boilermakers were handed their second straight conference defeat of the season by Iowa, 35 to 33.

It appeared as if Purdue's first points came almost too easily, and when the Boilermakers relaxed they were unable to get together to match the battling Hawkeyes' scoring power. The Boilermakers were leading in the middle of the initial half, 15 to 4, when the sudden Hawkeye storm broke loose. Grim had gone out of the game via the personal foul route and Reigert, who replaced him, became the pivot man in the Iowa drive. A shower of shots had cut Purdue's margin to 22 to 17 at the half.

Iowa Continues Rally.

The Iowa rally continued at the start of the second half, and before Purdue's fans could blink their eyes Iowa was leading, 23 to 22. Purdue immediately became frantic, so frantic that the defense became weaker than ever, although the offense picked up a bit. It was a dog fight for the final ten minutes, with Iowa always managing to keep a point or so in the lead. A minute before the final gun Iowa was leading, 35 to 31, as a result of Kotlow's basket after a scramble under the basket. Hertzing sank one from the side to put Purdue back in scoring distance, but Parmenter's toss from midfield was wide as the final gun cracked. Lineup:

MICHIGAN WINS, 35-30

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Michigan defeated Illinois, 35 to 39, tonight in a rough game in which the Illini lost two men on fouls before the second period was half over. Michigan led at half time, 17 to 10.

It was Illinois' first conference defeat.

Big Ed Garner was the scoring star for the Wolverines, making four baskets and four free throws for 12 points. Michigan outscored Illinois from the floor, getting 13 goals to the visitors' 12, but foul shots counted heavily. Seventeen fouls were called on Illinois and 10 on Michigan.

Bennett Held to 7 Points.

Michigan led all the way, though the visitors had whittled down the margin to one point when Hellmich was ruled out on fouls. The score at this point was 20 to 19. The home team then increased its lead by six points, when Frank Froschauer was sent to the bench on fouls. The Wolverines continued to move ahead, holding a 33 to 21 lead at one stage, but here a deluge of shots, most of them off the finger tips of Jake Kamm, and a parade of Michigan substitutes allowed the Illini to start closing the gap. Garner, Al Plummer, and Ray Altenhof did well from the field and Garner's ability to hit from the foul line gave the Wolverines an even break in 18 tries from the circle.

Cas Bennett helped the Illinois cause early in the game, dropping two followup shots, but Altenhof finally halted him and kept his total down to seven points. Froschauer played a good game until forced out. Illinois scored six times in 12 tries from the foul line.

BADGERS WIN, 38 TO 37

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Wisconsin won an overtime basketball battle from Indiana tonight, 38 to 37. It was the third straight Western conference victory for the Badgers and the second defeat in three Big Ten contests for the Hoosiers.

The score was tied, 33 to 33, at the end of the regulation time. A free throw by Knake, Wisconsin center, and field goals by Rewey and Smith in the overtime gave the game to Wisconsin. Heavenridge and Henry each scored field goals for the Hoosiers in the final five minutes.

Four were ejected on personal fouls. Weir, Indiana forward, led the scoring with 11 points. Knake, Wisconsin, and Heavenridge, Indiana, each got nine.

Indiana sprang into the lead a minute after the game opened on successive field goals by Weir and Heavenridge, and managed to stay ahead until Hamann, Knake, Wichmann, and Smith closed the gap and Wisconsin took a 19 to 16 lead as the half ended.

W. W. Patty of the Indiana university school of education, presented football awards to John Keckich, senior member of the 1932 football team. The first was THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE award, voted to Kekech by members of the team for being the outstanding player on the squad. REIFF PILES UP 29 POINTS TO LEAD WILDCATS

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Capt. Joe Reiff scored nine field goals and 11 free throws for 29 points last night at the University of Chicago fieldhouse. This would have been sufficient to whip the Maroon basketball team. However, some of the other boys from Evanston also succumbed to the scoring fever and the final tabulation was Northwestern, 52; Chicago, 24.

Northwestern's total was the largest piled up this year in the Big Ten and came within one point of equalling Purdue's 1932 record, which, incidentally, was scored against Chicago in the final game of the season.

Wildcats Lead at Half, 23-7.

Reiff's personal scoring record, particularly since 22 points of his total were registered in the last half, held the interest of the crowd of 2,500, most of whom must have been apathetic towards the game after the first ten minutes. Reiff's first half record of seven points, of course, was not remarkable, but his passing figured in establishing Northwestern's 23 to 7 lead at the intermission. Incidentally, Reiff counted 11 points in 13 tries from the free throw line and the last eight of these were consecutive.

Don Brewer, regular forward, suffered an injured ankle in the first half and was replaced by Sam Rosenfeld. After ten minutes of the second half Northwestern led, 38 to 7. This gave Coach Lonborg opportunity to send in all his substitutes. Reiff remained in the game solely because he hopes to lead the Big Ten in scoring as he did two years ago.

Evans Scores 15 Points.

The influx of Northwestern substitutes also gave Chiz Evans of the Maroons, who apparently was the only member of the Chicago squad familiar with the fundamentals of shooting, to build up his personal total to 15 points. This included five field goals, and five free throws in seven attempts.

The less said about the game, the better for the inexperienced and inept Maroons. It may be recorded that all of them played to the best of their ability, but they could not match Northwestern except in the first five minutes, in which time neither quintet scored. Then Wegner of Chicago, made a point on Reiff's accidental tripping foul. Immediately afterward, Al Kawal, at guard in place of Marvin Moonshower, who was injured in the Purdue game, dropped in a field goal for Northwestern, from 15 feet out. Northwestern then piled up a 13 to 1 lead before Evans batted in Chicago's first goal.

Chicago then pulled up to trail at 15 to 7, but Northwestern put on speed to finish the half with a lead of 16 points.

Two Maroons Out on Fouls.

Wegner and Porter of the Maroons, were sent from the game on personal fouls, most of which were acquired in a vain effort to stop Reiff and Johnson under the backboard. Johnson and Reiff were assessed technical fouls for talking out of turn to the officials.

OHIO STATE WINS, 43-28

Columbus, O., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Ohio State continued its drive for the Big Ten basketball championship tonight by defeating Minnesota, 43 to 28.

The teams were unable to score in the first seven minutes of play, but Ohio put on a spurt that gained a 12 to 0 lead before O'Connor sank a long one. Thirteen minutes of play had elapsed before Minnesota scored.

The Gophers then put on a rally and a basket by O'Connor tied the score at 12 all with 3 minutes remaining in the half. Ohio was ahead, 17 to 15, at half time.

Capt. Robinson, Minnesota forward, was the spark of the Minnesota team until he was forced from the game on personal fouls.

The attendance of 5,699 set a season record.

61 SKI LEADERS LEAP TODAY FOR CENTRAL TITLES

Aim at Cary Slide Record of 183 Feet.

Ski Facts

Event—Twenty-seventh annual ski tournament of the Norge Ski club.

Place—Norge Ski club grounds, near Cary, Ill.

Time—1:30 o'clock.

Slide record—183 feet, established by Kaare Walberg, Norway, 1932.

How to get there—By auto, River road north to Des Plaines, then to Northwest highway [route 19] and northwest to Cary, Ill. By train, North Western railroad, specials leaving at 7:55 a. m. and 10:05 a. m.

A jump of more than 183 feet will be the goal of the outstanding skiers in the United States this afternoon when the Century of Progress sports schedule opens with the 27th annual Norge Ski club tournament on the tall steel slide near Cary, Ill. The meet, which will determine the Central Ski association championships in classes A and B, will start at 1:30 o'clock.

The field of 61, which includes members of the United States Olympic teams of last year and 1928, the present national champion, former holders of the American championship, and veteran skiers who have competed on practically all of the United States slides, will be seeking to break the mark of 183 feet established by Kaare Walberg, 19 year old member of the Norwegian Olympic team, last year.

Import Michigan Snow.

Walberg's record leap was made on imported snow. The giant slide and hill again will be packed with imported snow today. The snow, six carloads, scraped off the streets of Escanaba, Mich., arrived in Chicago Friday and workmen immediately prepared the slide. After several practice jumps yesterday, jumpers said the slide and hill were in perfect condition for the tournament.

Participating in the meet with these leading American jumpers this afternoon will be a 19 year old girl from Norway, who embarrassed the dashing young ski gentlemen of Norway no end. She is Johaana Kolstad, billed as the women's world ski jumping champion, who will make her American debut in an exhibition. Miss Kolstad, who left Norway after a ruling that barred mixed competition in Norwegian tournaments, has leaped more than 180 feet in several meets.

Mikkelson Heads List.

Heading the list of 19 jumpers entered in the class A competition are Roy Mikkelson, member of the United States Olympic team last year, and Casper Oimen, who has won the central states title six times. It will be Oimen's first appearance in a tournament since he suffered a broken ankle early last winter. Oimen formerly held the Cary slide record of 178 feet.

Mikkelson, who bore the colors of the Norge Ski club for several years, will be representing another organization this afternoon and will compete on his home slide for the first time since he joined the California Ski association of Auburn, Cal., last year. Mikkelson has been practicing in the California Rockies for several weeks.

The loss of Mikkelson, however, was not felt by the Norge Ski club, for two new members, Lemoyne Batson and Lloyd Ellingson, who were on the American Olympic team last year, have joined the club. Batson, former member of the Canton, S. D., Ski club, was second in the opening tournament in the midwest last week at Oconomowoc, Wis., with a leap of 122 feet.

U. S. Leader in 1930.

Ellingson has competed on Chicagoland slides for several years. A resident of Madison, Wis., Ellingson attended St. Olaf's college and was the leading college jumper in the United States in 1930, ending the year with a point average of 150.6.

Another skier with who mthe Norge Ski club hopes to capture the class A title is Guttorm Paulsen, who won the Oconomowoc meet. Alf Bakken 44-year old veteran of the Norge Ski club team, also is expected to turn in a good performance. Bakken last year jumped 144 and 170 feet with perfect form to win third place.

The winner of the class A championship will be awarded the Chicago medal. This medal has not been won by a Chicago jumper since 1924, when Karl Neilsen, now captain of the Norge team, won the tournament. The entries follow:

HEAVY SCORING RANGERS MEET HAWKS TONIGHT

New Yorkers Go 75 Games Without Shutout.

Manager Lester Patrick, who somehow or other gets about as much ballyhooing as his players, year in and year out, tonight will put his New York Rangers out on the Stadium ice in the hope of achieving the season's first victory for his outfit over the Hawks.

Though his outfit technically leads the American division and the Hawks occupy the cellar, Mr. Patrick this season has seen the Hawks trim his bunch, 4 to 3, in Chicago and hold them to a 1 to 1 tie in a New York encounter.

Hawks Under New Boss.

This visit Mr. Patrick will be the first to pit his managerial clairvoyance against the Hawks under their newly appointed boss, Thomas Patrick Gorman. Teams under the two impresarios have hooked up many times before, however.

Just by way of getting his three year régime under way Mr. Gorman, it is said, seeks to shut out the Rangers. On March 31, 1931, in the second game of the Stanley cup series at New York, the Hawks won, 1 to 0. Two days later, in Chicago, the Hawks were the winners, 2 to 0. Since the former game—a stretch of 75 contests—no team has been able to loop a horsecollar over the necks of the Rangers.

Too Much for Goalies.

In their 48 shutout dodging games last year the Rangers scored 134 goals and in the playoffs they made 18 goals in seven games. This rapid scoring has been supplemented with 64 goals in 21 games this season. The Cook-Boucher-Cook line led the league last year and is out in front again this season. Most of the weekly tabulations have shown Bill Cook leading the American division scorers, with his brother in second place.

While Joseph Farrell, official speller of the hockey ballyhoo in Chicago, has loaded us down with data anent Patrick, Bill Cook, Frank Boucher, and Bun Cook, we are going to wedge in a little item of our own. We are going to mention that Mr. Ching Johnson will be on the Stadium ice tonight.

After a few seasons of sitting with our feet on the cold, cold ice at Hawk hockey games we have become so bold as to state that the bulk of Chicago hockey fans would rather see Ching Johnson play than all the other stars—the Cooks, Howie Morenz, Eddie Shore—name any one you want to, we'll string along with Ching.

The lineups:

BLACKHAWKS.		RANGERS.
Gardiner	G	Aitkenhead
Abel	D	Johnson
Graham	D	Seibert
P. Cook	C	Boucher
March	R W	W. Cook
Mackenzie	L W	F. Cook

BRUINS WIN, 3-2

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A second period raid led by Nels Stewart, former Maroon star, enabled Boston to whip the Maroons, 3 to 2, tonight and regain its three way tie with Detroit and the New York Rangers for first place in the American division of the National Hockey league.

Boston took the lead at the start on Marty Barry's goal, but fell behind again in the first period when Dave Trottier and Baldy Northcott scored for Montreal. Stewart slammed in a goal just seven seconds after the second period started on a double assist by Eddie Shore and Joe Lamb, and won the game ten minutes later, beating Flat Walsh for an unassisted goal.

LEAFS WHIP SENATORS, 5-3

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs, pace setters in the International division of the National Hockey league, won an overtime victory from the Ottawa Senators tonight, 5 to 3.

Six of the eight goals were scored in the third and overtime periods. The Leafs scored one goal in each of the three regulation periods and were leading 3 to 0 when Ottawa unleashed a speedy combination attack that tied the score. Toronto scored twice in the overtime.

RIDING CLUB IS VICTOR IN POLO CONTEST

Prentice Porter's four goals led the Chicago Riding club polo team to its first victory in the senior division of the Metropolitan Indoor Polo league tournament last night when it beat the North Shore Polo and Hunt club, 10 to 1½, at the 124th Field Artillery armory. The North Shore trio jumped into the lead at the end of the first period, but an injury to Herbert, which put him out of the game demoralized the team and it went scoreless from then on.

In the junior division of the Metropolitan league, the South Shore Cardinals defeat the Fort Sheridan trio, 11½ to 9.

ILLINOIS WINS OVER MINNESOTA ON MAT, 24 TO 10

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Illinois defeated Minnesota in a dual wrestling meet tonight, 24 to 10. A feature was the rapid victory of Joe Puerta, national champion in the 126 pound class, who pinned Probst of Minnesota in 2:55.

Sh-h! Did Marble Machine Ruin Pitcher Bush's Paw?

BY EDWARD BURNS.

It is said that professional reformers now are seeking to prove that the second finger of Guy Bush's pitching hand was made sore for the world series by getting caught in the plunger of one of those wicked machines that make marbles go zig zag.

You doubtless have played these machines or watched others play them, and if you have not—where on earth have you been these last two years? You may think that these contraptions are innocent enough, but there is plenty of evidence that they are devices of the devil, to say nothing of the havoc wrought if it is true that Bush, reputed marble machine addict, really got his essential digit caught in the plunger.

Right Away Cops Think of Marbles.

A few weeks ago seven Chicago folks had the misfortune of being murdered on the same evening, greatly exceeding the quota. This incident caused the mayor of Chicago to call in his police chief and captains and tell them that seven murders an evening would, if continued, give the city a bad name. The mayor closed his address, or bawling out, by telling the captains to do something and do it quick.

Well, the captains were pretty scared and as soon as they could get organized for a drive they sent a squad to a place in the loop which is cluttered with the marble machines and ripped out every machine.

The mayor, who is smarter than some policemen, said that he couldn't see what the marble machines had to do with the seven murders, and ordered the devices restored to their owner.

But the incident gave the professional reformers an idea. The reformers planted their stoolpigeons around in various parts of the city and it wasn't any time until a north side stool came in with the story that Bush had been injured while engaging in a marble machine duel with Pat Malone.

Just Another Foul Rumor, Mr. Bush Says.

It happens that Mr. Bush, a true sport if ever there was one, never has done any singing about the finger which hampered him in the world series. News of the injury became known after the series from sources other than Guy himself.

In discussing the report that the finger had been hurt by a marble machine Bush registered indignation on several counts.

"I never gave any alibis about my alleged finger in the world series and I can't see why these reformers are worrying about it at this late date.

"This is the second time in half a year that my name foully has been connected with gambling rumors. The first time, last August, such talk was proved a base libel and the hint that I have been gambling on marble machines is equally vile and foundationless.

"It is true that there is nothing I can't do better than Malone, and shooting them marble machines is one of the things. Slugging that old apple is another. But it doesn't follow that I am a gambler.

"Pat and I have put as high as $4.45 in nickels in one marble machine, but that wasn't gambling—only rent for the machine.

"The trouble with Malone on a marble machine is that he presses, and the harder I give him the needles the harder he presses. I wouldn't be surprised if Malone got his whole hand torn off by a marble machine plunger, he's that violent when the marbles keep banging into the zero hole. But I never could get hurt, for I play 'em gentle.

River Deal Cures Guy of Gambling.

"I can't say I never gambled, for too many folks know about the way Malone and some other players swindled me some time back. You remember the players was popping off about which was the longest river. Root said the Nile and others said the Amazon and I pull out a hundred dollar bill and offer to lay it that it ain't the Nile and it ain't the Amazon.

"Now I was taught that the Missouri-Mississippi is one river and that it is the longest river in the world.

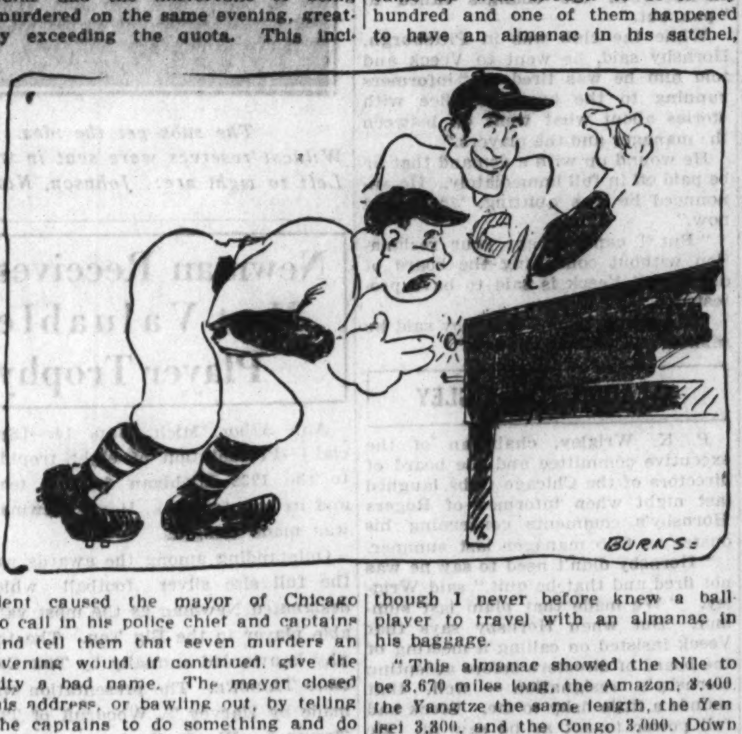
"Well, someone must have kind of expected the argument, for six players came up with enough to cover my hundred and one of them happened to have an almanac in his satchel, though I never before knew a ball player to travel with an almanac in his baggage.

"This almanac showed the Nile to be 3,670 miles long, the Amazon, 3,400 the Yangtze the same length, the Yenisei 3,300, and the Congo 3,000. Down near the bottom was listed my river as not one but two rivers, the Missouri, 2,551 miles long, and the Mississippi, 2,460.

What Good Does Evidence Do? Dough's Gone.

"The players cut my dough without looking up any further references, and though I have visited 25 libraries and furnished more than 100 printed references to Missouri-Mississippi as one river, and the longest in the world, I never have been able to get those players to call the argument even a draw, and that's one of the reasons I never gamble. Each one says he'll give back my dough if the other five will, but I've never been able to get them to vote all at once

"In conclusion I wish to state that I put baseball above everything else and that if Manager Grimm or Commissioner Landis says marble machines are wicked I'll never pull another plunger."



ROCKFORD SWIM TEAM CAPTURES U. OF C. CARNIVAL

Schurz, Defending Champion, Finishes Second.

Table of Points

Rockford	23	Tilden	10
Schurz	15	Roosevelt	7
Maine Township	13	University High	3
Evanston	12	Austin	2
Englewood	10	Senn	1
Hyde Park	10

Rockford high school's well balanced squad, swimming for the first time in the University of Chicago interscholastic, placed in five of the eight events in the ninth annual meet yesterday and accumulated 23 points to win the 1933 title.

Schurz, defending champion, picked up 15 points to take second, but the remaining city league teams were outsplashed by Maine Township and Evanston, which gathered 13 and 12 points, respectively, to place third and fourth.

Two Records Fall.

Two meet records, both of which had been smashed in the preliminaries Friday, were lowered by the same performers yesterday. The Rockford 160 yard relay team, composed of Mike Martinka, Jack Homes, John Hallden and Ray Walters, which had covered the distance Friday in 1:19.2 to break Maine Township's mark of 1:19.5, set in 1931, opened the finals yesterday by completing the eight laps in the fast time of 1:17.6.

Harry Rieke, Schurz backstroke star, did the 100 yards distance in 1:05.5 in Friday's preliminaries, two tenths of a second under the meet record made by Bowman of Evanston in 1930, and yesterday pulled his way to a still newer mark of 1:04.2.

Record May Not Stand.

Ray Walters of Rockford swam the 40 yard free style event of 18.4 during the Friday round, breaking Art Highland's mark of :18.7 set in 1930, but his time yesterday was :18.9, and the preliminary clocking will probably be disallowed because of the discrepancies in the three timers' watches.

The Schurz 180 yard medley relay team, composed of Rieke, Walter Koch, and Matt Sielski, established a record of 1:49.4 for this new event.

Walters Leads Rockford.

Rockford was led by Walters, who swam anchor on the 160 yard relay foursome and won the 40 yard event, and Trahern Ogilby, who led the 220 yard field. Jim Hickey of Tilden, was the individual high point winner with a first in the 100 yard free style and a second in the 40 yard free style.

Brown of Hyde Park was the only other swimmer to place in two individual events, taking second in the 100 yard free style and third in the 40 yard free style.

A total of 130 swimmers from 20 schools, the largest entry in the history of the meet, competed during the two days.

Jackson is a veteran of many years' standing and the defending champion will find it a no easy task to win his first game if Jackson's record is indicative of his game.

Beaten Only Once.

In the northern sectional semifinals, which were held in November in Minneapolis, Jackson finished his schedule of six games with only one defeat, that at the hands of Allen Hall, by the score of 50 to 47 in 54 innings. Jackson's grand average for the six games was .838. The Detroiter turned in a high run of 7 and a best game of 41 innings.

Hall, who also is entered in the world's title event, finished in second place with four games won and two lost, nosing out Earl Lookabaugh of Chicago and Joe McCourt on points. Hall's grand average was the highest registered in the northern section, .905.

Tuesday's schedule, while not yet official, may bring two other Chicago players into action, Arthur Thurnblad, who held the title in 1931, and Allen Hall. Thurnblad probably will clash with young Jay Bozeman in one of the afternoon games, with Hall meeting Cochran at night.

The Baby Ruth Candies have blasted their way to the top in the Chicago Classic league and are now leading the Lorenz Knitters by one game. Despite the fact that the De Barrys show a sensational 1,051 average, they are down in fifth place. The reason for the De Barrys' average is their ability to pile up big totals on their own drives. They have lost about 60 per cent of their games away from home.

Questions and Answers:

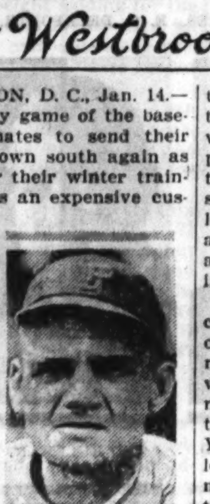
Where and when was the biggest A. B. C. tournament held?—F. E. S.

Though Buffalo claims the record of team entries, 2,639, set in 1931, Chicago's 1929 tournament was in reality the largest. Our last tournament showed 2,523 teams, 4,917 sets of doubles and 9,888 individuals, against Buffalo's 2,639 teams, 3,649 sets of doubles and 7,305 singles. Buffalo paid back in prize money $92,660, against Chicago's $107,790.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

By Westbrook Pegler

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 14.—It is pretty game of the baseball magnates to send their athletes down south again as usual this year for their winter training, because this is an expensive custom which they could discontinue by general agreement if they cared to. The cost is charged largely to the ballyhoo account, and there is a theory that the publicity which is sent out of the little towns in the south by the attending baseball writers brings in customers enough to pay for the travel and maintenance of the teams. Inasmuch as most of the clubs broke no better than even at the turnstiles last year, this idea does not support itself. And the magnates, in all but a few cases, will be paying the price out of the living flesh of their firms this year with little hope of winning it back during the season.



MAX CAREY.

Undoubtedly the cost of pasturage for a ball player in training will be greatly reduced because the hotel proprietors are much more humane than they ever were in the boom days. However, there will be no municipal subsidies unless it could be that Max Carey's Brooklyn Dodgers have managed to talk somebody out of some money in Miami, where a fresh bank roll has been promoted and a very seems to be going.

When Mud Puddle Towns Paid Their Guests.

There were a few seasons at the height of things when dozens of audacious little mud puddle towns down yonder, talked into delusions of grandeur by promoters and chamber of commerce optimists, were offering large inducements to the club owners for the privilege of entertaining their troupes for five or six weeks. There would be a cash subsidy to the proprietor of the team, a special rate for the hotel, a free ball yard, and a silver cornet band to greet the athletes at the train and play them around the village square or plaza, as they liked to call the village square, in the grand parade of welcome.

Speeches would ensue at a luncheon consisting of tepid consomme, breast of rubberized chicken, wilted salad, vanilla ice cream, and coffee. There would be one talk by a local clergyman of the he-man, howdy-brother type who had played ball on the Y. M. C. A. team when he was in college and therefore could address the men as a Dutch uncle. There would then be a pert, up-and-at-'em type of speech from the chairman of the boosters' committee, well salted with witty turns, and concluding with a prediction that inside of five years Magic City would be the Riviera of Oocheegoochee county.

Then the manager of the ball club and the heavy hitting outfielder would fumble a few words into the cordial atmosphere and, finally, as a chaser to speed the go-getters back to their subdivisions and the athletes up to their rooms where they could remove their shoes and yawn, the dean of the baseball writers accompanying the troupe would tell a few bum jokes, forgetting to make the point in each case.

Remember Those Lights Out in the Jungle?

Those were very happy, daffy days in the sunny south and I am sorry they had to end. But they were over long before 1929, and it has now been many a season since those disillusioned hamlets with their crumbling portals and archways and their reeling files of ornamental street lights extending way out into the jungles and on to nowhere have been able to offer a ball club as much as a free hot bath.

This year, with so many of the natives in the little towns using wooden money, local script, or produce in lieu of cash, the barnstorming tours, which used to yield some relief from the expense of training and travel, will be curtailed or canceled. The training trips will be cut short, the personnel will be cut down, and when an old fuzzy league ball is knocked into the swamp behind right field they will holler "lost ball" and knock off playing while all hands go into the weeds to find it back again.

The magnates could have abolished the southern trips entirely, there being no rule which requires them to leave town for training. Some of the minor league clubs train in local gymnasiums and armories and there are still persons, of whom I am glad to say that I am one, who recollect when the eastern teams went way down south to Asbury Park or Lakewood, N. J., to loaf and loll in the sunshine for ten days or two weeks in March.

Boys Reach Down to Bottom of Barrel.

The magnates do not say much about their sufferings, possibly because they do not wish to low rate their properties with persons who might be reckless enough to want to buy them. But there was one proprietor who pawned his life insurance a few years ago to finance his players through their six weeks in a big hotel in Florida, and some of the boys will go to the bottom of the barrel, if not through it, this spring scraping together the price of spring training.

It would be a terrible hardship on the players to be required to do their boiling out in the northern climate with daily workouts in some convention hall and long walks in the snow for their routine. But it has been done and it can be done again.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A young but experienced golfer, Paul Runyan, won the $7,500 fourth annual Agua Caliente open, scoring a victory over par and a select list of professionals here today with a 72 hole total of 287.

A thrilling rally on the last nine accounted for the 2-stroke margin by which the 24-year-old pro from White Plains, N. Y., defeated Horton Smith of Oak Park, Ill., who played in the same threesome and was the runner-up.

Smith Ties Runyan.

Runyan was tied for first at the end of the third day with Craig Wood of Deal, N. J., who had won open tournaments at San Francisco, Pasadena, and Los Angeles before the western winter trail led him here. They had totals of 217, and Horton Smith was two strokes behind them.

At the end of 63 holes at noon today Horton had moved into the lead with Runyan by virtue of playing the first nine in 34, and Wood had fallen back a pace in the race for the $1,500 first prize money, turning the corner in one over par, 37 strokes.

Runyan led off and Horton followed him on the tenth tee. They played the hole in four, par. Runyan made a par three on 11, but Horton missed a putt and was one behind. On 12 they both took birdie fours, and on 13 had par 4s, but on 14 Runyan sank a 20 footer for a birdie 3 and moved two ahead of Smith. Smith lacked a foot of tieing it up on the 15 with a near hole-in-one when his drive stopped just 12 inches short of the cup. He took a birdie two, and Paul got a par.

Smith's Putter on Strike.

Both were nervous on the last three, but Runyan managed to play them in perfect figures, while Horton took bogie fives on the 16th and the 18th when his putter went on a strike, and one trap got in the way.

Meanwhile Craig Wood was trying futilely to match the sub-par pace set by the pair. He toured the first nine in 37 and the last in even par for a 73—290 and a tie for third place. Ray Mangrum, the young Texan, made a marvelous comeback today to tie Wood, whose uncanny putting yesterday broke the 22 year old's heart.

Mangrum led at the half way mark, but while playing with Wood yesterday he dropped nine strokes to the blond giant, and fell well back. Today Mangrum turned the corner with a par 36, and came home in 33, for a 69, the best score of the day, which gave him also a 72 hole total of 290.

Dawson, Cooper Tie.

It took a total of 298, just ten over par, to join the select 20 who divided the $7,500 prize money. Johnny Dawson, Chicago, amateur, finished with a 71—292, to tie with Charles Guest of Deal and Harry Cooper of Chicago for fifth place. It was the best an amateur had done in the four tournaments here.

In the wind on the first day Runyan took a 74, and on the second day he made 69, three under par. He moved into a tie for first place on the third, after being well up from the start, with another 74.

Runyan is not a stranger to the ranks of the winners. He has won four important tournaments, among them the north-south open in 1931 and the Metropolitan P. G. A last year when he beat Gene Sarazen. He finished second in the Miami open last year. In previous tournaments here, he finished in a tie for 12th in 1930, when Sarazen won, did not play in 1931, and came in sixth last year. Altogether he has won $2,150 in Mexico.

Wild Animals Just Laugh at Chill Winter

BY BOB BECKER.

Even though January usually brings low temperatures to the central states and the landscape looks bleak, cold, and cheerless as a home for wild birds and animals, there is no need to feel sorry for our wild life population. It may appear as if midwinter weather were hard for the wild creatures, but, with the possible exception of some of the birds, they are almost as comfortable as we are in well heated homes.

Hiking through several patches of woods and across a number of fields near Wheaton, Ill., a few days ago we took an imaginary roll call of some of the commoner wild animals, and found that most of them know how to spend a comfortable winter, with plenty of food usually on hand.

Woodchuck's a Smart Fellow.

First the woodchuck was paged. We walked through woods where many of them can be seen during the warm months. No need to feel sorry for a woodchuck in winter. He is smart. Before cold weather comes he goes on a long distance eating schedule, gets very fat, and then retires to sleep away the winter days in perfect comfort.

Raccoons have snug dens to which they retire on days when a blizzard howls and makes life anything but a picnic in the open. You are apt to find them holed up, sleeping warm and perfectly contented on bitterly cold days. Walking across a frozen pond during the course of our afternoon out of doors, we remembered the frogs and turtles that used to call the pond their home.

Saving on Food Bills.

No need to feel sorry for these creatures, even though the pond was frozen solid. Nature gives them an easy way to beat winter. They can crawl into the mud, forget it is winter, go into a long sleep, during which life just barely keeps going, and yet come out in the spring quite normal, healthy creatures. This trick of suspended animation is a great one to beat the hardships of winter, because it certainly cuts down on the food bills.

To look at the rounded home of a muskrat in a marsh is enough to give one the shivers on a bitter winter day, because their beehive shelters appear cold, set as they are in an expanse of frozen ice. But there is no need for us to extend any sympathy to the "musquash." Inside of his thick mud and reed home the muskrat has shelter from cold winds and most of his enemies. Moreover, he invariably has ample stocks of food for the winter.

Beaver's All Set.

The beaver also is sitting on top of the world. An exclusive pond for a home, the backwater literally jammed with a supply of poplar trees which were cut for food before ice came, and a big house to sleep in, high and dry above the water line, what further comforts could any animal ask for?

Generally speaking, the wild animals get along very well during winter. But sleet and ice storms may make it difficult for our winter birds. It is then that supplies of food are most needed, because after a sleet storm many natural sources of food are so covered with a sheeting of ice that the birds can't reach them.

PRINCETON IS 6-2 VICTOR OVER HARVARD SEXTET

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Displaying an attack which gained momentum as the game progressed the Princeton hockey team defeated Harvard, 6 to 2, before a crowd of 3,000 in the Hobey Baker Memorial rink here tonight.

Kammer and Poole led the Nassau attack, each accounting for two goals, while Lane and Whitman also scored for the Tigers. Wolcott and Baldwin counted for Harvard in the second and third periods, respectively.

Princeton led 1 to 0 at the conclusion of the first period, increased its margin to 3 to 1 in the second and drove home three goals in the final session.

Princeton took the offense in the opening minutes and the Crimson skaters were content to play a five man defense. Occasionally the visitors would invade Tiger territory, but could not make much headway against the stern defense. Harvard finally abandoned its defense policy and kept its wings well up the ice.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

TITLES BY PERCENTAGE.

SINCE the close of the pro football season The Wake has received numerous letters, principally from Green Bay sources, but also from other points, questioning the percentage system as practiced for determining the championship.

Argument of the Packer adherents is that Green Bay with 10 victories, 3 defeats, and 1 tie made a better showing than the champion Chicago Bears with 6 victories, 1 defeat, and 6 ties, which was the record before the Bears-Portsmouth playoff, at which time Portsmouth had 6 victories, 1 defeat, and 4 ties. Ties were eliminated in the championship percentage rating.

Why, then, say the Green Bay folk, is not Purdue co-champion with Michigan in the Big Ten conference, since neither was defeated, although the Boilermakers were tied by Northwestern? Yet Michigan was accorded an undisputed title.

To figure the Packers in and the Bears out of the title they find it necessary to award 2 points for victories and 1 point for ties, as in hockey, or to give ½ point for ties, as in some other sports. On the first basis, if the final playoff game were eliminated, Green Bay would have 21 points, the Bears 18, and Portsmouth 16. Objection to that is that all elevens do not play the same number of games, so an eleven playing a greater number of games would have an advantage.

If ties were counted half points Green Bay partisans still insist the Packers would have a margin on a percentage basis with the playoff game either omitted or included. Without the playoff it would read, they say, Green Bay, 10½ to 3½ or .750, and Bears, 9 and 4 or 692. With playoff included it would be Green Bay, 10½ to 3½ or 750 and Bears 10 and 4, or 714.

So much for the figures. Yet it would take more than figures to convince most football fans that a team with 7 victories and only one defeat, even if that eleven had been tied several times, was not entitled to higher ranking than an eleven with 10 victories and 3 defeats. In the first instance that team had been inferior by the score at least only once during the season while in the second instance the eleven had been inferior three times.

Chicago's Bears and Green Bay Packers were well matched. It was about a tossup when they met as their games showed. Yet on the season's records it does not seem to us injustice has been done the Packers since the method of computation was known in advance.

Now, whether that is the best way to figure may be open to argument. The Wake inclines to the half game for ties method, adopted in advance of the season and not after the season closes. It might, as some critics of the present plan assert, cause greater effort and prevent "coasting" in the latter stages of games where in the past some field generals have been content to finish in a tie rather than take chances, knowing a tie would not affect adversely the percentage standing.

On the theory of a greater stimulus to avoid ties we think the half game scheme for ties might be worth a season's trial.

BRYAN LOST, BUT NEBRASKA STILL HAS STECHER!

Doc Krone Still Has Him Matched with Londos.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

"It will be the old school against the new at the Coliseum Thursday night when Joe Stecher, the scissors czar of Nebraska, does battle with Jim Londos, the upstart titleholder from Greece, for the highest honor in wrestling, the heavyweight championship of the world."

JOE STECHER.

Thus spake Dr. John Krone yesterday as he went through his daily routine in the spacious gymnasium of the Grapplers' Guild hall. The doctor had just breezed a furlong under wraps around the big playground when he made this statement, and it appeared that he was off on another of those comparison sprees which he first made famous when he coined that memorable simile, "People who live in stone houses should not throw glass," made when the fair name of wrestling was being unjustly sullied by rogues from the rival boxing guild.

What? Isn't Stecher O. K.?

"But why the old school, doctor?" he was asked as he prepared to do a turn on the rowing machine. "Is not Stecher a splendid physical specimen in the very prime of wrestling life? Do you mean to infer that he is not the equal of Londos?"

"Certainly not," retorted the maestro who will wield the promotional baton at the Coliseum Thursday, as he interrupted the rhythmic flexing of his muscles at the rowing contraption. "You misunderstand me. To be sure, there is no wrestler practicing the art today better qualified than Stecher to wrest the greatest prize in sport from Londos. And still I will contend that Joseph represents the old school of wrestling, the golden age when wrestling was wrestling, and you didn't have to be a baritone or an adagio dancer to make your mark.

"Of course, you whippersnappers of today have forgotten that Stecher has already held the world's championship three separate and distinct times, and that this will be his fourth attempt to win it," said the doctor as he pranced daintily through his jumping rope routine. "Verily, he is like unto that other great Nebraskan, William Jennings Bryan. Bryan represented the intellect of the great Cornhusker commonwealth, and Stecher is a perfect example of the physical power. Stecher had greater success than his illustrious predecessor in his field; for where Bryan several times failed to win the presidency, Stecher held the wrestling crown three times. That is probably the only factor to mar the comparison.

"You ask why Stecher came out of retirement to make the comeback which has brought him once more to the very front ranks of the game," said Dr. Krone, beating a tattoo on the gymnasium punching bag. "I will tell you. There he was, a few months ago, sitting in the peace and quiet of his Nebraska estate. There was a fire glowing in the great hearth, Joe was in his smoking jacket and house slippers, and all was right with the world. Then he came across a review of the new holds in wrestling—the airplane spin, the split, the grapevine hold, the flying tackle. Now, Joe is a very even tempered person, but the story of these newfangled holds enraged him, and he vowed then and there to come back and show the boys how it was done in his time.

Can He Beat New Holds?

"Of course Bryan never put over his 16-1 silver plan, and I am not enough of an optimist to predict that Stecher will throw Londos Thursday night. But they do represent the old and the new in wrestling. If Stecher wins, all of the modern frills made popular by Londos will gradually disappear. You might say that the whole fate of wrestling is in the balance in this match. It may be the beginning of a new era."

"But why are you yourself in training?" the doctor was asked as he pummeled the heavy bag. "Surely you are not planning to give an exhibition Thursday night?"

"Of course not," replied the impresario, scampering to the parallel bars for a couple of brief twists. "You do not appreciate the duties of a host, such as mine, at a wrestling entertainment. They are rigorous indeed and I have never yet failed to be in condition to greet each and every one of the customers personally. I will weigh in promptly at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon."

SHIKAT AT RAINBO

Promoter Joe A. Molitor will hold his first wrestling show at the Rainbo Fronton, Clark street and Lawrence avenue, Wednesday night, Jan. 25. The Illinois athletic commission yesterday granted Molitor a promoter's license and a permit. Molitor has signed Richard Shikat as one of the principals in the main bout. Mike Romano, Italian headlock expert, will appear in one of the preliminaries.

AUSTRALIA IS FAR BEHIND IN CRICKET MATCH

ADELAIDE, Australia, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Australian cricket team will resume its first innings against England in the third test match Monday, faced with an uphill fight against fine English bowling.

While a crowd of 50,000 cheered them on, the Australian batsmen today halted England with 341 runs for its first inning, but then made a poor showing against the bowling of G. O. Allen and Harold Larwood in the start of their first, losing four wickets for 109 runs.

With the two English bowlers in fine trim, the four leading Aussie batsmen—W. M. Woodfull, J. Fingleton, Don Bradman, and Stan McCabe—could get only 38 runs.

OFFICIALS NAMED FOR 16TH ANNUAL SILVER SKATES

Entries Close Tomorrow for Saturday and Sunday.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

GEN. JOHN. V. CLINNIN.

Officials for THE TRIBUNE's sixteenth annual Silver Skates Derbies, which will be held next Saturday and Sunday at the Garfield park lagoon, have been named by the Illinois Western Skating association, the governing body for the sport in this territory. Many of these men have been associated with the Silver Skates races since their inception in 1927.

From one race that year the Derbies have expanded until in 1931 there were seven divisions, five for boys and two for girls. Where only 300 competed for the first pair of Silver Skates the entry now annually is more than 4,000.

Hundreds send in individual entries, while as many more compete for clubs and organizations seeking the championship trophy, which was offered in 1931 in memory of the late Walter Eckersall, founder of the races, and which will become the permanent possession of the club winning it three times. This trophy is a handsome silver shaft on which is mounted a figure of victory. The shaft has an ebony base.

Entries Close Tomorrow.

Entries for this year's meet close tomorrow at midnight. None will be accepted if postmarked after that time. Indications now are that a record field will compete despite the lack of skating weather for several weeks. If it is impossible to hold the Silver Skates at Garfield park next week-end an effort will be made to find a suitable course which does not require as long to freeze as do the deep waters of the park lagoon.

A tournament such as Silver Skates requires a great number of trained officials so that the contestants may be registered, placed in their qualifying heats, and so that these races may be held without delay. Through experience the officials have developed an effective program unrivaled by any major meet in the country.

Gen. Clinnin Is Referee.

The referee of the races will be Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of the Illinois athletic commission, who for a number of years has been interested in sports, both amateur and professional. Judge Walter P. Steffen, as in other years, will act as chief of the judges. Capt. Roy E. Davis, an officer in the central association of the A. A. U., will be one of the starters. Theodore A. Gross, who has devoted his time for years to fostering the sport of skating, also will serve as a starter, as will Herman J. Fischer, head of the board of education playground system.

J. J. Lipp, an official of the Western conference and prominent timer at boxing events, will act as chief of the timers. Fred Marquardt will have his usual position as chief of the scorers.

Mahlke, Berz Head Clerks.

The clerks of the course and the number clerks, both important groups of officials, will be in charge of Edward A. Mahlke and Harry Berz, respectively. These men are responsible for the registration and passing out the numbers of the contestants.

Contestants' numbers may be obtained on Saturday at the Garfield park refectory between 11 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. The first preliminary race will start at 2 o'clock. Preliminary races on Saturday will be held in the boys' midget, boys' juvenile, and boys' junior divisions. All other preliminaries and the championships are scheduled for Sunday. Numbers that day will be passed out between 10 a. m. and 12:30 p. m. The first race will start at 1 o'clock.

Halvorsen Chief Inspector.

The inspectors, who are responsible for the conduct of the contestants as they race around the track, will be in charge of Nick Halvorsen. This group is composed principally of skaters who have won Silver Skates in former years. George W. Sonnenleiter Sr. will have charge of the trophies, while George Lloyd will act as bell clerk.

WRIGHT'S STABLE TO BE WINNER IF BLOOD LINES TELL

WellBredHorsesPrepared for Stake Races.

BY FRENCH LANE.

WARREN WRIGHT.

Warren Wright of Chicago, who has assembled some of the most fashionably bred young horses in America in his Calumet farm stable, has instructed his trainer, Dan Stewart, to prepare the budding young stars for the races.

These youthful horses have been wintered at Mr. Wright's Calumet farm, near Lexington and there isn't a group of young horses anywhere in America that has attracted as much attention.

Youthful brothers and sisters, cousins and nephews of many of the most famous horses in America are in the lot. A son of Reigh Count is one of the finest appearing individuals. A full sister to Ladysman is another, and there is also a brother to the good racer, Osculator.

Entered in Big Stakes.

If blood lines mean anything, the names of these youngsters should blaze forth in large headlines before the next racing season hits the halfway mark. Those that have shown promise in their speed tests have been nominated to the most important stakes to be decided in Illinois, New York, Maryland, and Kentucky.

Mr. Wright isn't going to rush his young thoroughbreds into a dizzy money making campaign while they are still growing.

The schedule announced for them yesterday calls for some easy day by day training at Calumet farm all through the early months of the spring. Early in May they will be sent to Arlington Park. They will train there for nearly two months, then will begin going into action.

The stars will be pointed for the Arlington Futurity and Arlington Lassie stakes, each of which will carry a gross value of well over $50,000.

Romance Surounds Stable.

There is much racing romance surrounding Mr. Wright's Calumet farm stable.

The late William M. Wright, founder of Calumet farm and the father of its present owner, was probably the most enthusiastic patron of the standard bred horse [trotters and pacers] that ever came into the game on a big scale in America. But his interest in racing ended with the trotters and pacers. He was a lover of all horses, but the thoroughbred [running horse] sport never interested him.

He raced a most pretentious string of trotters and pacers over the Grand Circuit and other big harness horse association tracks. He stocked his spacious farm with the most fashionable standard bred blood lines obtainable. He had plenty of room for the runners also, but never interested himself in the thoroughbreds enough to register his colors with the Jockey club.

Likes Runners Best.

Warren Wright had watched most of his father's famous horses race in the "sulky" contests and had thrilled at them. He also found time now and then to visit the running tracks when a famous stake race was to be decided. He came to the conclusion that the sleek, stout-hearted runners interested him most, so when Calumet farm came into his possession he began to stock it with the best young thoroughbreds that could be bought. To make room for the thoroughbreds he sold off some of the trotters and pacers.

46 Thoroughbreds on Farm.

The Wright farm, a tract of 1,080 acres in the heart of the blue grass country, is the most remarkable in America.

There are 46 thoroughbreds on the place and 114 standard breds. The runners and the harness nags seem to have struck up a nice friendship. At least no trouble in the ranks has been reported.

For many years before the death of the elder Wright, Dick McMahon, noted driver and conditioner of harness horses, had managed the Calumet farm racing interests. When Calumet farm changed from a standard bred to a thoroughbred nursery, McMahon stayed on as the farm manager and as the boss of the Calumet farm running horse stable.

Trouble Ahead for Rivals.

He's at the helm of the Calumet stable affairs now and with Trainer Stewart, who for years had conditioned the horses which Johnson N. Camden raced, make up a board of strategy which may cause headaches to many establishments which long have been prominent in thoroughbred racing.

Mr. McMahon is most enthusiastic about a 2 year old which Mr. Wright has named Hadagal. It is a son of Sir Gallahad II.-Erne. "Fastest thing on four legs I've ever watched move into action," McMahon told the writer yesterday.

Dick McMahon knows all there is to know about horses. So look out for Hadagal when the starts running next July at Arlington.

Skaters of Intermediate Class Need Hard Training

This is the fifth of a series of articles on ice skating by Irving Jaffee, holder of three Olympic championships and the world's professional title, designed to aid all entrants in The Tribune's Silver Skates Derbies, to be held at Garfield park Jan. 21 and 22. Jaffee won the New York Daily News' Senior Silver Skates in 1926, the Olympic 5,000 meters title in 1928, the Olympic 5,000 and 10,000 meter races in 1932, and the world's professional championship two weeks ago. He also holds the world's amateur record for the mile. Readers wishing to obtain any information on ice skating should send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Irving Jaffee, Chicago Tribune Sports Department, Tribune Tower.

BY IRVING JAFFEE.

In yesterday's article I mentioned the different methods of training that boys in the midget class (under 12 years of age) of THE TRIBUNE's Silver Skates Derby at Garfield park next Saturday and Sunday should follow. The same system should apply for those in the juvenile class for boys 12 and 12, and the junior boys and girls under 16.

Those entered in the intermediate class, for boys of 16 and under 18, must pursue a little more strenuous form of trainng. I did not start my training career until I was 17, and at that time I was fairly well matured, so that I naturally could stand the more difficult training activities which I followed.

For the benefit of those Silver Skates entrants who wish a practical demonstration of some of the points being covered in this series I will be at the Chicago Beach hotel rink between 10 and 12 o'clock this morning.

Train for Endurance, Too.

I would like to recommend, from my own experience in the intermediate class, that all of these boys train with the purpose of building themselves for endurance as well as speed, for the next move in the skating scale for you intermediates is the senior class, where you will match yourselves against the big leaguers of skating.

When I trained for intermediate events I was fortunate in being advised by Norval Baptie, one of America's greatest skaters, and I will try to pass the information he gave me on to you. Baptie told me then, while I was still a green youngster, always "to practice with my head as well as my legs, and to use my wits." To this day I have remembered that advice. I can always hear an imaginary voice saying, "Use your head!" over and over again.

Practice with Older Skaters.

Like all of us, I have made many mistakes in racing, as no doubt you have and will, but of greater importance are the lessons to be learned from these slips. Intermediate boy and girl skaters should train, whenever possible, with skaters older and more experienced than themselves.

Get out and skate with the big guns of the sport, and even though you will be out of your class as far as age and experience are concerned, you will benefit tremendously when racing against your equals. You will establish more sef-confidence, and, having been forced to skate harder against older skaters, it will naturaly make you stronger and faster in your own class.

THE TRIBUNE's Silver Skates intermediate Derby finals will be held over a six lap course, which gives all those entered a fairer opportunity than that of a smaller track. Keep developing that strong, lengthy stroke. When striding from one skate to the other, bring the knees as closely together as possible. This will help you to skate straight, powerful strokes, the proper method for maximum speed. Keep out of pockets in the field during the race and don't become crowded or caught in a bunch. Always be in a position to swing out and sprint when the occasion arrives. Set your eyes on the boy you think has a chance of winning and don't let him get too far away from you.

Save Yourself for Finish.

Intermediate skaters in THE TRIBUNE Derbies will skate half-mile qualifying heats and one mile finals. Keep in mind the problem of getting a good position during the race and being near the front for the final sprint. Don't forget, also, that you get those Silver Skates at the finish line, and if you waste your speed and strength at the start of the race, skating foolishly on the outside of the field instead of conserving yourself for a strong finish, you just won't be there to get those skates.

If any skating meets are being held in Chicago this afternoon I would suggest attending and sizing up the field, making notes on the skaters to watch in your own class in THE TRIBUNE Derbies. Such races also offer an opportunity for a good workout before the big show next week-end.

Knox Team Scores 44-27 Victory Over Cornell Five

Open Meeting Thursday at Hialeah Park

Miami, Fla., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The Miami Jockey club's meeting at Hialeah Park will begin Thursday and continue until March 11, unless Joseph E. Widener decides to race five days a week, thereby stretching the meeting to a later closing date.

It may be that the Hialeah meeting will be the only one in Florida this season. The Florida Derby, feature event of the meeting, will carry $10,000 in added money, while eight other stakes are on the program with added money ranging from $2,000 upward.

Approximately 800 horses are stabled at the course. Post time each day will be 2:15, and again the totalistor will be used for betting.

The Hialeah Inaugural handicap, a 6 furlong test for horses of 3 years and upward, is the opening day feature.

Headliners Await Bell.

Horses of the caliber of Hi-Jack and St. Brideaux have stimulated the interest of racegoers and Mr. Widener is of the opinion that many visitors will go to Miami this season. The lower living costs likely will attract many followers of the turf.

One of the innovations spectators will not find elsewhere is the turf course, which has been built inside the mile and an eighth oval of the regular racing strip. The grass track will be a mile in circumference and it is planned to run several races a week over it, beginning in February. The turf will not be in condition before that time, according to present progress.

HAVANA IS READY

HAVANA, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The nineteenth annual racing meet at Oriental Park will open on Saturday under the management of the Cuban-American Jockey club.

Although this will be the shortest meet in the history of racing in Havana, the added attraction of the Cuban National Grand handicap, with a stake of $50,000, to be run on March 12, the closing day, has awakened intense interest.

Parke Rides 4 Victors for 2d Time in 3 Days

New Orleans, La., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—For the third time since the present meeting at Jefferson Park began, and for the second time within three days, Monte Parke, one of the youngest and lightest jockey riding in training, brought home four winners in one afternoon. He won with Zekiel, Drastic Celt, Slapstick and Peace Lady and finished second with two other horses. He was unplaced only once out of seven chances today.

A nose finish in the day's feature, the Louisiana purse, prevented Parke from getting five winners in a row. Sandwrack, owned by Mrs. M. Estlick and winner by a nose in his previous start, was just up today to nip Whipper Cracker which was piloted by Parke. Parke landed first with two winners immediately preceding the Louisiana, and won in the two races which followed it.

Parke is the leading rider of the meeting. He has 41 winners to his credit including those today. This is the best mark ever rolled up by any rider at a Jefferson Park meeting.

U. S. BOND ISSUE OF HALF BILLION EXPECTED FEB. 1

First Long Term Lien Since Sept., 1931.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan 14.—Belief that the United States treasury will do its first long term financing since Sept. 15, 1931, as of Feb. 1, next, is rapidly gaining ground in Wall street circles. Estimates on the amount of the new financing, including possible short-term obligations, runs as high as $400,000,000 to $500,000,000, taking into account not only the issue of $144,000,000 3¾ per cent certificates of indebtedness which mature on Feb. 1, but also the needs of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and the growing treasury deficit.

Specialists in United States government obligations pointed out today that current market conditions would permit the treasury to offer an issue of 3¼ per cent bonds due in ten or twelve years, or if an even longer maturity were employed, an issue bearing a 3⅜ per cent coupon. The conjecture concerning possible long term financing during the last few days has operated to weaken slightly the market for the long term issues outstanding.

Last Issue Under Par.

The treasury has not attempted any long term financing since the offering of the issue of 3 per cent bonds on Sept. 15, 1931, outstanding in the amount of $767,000,000. This issue has never sold at par since issuance, and at the time they were brought out the banks, who were large buyers of this issue, complained bitterly that the treasury had driven too hard a bargain. The treasury 3s are due Sept. 15, 1955, callable in 1951. An index of the present market is afforded by the treasury 3⅛s which are currently selling slightly under par.

Specialists in governments point out that under the system of short term financing by the treasury, new capital and idle funds have been virtually warehoused in these short term issues. The return on these investments is very slight so that with little hope of appreciation in price the money has been lodged in these issues mainly for protection and safety. To a certain extent the artificiality of the market for these issues has been increased by the fact that the treasury has given preference to holders of maturing issues in alloting new ones. However, with the last flotation, the treasury did make an effort to correct this situation by restricting holders of maturing issues to an allotment of 60 per cent of the amount of the new issue.

Short Terms Less Attractive.

Thus, specialists in government issues are inclined to point out that in the future there will be less inclination to purchase short term obligations at a minus yield in order to get preference in allotments of new issues. A certain section of financial opinion favors out and out competitive bidding for new short term issues. It is estimated that of approximately $600,000,000 non interest bearing treasury bills outstanding, all but about $25,000,000 are held by a small group of institutions.

The new treasury financing to be dones as of Feb. 1, 1933, will not be concerned with the refunding of the Liberty loans. The Liberty 3½s and the First Liberty 4¼s, outstanding in amount of $1,392,000,000 and $536,000,000, respectively, are not callable until June 15, next, and the Fourth Liberty 4¼s, outstanding in the amount of $6,268,000,000, until Oct. 15, 1933.

Deficit Billion and a Fifth.

The deficit in the United States treasury is now well over $1,200,000,000, and is growing at the rate of something like $6,000,000 a day. The treasury has notified depository banks throughout the country that it will draw $13,100,000 from its balances with them today, leaving a total on deposit of but $333,822,000. The Reconstruction Finance corporation, as of Jan. 10, 1933, has taken a total of $528,256,214, of which more than $50,000,000 has been used since the first of the year.

At the end of the fiscal year 1932, the public debt of the United States outstanding was $19,487,002,444, or an increase for the year of $2,685,720,952. During the year the cumulative sinking fund of $410,850,121 was applied to retire $318,000,000 of 3½ per cent notes, $94,255,550 treasury 3⅜ per cent bonds, and $229,200 First Liberty Loan 4¼s.

This is the third of four articles, dealing with proposals for currency inflation and tariff revision. This article relates what already has been done toward inflation and the lack of effect on commodity prices. The final article will appear on Tuesday.

BY SCRUTATOR.

While the battle of arguments goes on between the proponents and opponents of inflation, both in and out of congress, it is probable that few people realize that the United States has indulged in quite a bit of inflation in the last three years. And the facts are that commodity prices, incomes, and business activity have shrunk drastically and almost steadily.

This inflation has been largely by indirect means and limited in extent. About the best that the advocates of inflation can claim for it is that it may have prevented still greater declines in prices and activity. Now they maintain that direct and further inflation is needed to cure our ills. On the other hand, opponents of inflation can point to the facts and insist that an increased dose would be futile.

Means of Deflation.

What have been some of the inflationary influences that already have been in operation? The most positive of these probably has been the increase in the country's gold stock, coupled with increased gold production throughout the world, which has been stimulated by the high price of gold in terms of commodities.

Our total gold stock was about 4¼ billion in 1929. It rose to about 5 billion in August, 1931, fell to 4 billion last June, and now stands around 4½ billion dollars. Thus our store of gold is about 250 million dollars above what it was in boom times. Total money in circulation was around 4¾ billion dollars in 1929, fell below 4½ billions in 1931, and now has risen to nearly 5⅝ billion dollars.

So, as far as money is concerned, it would seem that if our supply of gold and total currency was sufficient to conduct the nation's business at the rate of activity and the level of prices during boom times the even larger money supply should be ample at the present time of lower prices and reduced activity.

Federal Government Aids.

Another inflationary influence has been the federal government's financial operations, which have resulted in an aggregate deficit of about 5 billion dollars in the last 2½ years. This deficit has been financed largely by selling securities to the banks, which in turn are able to use them as a basis for credit and currency expansion through borrowing from the federal reserve banks.

Moreover, the policies of the federal reserve system have been inflationary. The Glass-Steagall act authorized the reserve banks to issue currency based on 60 per cent backing of government securities and 40 per cent gold. So the reserve banks increased their holdings of government securities to about 1 billion 812 million dollars and issued additional currency. Moreover, the easy money policy of the reserve system has fostered inflation by holding money rates unduly low.

Inflation Fails to Boost Prices.

Thus the vast borrowings by the government have tended toward inflation by bringing out comparatively stagnant capital and turning it into active circulation. The dispersal of vast sums through the Reconstruction Finance corporation and other government credit agencies also has at least arrested more severe deflation. And the federal reserve system's policies have tended to inflate currency and credit.

But these inflationary efforts have been unable to stem the decline in commodity prices. The index of wholesale commodity prices compiled by the bureau of labor statistics shows that the average of all prices, using 1926 prices as 100, fell from 95.3 in 1929 to about 63 at present. The index for farm products dropped from 104.9 in 1929 to about 49. It is this greater relative decline in farm products that constitutes the chief inequality in our price structure.

New York Federal Reserve Has Better Year in 1932

New York, Jan. 14.—The statement of the New York Federal Reserve bank for 1932 shows net income of $10,404,550 compared with $1,532,030 in 1931. Total earnings for the year were $15,948,942, against $7,555,213. After payment of dividends of $3,562,030 there was added to surplus from current income $6,842,520. In the previous year the bank reported a deficit of $2,359,518 after dividends. Total surplus amounted to $85,058,421, against $75,077,154 at the end of 1931.

"If we want a controlled currency," Long asked, "why not gold and aluminum? That's controlled enough."

Barkley said: "Why not brass?"

Thomas observed: "If we could make brass legal tender, we'd be the richest nation in the world—we have a good supply on the floor of the senate!"

N. Y. BANK STOCKS NET INVESTORS 18½ PCT. IN 1932

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—An investor who bought a group of the leading New York bank stocks on Jan. 1, 1932, would have received dividends during the last year equal to 6½ per cent on his investment and experienced an appreciation in market value of 12 per cent, making a total return of 18½ per cent on his investment in the worst year of the depression, according to a calculation by Schatskin & Co.

Dividends paid by fifteen leading banks of the city in 1932 aggregated $101,696,500, the company says, compared with $128,881,415 in 1931, $128,856,432 in 1930, and $114,527,772 in 1929. Dividend distributions in the last year were about 21 per cent less than in 1931, due principally to reductions in the rate of payment by five banks.

PROCTER, GAMBLE VOTE DIVIDEND; OUTLOOK BETTER

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Directors of the Procter & Gamble company today declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents on common stock against 50 cents three months ago.

The dividend was declared payable Feb. 15 to stockholders of record Jan. 5. Earnings of the company in the six months ending Dec. 31 were announced as $4,621,700.78 or 64 cents per share on the common stock, as against $9,299,156 in the corresponding period of 1931.

Kentucky Life Names Reed to Vote Stock

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Former United States Seantor James Reed of Missouri today was chosen voting trustee for the 148,050 shares of Missouri State Life Insurance company stock owned by the Kentucky Home Life Insurance company.

As voting trustee, former Senator Reed will exercise his own judgment as to the best interests of all parties concerned at the impending annual meeting of the Missouri State Life. He was elected at a meeting of the Kentucky Home Life directors this afternoon.

His election supersedes an agreement made at a Kentucky Home directors meeting last month which related to election of directors of the Missouri State Life.

Under that agreement, now abrogated, Mayor William B. Harrison, president of the Kentucky Home Life, and J. Dan Talbott, Kentucky state auditor, were to designate four members of the Missouri Life board, and the insurance interests of Julius H. Barnes and Frank Cohen were to name two.

The agreement further provided that if the Kentucky Home's block of stock were entitled to elect more than six Missouri State directors, Lewis Guthrie, secretary-treasurer of the Kentucky Home Life, would use his own discretion in naming the one or more remaining.

HOUSE LEADER EXPECTS NO QUICK INFLATION ACTION

Washington, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Chairman Steagall of the house banking committee said today that hearings will be held on currency expansion proposals but that he doubted "whether there will be any legislation this session."

"I question whether we can do any more this session than just blaze the trail," Steagall said. "There are a number of inflation plans before the committee and they will be given consideration along with the Busby bill.

"The main thing just now in this emergency is to work out some way of relieving the mortgage situation and we are giving it close attention."

Steagall said that "even if we did pass some kind of inflation bill, it would be vetoed."

Representative Busby [Dem., Miss.], introduced a measure today calling for the issuance of an additional three billion dollars of currency.

STEEL FACTORIES AT YOUNGSTOWN STEP UP OUTPUT

Youngstown, O., Jan. 14.—[U.P.]—Steel plant operations in Youngstown district plants will advance to 19 per cent capacity during the coming week, officials predicted today. This compares with 17 per cent the current week and brings the district industrial average to the highest level in three months.

Additional open hearths will be smelting steel at Republic Steel corporation and Carnegie Steel plants here. Youngstown Sheet and Tube production will be higher.

STOCKS SLIDE DOWNWARD, BUT RALLY AT CLOSE

Price Changes Small; Trading Quiet.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—News of market importance was scarce and speculative interest lacking on the New York Stock exchange today. Swings of as much as a point in the price of the handful of trading mediums making any pretense to activity were rare indeed.

The opening was irregular and quiet, but prices developed a disposition to react during the first half hour, and quotations from then on until well toward the close ranged generally below those of last night. In the last few minutes enough scattered buying, the larger part of it for covering accounts, developed to boost levels back to around their starting points. Gains and losses were pretty evenly divided among the leaders, with small fractions the rule both ways.

Only News Discounted.

The weekly carloadings report, showing a seasonal gain of 28,873 cars last week, was about in line with expectations, and had no appreciable effect on the carriers. The only other news item to claim attention was the cut in the Proctor & Gamble dividend, which likewise had been pretty thoroughly discounted by selling in the issue earlier in the week. The reduction places the rate on a $1.50 annual basis instead of $2.

Buying of Reynolds Tobacco B shares was a mild feature of the second hour of trading. The company's earnings report, made public a few days ago, was supposed to be the reason for the display of enthusiasm. Other Tobacco shares firmed up in the wake of the group leader.

Motors Ease Off.

The motors signalized the last day of the National Automobile show here with fresh recessions—most of them fractional, however. Chrysler gave up a point, however. Selling of this stock, which has been under way for several days, is understood to have originated chiefly with one of the largest investment trusts. The performance of the automobile group this week has been a big disappointment, in view of their wonted policy of putting on a "show" to help "automobile week."

Reports forecasting a slight improvement of conditions in the steel industry during the coming week failed to excite the steel stocks. Demands of the motor industry and an expansion of pipe buying are given as reasons for the expectations of better things in this major industry.

BRANCH BANKING UNDER ATTACK BY UNIT BANKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—Aroused at the proposal in section 19 of the Glass banking bill to extend branch banking, a group of unit bankers has organized the Association of Independent Unit Banks of America. It will fight the movement for branch banking.

Following the association's canvass, replies have been received from 5,592 banks expressing opposition and from 224 favoring branch banking. Ballots have been sent to all of the 18,500 banks in this country, according to a bulletin issued by the association. Additional returns are expected.

The association has its headquarters in Harrisburg, Pa., and is under the direction of Peter G. Cameron, executive secretary.

CENTRAL ILLINOIS SECURITIES HAS LOWER EARNINGS

The Central Illinois Securities corporation yesterday reported 1932 net earning of $385,595 before depreciation, compared with $595,259 the preceding year. There was an indicated depreciation of $3,280,000 in the value of the company's portfolio last year. In the preceding year the company had a realized loss on sale of securities of $217,997 and an unrealized depreciation of $1,159,000.

By reducing its capital last year, the company set up a capital surplus of $6,145,934. Against that it charged the accumulated depreciation of $6,280,357 on its loans and investments. After other adjustments there remained a capital surplus of $1,319,121 and an earned surplus of $156,075.

Uptrend Began 6 Months Ago, Asserts Bush

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The country has been in the first stages of economic recovery for the last six months, in the opinion of Irving T. Bush, prominent industrialist, and a realistic approach to the grave problems still to be met will hasten better times.

IRVING T. BUSH.

"It is said our present troubles are the old economic laws have not worked," he said in an interview. "The reverse is true. We are in trouble because the old laws have worked —ruthlessly. We are paying the price of disobedience to those laws.

"We cannot borrow ourselves out of debt, nor can we collect from debtors more than they can pay. It is time to quit kidding ourselves."

Depression World Problem.

Bush, as chairman of the Bush Terminal company, with its eight piers and some 140 warehouses and loft buildings housing some 250 wholesalers and manufacturers with worldwide affiliations, sees the depression as a world problem, to be solved only through international coöperation.

"But economic solutions are not as difficult as politics have made them seem. War debts could be transferred into the hands of private investors through converting them into bonds, and thus removed once and for all as a continuous source of international irritation. Tariffs are not impeding world trade so much as restrictions on dealings in foreign exchange."

The immediate problem in restoring world stability, said Bush, is a definite settlement of the intergovernmental debt controversy. "I am not a cancellationist. There is an amount which we can collect, and an amount which we cannot collect. The nations need certainty; uncertainty kills courage and destroys initiative."

Urges Funding War Debts.

The debt controversy has been made bitter by political wrangling, he continued, and it hangs as a dark shadow over every international conference. Bush has urged for some time that the debts be funded through an issue of bonds, and believes that the time is now ripe.

"The French default was unnecessary and unfortunate," he declared, "but France would not have defaulted if it had been a debt held by private investors. These debts should be removed from the field of political controversy as soon as possible, through making them a direct obligation of investors. They are now an indirect obligation to holders of our Liberty bonds, but this relationship is too vague and indirect to be a potent factor in mass psychology, so far as foreigners are concerned."

"Once the debt uncertainty is removed, Great Britain could proceed to stabilize sterling—as the first step to stabilizing currencies and removing exchange restrictions which are hampering trade more than tariffs."

CRASH OF 1929 HAD A PARALLEL 212 YEARS AGO

South Sea Bubble Burst Then.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

"There never was such distraction and undoing in any country. You can't suppose the number of families undone. One may say almost every one is ruined . . .

"The consternation is inexpressible, the rage beyond description. Thousands of families will be reduced to beggary . . .

"The poor unwary people have been delivered into the polluted jaws of vultures and tigers. . . ."

These are actual quotations from people facing the worst depression they had ever known—the depression of 1721. They are taken from a survey of those times compiled by the Bank of Nova Scotia to soothe the hard pressed business man and give him perspective.

Many have sought to comfort themselves by recalling previous depressions during the last century, but this bank goes back 212 years to get a picture of developments comparable to those of the present.

The South Sea Bubble.

The depression of 1721 followed the collapse of the South Sea Bubble and the social and political results were what might have been expected.

A minister of the British crown committed suicide. The chancellor of the exchequer and other members of the house of commons were expelled from parliament and imprisoned in the Tower. The prime minister was forced to resign. Some of the directors of the South Sea company joined the chancellor in the Tower and saw their estates confiscated. Newspapers exhorted that "we turn our thoughts from stock-jobbing to industry and frugal methods of life."

"The nations of Europe," recalls the bank survey, "painfully recovered their equilibrium, though it was some years before the confidence of investor, so severely shaken by this debacle, became strong enough to supply adequately the growing capital needs of commerce."

Hardships ultimately fell heavily upon holders of government obligations who had to accept a lowering of interest rates.

Start of the Company.

The South Sea company had been incorporated in 1711 as the "Governor and company of the merchants of Great Britain, trading to the South Seas and other parts of America, and for the encouragement of the fishing."

In 1719, after John Law had put over the Mississippi company in France, Sir John Brunt, a director of the South Sea company, made a similar proposal in England. Both countries were staggering under heavy national debts resulting from the long war of the Spanish succession which ended in 1713.

The idea was to get the public, especially the holders of government obligations, stirred up about the speculative opportunities in the South Sea company and then to trade them stock of the company for their government bonds, thereby reducing the government debt.

Holders of bonds quickly began to fall for the scheme and readily converted their bonds into stock, except the Bank of England and the big East India company. The "prosperity" drive was on.

Price of Stock Soars.

Rumors were circulated by South Sea company directors that Britain and Spain were about to conclude a new treaty granting the British free trade with Spanish colonies, and that Spain would exchange Gibraltar for ports in Peru.

In February, 1720, the stock was selling for 129. In March it went to 280, and by May 25 it had reached 500, following the declaration of a 10 per cent dividend in stock.

"The demon of stock-jobbing is the genious of this place," wrote Edward Harley, brother of the earl of Oxford in June. "This fills all hearts, tongues,

New York, Jan. 14.—Heavy buying of obligations of the Interborough Rapid Transit company was a feature of an otherwise irregularly lower bond market on the stock exchange today.

Interborough 7s, which matured last year, were bid up 3⅜ points, while the 6s which also matured last year held unchanged. Interborough refunding 5s, due 1966, were bid up 1¾ points for the day and Manhattan Railway, first 4s, due 1990, climbed 1½ points. Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit 6s failed to share in the advance, losing ¼ of a point. In the tractions the active Third Avenue Railway adjustment 5s, due 1960, gained a point.

Rails Drift Lower.

In the general run of domestic corporation issues railroad bonds drifted lower, many losing a point or more. Public Utility bonds held firm on the average, but in the industrial group prices were generally easier. In the latter section of the list United Drug of Delaware 5s, due 1953, dropped 2⅝ points in active dealings; Loew's, Inc., 6 per cent debentures, due 1941, off 1½; National Dairy Products 5¼s, due 1948, off ½, and Tobacco Products of New Jersey 6½s, due 2020, off ⅛.

German government loans rose fractionally but German bank and corporation issues finished irregularly lower during the two hour trading period today. Austrian government 7s, due 1957, climbed 2 points and United Kingdom 5½s, due 1937, were up ⅛ of a point. Bonds of the Australian group showed fractional variations for the most part. South America loans were dull.

United States government bonds closed off 3-32ds to up 4-32ds point, with the major losses accruing to the treasury 3⅛s and 3s.

Why Lose Hard-Won Dollars?

Four years ago a considerable portion of our people was engaging in the wildest orgy of speculation ever known. Many individuals were riding the high tide of a fictitious prosperity. With their incomes and their investments it was a case of "easy come, easy go." They thought abnormal earnings justified the taking of long chances.

But for the great mass of Americans the dollars never have come very easily even in good times. They always have found that earning a comfortable livelihood has been a task to occupy most of their time and attention. And the surplus earnings that they have been able to accumulate have never been unduly large, even with the exercise of reasonable thrift.

The great stock market boom developed a Horatio Alger style of investment literature. The great fortunes made through speculative ventures in the pioneering days of our big industries were called to mind. In fact, almost every line of business was touted as a "sure thing" for future profits. It was amazing how many of our prominent financiers and industrialists thought an unexampled era of prolonged prosperity had arrived. But it was tragic that so many people of small means believed that investment had become merely a matter of buying something and watching the profits accumulate.

All that is past now. Many large fortunes have been vastly deflated in the collapse of security prices and many small investors have had their savings wiped out. It has been a bitter lesson, but it may serve a good purpose, for a new period of accumulation is at hand just as such periods have followed past depressions.

Recently a prominent American financier pointed out that the chief fault of American investors is that they will not devote the same amount of effort and attention to investing their surplus earnings as they do to earning that surplus. Contrary to the adage, it is a case of "hard come, easy go." He computed that an investment of $1,000 made 500 years ago and with 5 per cent interest compounded would now represent more than all the money in the world.

The break in this theoretical argument is that no investment is absolutely safe over any considerable period of time; also that even the wisest men are not immune from mistakes in judgment, while their heirs may lack the talent for investment. But the argument does emphasize the necessity for every investor to exercise the greatest care and study in putting his surplus earnings to work.

Accumulated capital is the great agency of progress. But like every powerful machine or force it must be properly directed to accomplish its most useful purpose.

UTILITIES ISSUES LEAD IN WEEK'S BOND MARKETING

Banks Take New York's $50,000,000 Notes.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—New bond and note issues offered to investors this week totaled $20,685,000. Of that sum, $15,450,000 represented new utility financing, the largest of this sort in any week since mid-November.

The balance of this week's new financing was municipal. Last week's total offerings aggregated $27,950,000 and during the second week of January, 1932, the figure was $17,302,371.

Banks Lend to New York.

New York state issued and sold to banks $50,000,000 of one year 1 per cent notes in anticipation of current revenues and taxes. This issue was allotted by Controller Tremaine, with the largest amount sold to an institution being limited to $1,250,000. A total of $200,000,000 in subscriptions were received.

In some instances relatively small blocks of these notes were reoffered at prices to yield less than 1 per cent, with the general accepted market ruling ⅞ of 1 per cent bid and ⅝ of 1 per cent asked.

In the Canadian market an issue of $9,000,000 province of Quebec thirty year 4½ per cent bonds was offered by a Canadian banking group this week at a price of 98½, to yield about 4.60 per cent. The issue, payable both as to principal and interest in Canadian funds, was reported oversubscribed. Few of the bonds were placed in the New York market.

Utility Offerings Sold.

All of the new public utility issues offered this week quickly were sold. That new financing comprised $8,500,000 Washington, D. C., 5 per cent first mortgage bonds, due 1958; $5,500,000 Hackensack Water company 5 per cent notes, due Jan. 1, 1938; $950,000 Lowell, Mass., Gas Light company 5½s, due 1947, and $500,000 Dallas Power and Light company 5s, due 1952.

The largest of the seven new municipal issues placed on the market this week were those of $2,160,000 city and county of San Francisco 5s and 4s, due 1936 to 1947, priced to yield 3 to 4.10 per cent, and $2,000,000 city of Syracuse, N. Y., 1¾ per cent tax anticipation notes, due Sept. 13, 1933.

Offerings of bonds in the New York market, by groups, for this and last week, follow:

	This week.	Last week.
Public utility	$15,450,000	$13,000,000
State and municipal	5,235,000	5,950,000
Fed int credit banks		9,000,000
Totals	$20,685,000	$27,950,000

New state and municipal financing scheduled for next week totals $18,593,551, says the Daily Bond Buyer. Toledo, O., will offer an $8,000,000 issue of 6 per cent water bonds on Tuesday, while Monday the state of Louisiana will consider bids on a $5,000,000 offering, to bear not more than 6 per cent interest.

ALFRED DECKER ADJUSTS TO CUT FURTHER LOSS

Alfred Decker & Cohn, Inc., has written down accounts receivable, reduced expenses through consolidating departments, and cut inventories to an extent that further unfavorable business conditions can result only in nominal losses, Alfred Decker, president, says in his annual report released yesterday.

The company had a deficit of $1,240,242 for the fiscal year ended Oct. 31, as compared with a deficit of $884,418 in the preceding fiscal year. Operating loss was $877,181, against $474,102 last year.

The company maintained a strong current position. Current assets were $1,370,329 at the close of the year, against current liabilities of $269,674, a ratio of 5 to 1.

ILLINOIS SHEEP RAISERS LOWER SURPLUS SUPPLY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—(AP)—While congress debates the allotment plan which would encourage curtailment of production in an effort to boost farm prices, Illinois' sheep raisers are attending to their over production problem. In Illinois there were 178,000 head on feed Jan. 1, 1933; there were 208,000 on feed Jan. 1, 1932, and 180,000 on Jan. 1, 1931.

Statistics available by the department of agriculture show there were 5,239,000 head of sheep and lambs on feed for market in the principal feeding states Jan. 1, 1933. This was a decrease of 900,000 head, or 15 per cent from the revised estimate of 6,135,000 head on feed Jan. 1, 1932. For Jan. 1, 1931, the number was 5,428,000 head and for Jan. 1, 1930, 5,886,000 head.

British Get 50 Year Grant for Istanbul Rail Car Ferry

ISTANBUL, Jan. 14.—Turkey's first concession to British interests since the world war has been approved by the cabinet for a train ferry service between Sirkeji, the European railway terminus of Istanbul, and the Asiatic terminus across the Bosporus. The British group will have a monopoly for fifty years of the railway car and vehicle ferry service. The new service will afford an outlet into central Europe for Turkish perishable produce.

London Mart Steady; Buyers Seeking Underpriced Stocks

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The upward swing in the stock markets, which the New Year heralded in, accompanied by signs of revival of British industry, still holds sway, but the pace was not so hot the last few days.

Market leaders are warning that there is danger of reaction in the possibility of a change of sentiment with a closer study of the government's budgetary prospects.

Recent official figures show a marked reduction in income tax collections and some deficit appears inevitable—not allowing for war debt payments.

Seek Underpriced Stocks.

Liquidation of gilt edged securities again is noticeable, with further weakness and possibility that a reaction of industrials may occur in the absence of any tax remissions. The tendency seems to be a continuance of the energetic search for stocks and shares appearing undervalued on the yield basis.

Financial circles again are directing their attention to Wall street, whose action is regarded as more encouraging. Favorable international developments, resulting from the world economic conference or from an upward swing of commodity prices, are regarded by some economists here as more likely to stimulate the American stock markets than those in London.

It is argued that the markets here already have experienced a recovery following the restoration of political and financial confidence. Wall street indications seem to point to the beginning of a similar phase.

Foreign Bonds Rally.

Foremost in the recovery movement ot London Stock exchange at present is the foreign bond section, prices being universally marked up where no adverse developments have been recorded. The change in sentiment is featured chiefly in South American, German, Austrian, and Polish bonds. The best features are provided by Brazilians and Sao Paulos, many offering attractive tax free yields. German sterling loans continue their recent recovery, with municipal and state loans most prominent. Chilean loans also have gone ahead on even small support in a market short of stock.

Interest is broadening perceptibly again in the miscellaneous market, where the demand for hitherto less active engineering issues suggest a revival in this section following the recent popularity of iron, coal, and steel shares.

MILLS & SONS ARE BANKRUPT, COURT RULES

Another chapter in the financial history of Westwood, one of the largest real estate developments in the country, has been written with the declaration by Judge George A. Carpenter in the Federal court that Mills & Sons are bankrupt. The case was referred to Referee in Bankruptcy Parkin for appointment of a trustee.

The big Mills & Sons' subdivision, which is now a part of the village of Elmwood Park, was a $25,000,000 project started in 1926, involving the development of approximately 250 acres and the erection of several thousand two flat buildings and bungalows.

The firm's total liabilities are estimated at $15,000,000. First mortgages on most of the homes are held by insurance companies. Assignment of contracts for the purchase of the properties was made to other creditors, including the Hines Lumber company. Bankruptcy proceedings were instituted last February following the granting of a voluntary petition for receivership.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—The Grigsby-Grunow company of Chicago was awarded an income tax refund of $191,515 today by the bureau of internal revenue.

The Hudson Motor company of Detroit, of which Secretary of Commerce Roy D. Chapin was president, also received a tax abatement of $139,485 along with other corporations and individuals.

The major part of the Grigsby-Grunow refund, $191,034, was made because an investigation of the company's books and records revealed that the company had overstated its gross income for the fiscal year ended May 31, 1929. The remaining $481 of the refund was granted when a field investigation showed that the company had understated certain of its necessary business expenditures and interest charges for the same year.

NEW CHILEAN PRESIDENT ASKS FOREIGNERS' AID

"It is necessary for foreign owned big business in Chile to make sacrifices during this scourge (the present depression) and, if avoidable, to forego making remittances to their home offices. In any event it is essential that increased cost of living or increased unemployment be prevented."

Sosthenes Behn, chairman of the board of the International Telephone and Telegraph company, of which the Chile Telephone company is a subsidiary, conferred with President Alessandri. Mr. Behn said his company would coöperate with Chile.

CHICAGO BANK STOCKS EASIER; TRADE SHRINKS

Trading in Chicago bank stocks quieted down last week and prices turned moderately reactionary. The gains which were registered in the previous week were consolidated for the most part.

Northern Trust lost ten points of the sensational gain it made in the preceding week. The close was 470 offered, with best bids at 460. First National was off 3 points to 172 to 173, while Continental Illinois National finished 92 bid and 93 asked. Harris Trust was wanted at 300, with no offerings available near that price.

GOLD EXPORTS LARGER

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Jan. 14.—The steady drainage of gold from France—a considerable part of which is going to America—increased in pace last week the report of the Bank of France shows. The total outflow in the last five weeks was 6,500,000,000 francs—approximately $260,000,000.

The movement is the first sustained gold drain since the franc was stabilized in 1928. The increase in the rate of outflow is indicated by the figures showing that 15 million gold francs left France the week of Dec. 9, while 257,000,000 francs left the week ending Jan 6. The loss occurred despite defense of the franc by use of the Bank of France's foreign currency reserves, which shrank by 363,000,000 gold francs in five weeks.

The bourse continued dull. French bonds were irregular, closing weak. The refusal to pay debts as well as uncertainty over the government's financial measures in order to balance the budget are declared to be creating nervousness and cutting the volume of activity in the market.

Washington, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The department of agriculture said today that 352,825,000 acres were harvested, an increase of 1 per cent above the previous year. At the same time the yield per acre averaged 3.6 per cent above 1931. Reductions were shown for wheat, cotton, tobacco, and rice, while the output of feed grains—corn, oats, barley, and grain sorghums—was the largest since 1920.

INCREASE IN ORE FREIGHT TO HELP LAKES SHIPPING

Cleveland, O., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Estimates of ore movement today forecast better conditions than at any time in the last two years in the great lakes ore carrying trade when the navigation season opens in three months.

The Cleveland News said estimates obtained from the steel industry said 18,500,000 to 26,000,000 tons of ore would be brought down to Lake Erie ports this year.

Joseph F. Frogett, editor of the Daily Metal Trade, said in his opinion the ore movement will exceed 25,000,000 tons. He predicted steel mill operations at 40 per cent by autumn.

Only 3,577,000 tons were brought from the ore ranges in 1932, the lowest tonnage since 1886. Only 20 ore carriers were kept busy, and nine of these were operated by the United States Steel corporation. It was said a movement of 18,500,000 tons of ore would employ most of the 225 boats and about 6,000 men.

BRITAIN RELAXES RESTRICTIONS ON SECURITY SALES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 14.—A further step toward freeing the London money market from new capital issues restrictions wast announced last night with the issue of the treasury statement of relaxation of the ban which has been in force since the government war loan conversion scheme.

The announcement means, as far as British industry is concerned, the new capital market is now opened to it without restrictions, and it can replace existing obligations by issues bearing lower rates of interest.

The reservations concerning foreign issues and issues involving transfer of funds abroad remain.

CANADA ATTAINS FIFTH PLACE IN WORLD EXPORT

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 14.—The year 1932 saw Canada move into fifth place among the exporting nations of the world, says a preliminary survey of world trade, by the dominion bureau of statistics.

Displacing Belgium and Argentina, the dominion resumed the position occupied prior to the unsettled conditions of the last three years. Canada held seventh position in 1931 and sixth in 1930.

Increased exports of wheat largely were responsible for the improvement in the position of the dominion among exporting countries.

CRASH OF 1929 HAD A PARALLEL WAY BACK IN 1721

South Sea Bubble Swelled and Burst.

James Windham, in a letter preserved by the historical manuscript commission wrote naively:

"I grow rich so fast that I like stock jobbing above all things." And his wife wrote: "South Sea is all the talk; the ladies sell their jewills to bye and hapy are they that are in."

When the break in the Mississippi company occurred late in May and astute foreigners began hauling gold from Paris to Holland—sometimes in hay wagons—there was hardly a ripple in England.

Many Minor Bubbles.

A myriad of minor "bubbles" were organized to exploit the public frenzy and sell stocks to suckers. Among these were a "company for working a newly invented water engine," a "company for paving the streets of London and Westminster," a "company to prepare medicines at reasonable rates, and the poor shall have the constant advice of able physicians" and several public utility companies for the supply of water to communities.

A company "for furnishing funerals in any part of Great Britain," offered and sold £1,200,000 of its stock. A "new manufactory of butter formed in connection with the fishing and salt promotions to supply effectively the fish with sauce" got £2,000,000.

Practically all of the stock was sold on margin and contracts were frequently made for "futures." Shares shot up to anywhere from 10 to 100 times their original price. Exchange alley was so crowded with people arranging transactions that special courier systems were devised.

Interest 20 Per Cent a Week.

"Even smocks are deposited to help make the security for cash," wrote one chronicler. "Jewels are pawned to raise more. To that extent are the people of this age arrived that they'll be nowhere eased of the burden of their case put in Exchange alley. Twenty per cent is parted with for a bare week's loan of one hundred pounds."

Nobody had more than one eye on his own business. The other was on the "ticker."

"If your occasions be ever so urgent for a mercer, a tailor, a shoemaker, etc., they are nowhere to be met with but at the exchange," commented one observer. "If you resort to any public office or place of business, the whole inquiry is, how are the stocks?"

Shares were sold in a company "for an undertaking which shall in due time be revealed" and another "for importing asses to England."

Luxury Blooms.

Luxury followed and sales boomed. A contemporary declared that "200 new coaches and chariots had appeared in London, besides as many more in the coach makers' yards; above 4,000 embroidered coats; about 3,000 gold watches." Gambling houses were crowded, and racketeers and gangsters prowled the streets at night.

Then came the stock market "debacle" of 1721. South Sea stock touched 1050, wobbled, and within two weeks had fallen to 755. Declaration of a dividend of 50 per cent annually for three years failed to support the stock.

Stocks crashed. By the end of September South Sea stock was down to 180. There were runs on the Bank of England. James Windham, who had liked stock jobbing "above all things" was ruined. Bath and other resorts were deserted. The plight of the little fellows who had pawned their "smocks" was not chronicled, but England went through a winter of despair after which it gradually recovered its faith and financial equilibrium.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A sale of 160,000 bu hard winter wheat for export on Friday, reported by Broomhall, a leading English authority, and said to have represented grain turned over to the American Red Cross for relief purposes attracted considerable attention on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday.

Various constructions were placed by the trade on what appeared to be a most unusual transaction, especially in view of the fact that the grain had been donated by congress from farm board holdings. New York reports suggested that further business was pending.

Investigation disclosed that the sale was probably correct, but the business actually represented conservation of resources by the Red Cross to an unusual extent. According to Chicago representatives of the Red Cross congress in donating the grain for relief purposes failed to make an appropriation to cover the milling, distribution and other costs.

Red Cross Explains Wheat Sale.

In order to cover these costs it has been the practice of the Red Cross when it had wheat delivered to it in a position where it could not be milled and distributed to advantage to sell the grain to exporters or other cash interests. The money derived from the sale was in turn paid to mills at other points for production and other costs. In doing this, Red Cross officials pointed out, freight and other charges were avoided and it was able to keep as much grain as possible in the sections where the demand for flour for relief purposes was the greatest. The reported export sale in consequence was regarded as a reflection of this conservation policy.

Another transaction in Red Cross wheat came to light yesterday. According to Kansas City messages to Thompson & McKinnon the Stabilization corporation took delivery on 100,000 bu cash wheat on January contracts in that market on Friday, representing the purchase of grain to be turned over to the Red Cross. The price was said to have been ¾c per bu under the May future in store.

Local Pressure on Wheat.

With a great many factors regarded as in process of development, any one of which might cause a major fluctuation in the price of wheat, the trade yesterday was inclined to go slow on either side of the market early. Buying by commission houses checked an early decline at 48c for May or ⅜c under Friday's finish. A rally to 48⅝c followed, with the market holding within narrow limits until near the close. Shortly before the end of the session there was free selling which the trade was inclined to attribute to a leading local professional. This disclosed a lack of support until holders of bids started to buy. May touched 47½c at the inside, and closed at 47⅝@47¾, while July was 47½c, and September, 48⅛@48¼c, with net losses of ½@¾c for the day.

Liquidation was reported in wheat in Liverpool, due to a slow demand for cash wheat for deferred shipment, and futures there closed ¾@1c per bu lower. Winnipeg was ½@⅝c lower, although exporters were said to have been fair buyers. Buenos Aires finished ⅛@¼c lower.

The extreme depreciated Australian pound sterling is permitting wheat from that country to be sold at relatively low prices when the sterling figure is converted into a gold basis. According to a report from Broomhall, New Zealand, wheat was quoted by the official selling agency at equal to 81c per bu taking exchange at par, but only 44⅝c in terms of American gold. The Australian business with China is said to have been at around 46⅞c per bu of late.

Scandinavia Buys Corn.

A moderate amount of American corn which is said to have been held at Montreal since navigation on the great lakes closed early in December was reported as having been sold to Scandinavia Saturday. The grain was taken for April-May shipment, it was reported, and at a price equal to 4½c over the May future in Chicago. There were inquiries received from the seaboard Saturday regarding the price of cash corn to be delivered from Chicago or other ports at Montreal in May.

Corn futures showed a relatively heavy undertone and closed ¼@⅜c lower, the action of wheat having some influence. May finished at 27@28⅛c, and July at 28½@28⅝c. Country offerings of cash grain were larger than of late with purchases of 140,000 bu to arrive reported by local handlers.

Oats were dull and unchanged to ⅛c lower with May at 17¼@17⅜c, and July at 17½@17⅝c. Trade in rye consisted mainly in buying of that grain against sales of wheat. Net losses were ⅝c with May 35⅝c, and July, 34½c. There were no trades in barley.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Cotton goods were strengthened today by issuance of year end statistics showing sales and shipments in excess of production and stocks the lowest reported. Finished goods demand was fair. Silks are quiet and weak following the break in raw material during the week. Several rayon companies have sold up the larger part of their March output. Men's clothing is in demand. Dress goods demand is developing slowly. Burlaps are steady.

COTTON CONSUMPTION UP AND STOCKS ARE SMALLER

Consumption of cotton in the United States during the month of December as given by the census report was 440,062 bales, compared with 415,401 bales for the same time last year. Stocks in consumers' hands on Dec. 31 were 1,530,110 bales, as compared with 1,630,719 bales last year. Total stocks in all positions, 10,349,808 bales, compared with 10,414,412 last year.

As a market factor the consumptive report had but little influence. Trading was limited and the market fairly evened up. Local professionals operated in such a small way that their positions on the market is not particularly an important factor. Easing of textile prices was regarded as slightly bearish. The contract markets show good resistance to the selling that appears on advances as well as on declines.

Futures in Chicago closed 3@10 points lower and New York was unchanged to 4 points higher and spots unchanged at 6.25c. New Orleans was unchanged to 1 point lower and spots at 6.20c, Galveston 6.10c, and Houston at 6.15c. Liverpool closed 3 points net lower. Prices follow:

BUTTER FUTURES RALLY

Butter futures closed ⅛@¼c lower on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, the heavy liquidation of the last week seeming to have run its course for the time being. January fresh first eggs lost 1c, while other deliveries closed unchanged to ½c lower. Selling was moderately active in butter at the opening, prices dropping slightly, but new buying and covering appeared later and caused a rally.

The movement of butter into storage totaled 83,700 lbs more than last year. The spot egg market continued weak, which influenced the January futures. Selling also developed in February fresh firsts, but support was better in that month. The four markets reported a net increase in storage holdings of 1,000 cases, indicating the excess supply of fresh eggs arriving. Sales: butter, 70 cars; eggs, 32 cars. Deliveries: butter, 17 cars. LARD MARKET IS FIRM; PACKERS ARE BEST BUYERS

Liberal buying of lard futures by a western packer, who is said to be removing hedges, furnished the principal feature of interest for the packing and provision trade. Selling was attributed to local packers, and there was enough scattered buying to create a better market. The close was unchanged to 5c higher. Liverpool lard was 1s@9d lower on near by deliveries, and 1s lower on spots. Export clearances were $31,350 lbs lard and of bacon, 35,000 lbs. Bellies were unchanged with a light trade. In the cash market regular lard was $4.05 loose $3.45 and leaf $3.50. Cash bellies were $3.87½. Prices follow:

CONGRESS HOTEL TO PAY OFF LAST OF BOND ISSUE

Will Take Unusual Place as Hostelry Free of Debt

BY AL CHASE.

H. L. KAUFMAN.

In these uncertain days of foreclosures, receiverships, bond committees and other sequels to red ink extravagance in hotel bookkeeping, it is interesting to learn from H. L. Kaufman, president of the Congress Hotel company, that his treasurer, G. D. Edwards, still is using black ink on the ledger of that world famous hostelry.

On Feb. 1 Mr. Kaufman will wind up an eleven year debt paying campaign, involving more than three million dollars, by retiring $43,000 in bonds against the Congress hotel. When this is done the Congress will occupy a position unique today in metropolitan hostelries. It will be free from all debt.

"There'll not be a dollar of bonded indebtedness against the property; the preferred stock has long since been retired; the taxes are all paid; there are no notes outstanding, and considerable of the common stock has been purchased in the open market and placed in the company's treasury.

Has Operating Profit.

In addition Mr. Kaufman predicted that the fiscal year, which ends May 1, will show an operating profit. Since last May to date this pleasant situation has existed and as the months of February, March and April are not only better ordinarily, but this year will have the advantage of the advance business which is bound to precede the World's Fair, this seems a safe prognostication.

And, of course, during the months the fair gates actually are open, the hotel will be full to the roof. Already every one of the close to a thousand rooms in the Congress has been engaged during June and September—the two most popular months. Reservations are pouring in for the other months.

The Congress hotel is one of the very few—if any—metropolitan hotels in America which occupies this enviable position of actually making a profit.

Mr. Kaufman, by the way, states that the Congress has kept its executive staff intact throughout the present depression.

In Family for Two Decades.

The Congress has been in the Kaufman family for more than two decades. H. L. Kaufman has personally operated the hotel for the last eleven years. He took it over without any previous hotel training; his former business life having been in banking circles. His brother, until a recent merger, was president of one of New York's oldest banks.

For the eleven years he's been in control he's been plowing profits back into the property in various ways. There were six bond issues against the property when he took charge. They totaled $1,490,000. With the exception of the $43,000 to be retired on Feb. 1, these have all been paid up. Real estate purchase notes amounting to $340,000 have been paid. Capital stock totaling $384,500 has been retired. And $861,000 was spent in buying land under the hotel. This makes a grand total of $3,075,500.

Perhaps the caution which kept him from going ahead with his long contemplated plans for rebuilding the Congress into the world's finest hotel, as well as his thrift in plowing back profits into the business, are responsible for the unique position he occupies today—head of one of the best hotel properties in the world. Had Mr. Kaufman gone ahead, as he was tempted to do, when "world's largest" honors were held only a few months, he, too, might have one of the biggest buildings—and probably also have one of the world's largest worries.

BANKRUPT PLEA FILED BY CHAIN; BLAME BANKERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—The McCrory Stores corporation, which owns and operates, either directly or through subsidiary corporations, a chain of 244 retail five-and-ten-cent stores throughout the United States, filed a petition in bankruptcy today.

The petition asserts that the corporation is unable to pay its debts in full and expresses the willingness of its authorized officials to surrender what assets it has for the benefit of stockholders and general creditors.

A statement issued by counsel for the corporation said in part:

"The corporation experienced in the last year a substantial reduction in sales, consequent upon the general decline in business activity and the widespread unemployment.

"In the normal course of its operations the corporation in past years has borrowed from banks to meet the seasonal requirements of its business and has invariably met all such obligations in full. This policy was followed during the year just ended.

"Notwithstanding the foregoing record of the corporation, its banks declined this year to grant the credit necessary for the continuation of its business. Failure to obtain this credit and the pressing claims of merchandise creditors necessitated the filing of the petition in bankruptcy."

POORER QUALITY CUTS HOG PRICES AFTER GOOD WEEK

Cattle Market Averages 25 Cents Higher.

The week-end trade for hogs was a "catch as catch can" affair that averaged slightly lower due to the plainer quality of the supply. With all but about 1,000 of the 16,000 hogs received being billed direct to the packers, not enough remained to establish a fair list of prices in all classes.

No strictly choice light weights arrived. Consequently the top showed a 15c loss at $3.10, which bought light butchers. The absence of choice light pulled the general average down 5c to $2.95. Medium and weighty butchers comprised most of the supply, and these sold to larger packers at fully steady to strong prices, 240@300 lb averages going at $2.80@3.00. Notwithstanding the rather unsatisfactory close in hogs, practically all branches of the trade made a good showing the last week.

Receipts Heaviest of Winter.

Live stock receipts during the week were largest of the winter. Yet progress was made, indicating that markets were more capable of handling volume than members of the trade had given it credit. Gains in hogs were very slight, but they were made against the heaviest movement of supplies since last February.

The week's average price moved up 5c to $3.10. Arrivals at Chicago at 163,100 were 21 per cent greater than a week ago. Toward the end of the week hog prices sagged, however, and the close was 10@20c under a week ago.

Price trends in cattle were mixed most of the time, but the market, as a whole, averaged $5.20, 25c above the preceding week, which was the lowest spot for cattle since the summer of 1911.

The government report showing an increase in the number of cattle on feed had little effect on the market. Eleven corn belt states, the survey shows, have 5 per cent more cattle on feed than a year ago. The proportion to be marketed before April 1 is about the same as in 1932.

Lambs Highest Since July.

The average price of lambs for the week at $5.95 stood highest since last July, while receipts at 98,600 were largest since early November and 34 per cent greater than the preceding week. Part of the gains were erased near the close, but last sales were fully 25@35c above the low spot 13 days ago. There was a decrease in the stocks of lamb and mutton in cold storage houses during the last month. Other meats showed an accumulation. but it was smaller than usual for December. On Jan. 1 there were 494,137,000 lbs of pork, excluding lard, in storage over the entire country. This was an increase of 22 per cent over the Dec. 1 figure, the smallest accumulation on record for that period. A year ago the increase was 45 per cent. On Jan. 1 last year packers carried 563,789,000 lbs and the five year average for Jan. 1 stands at 579,789,000 lbs. Lard stocks showed a normal gain. Beef in store at 42,839,000 lbs was lightest in many years, 19 per cent under a year ago and 47 per cent under the five year average.

BONDHOLDERS OF CASA VILLA O. K. FINANCING

Equity Owners Will Pay All Fees.

Bondholders in the Casa Villa apartments, at the northeast corner of Cass street and Chicago avenue, have approved a reorganization plan which obviates the necessity of a foreclosure suit, according to Charles T. Rothermel, secretary of the Bondholders' Protective committee. All expenses necessary to complete the plan, such as depositary fees, committee service fees, committee members' fees and attorneys' fees, have been taken care of by the owners, he states, thereby eliminating any charges assessed against the bondholders.

The original bond issue of $265,000 was underwritten against the old five story Casa Villa apartments by the State Bank of Chicago. Default occured about a year ago. The committee is comprised of Holman D. Pettibone, chairman; Perkins B. Bass, C. Edward Carlson, Oscar H. Haugan, and William A. Peterson.

Land Is Real Security.

According to Mr. Rothermel an analysis of the property by the committee showed that the income was far less than the amount necessary to pay interest and taxes. The real security for the loan is the land, which contains approximately 16,700 square feet. The location, it is pointed out, is suitable for a major development if times become nromal.

Title has been conveyed to the Chicago Title & Trust company as trustee. The bondholders receive preferred certificates of ownership. The property is to be under the direction of three trust managers: Mr. Bass and Mr. Rothermel, representing the bondholders, and Carroll Sudler Jr., representing the equity owners.

Avoid Litigation.

The owners have been given a common certificate of ownership, which will entitle them to save their property, provided they pay the preferred certificate holders [the bondholders] the full amount of their investment within the next five years. To preserve this right, they must pay two per cent interest per annum and all taxes.

If at any time they fail to do this, their common certificates will at once be canceled, thereby turning the property over to the bondholders without the delay or cost of litigation.

As a further evidence of good faith and confidence in their property they have made possible the distribution of three per cent at the time the certificates are delivered.

DEALERS CHARGE OIL TRUST WAR ON TRADE RIVALS

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Nine major gasoline producing companies were charged with violation of the anti-trust act in a suit on file today in federal court.

Independent dealers and filling station operators of the vicinity charge the big companies have conspired to reduce the retail price of gasoline below the wholesale price to force the plaintiffs, and independent refining and producing concerns supplying them, out of business.

Since Dec. 15, the complaint says, the retail price of gasoline has been cut 4 cents in comparison to a drop of only 1 cent in the wholesale price. Some grades of gasoline, it is said, are retailing at 2 cents under the wholesale price.

The court was asked to issue an injunction restraining the producers from acting individually or together to fix the retail prices of the fuel without regard to the wholesale cost.

Companies named in the suit are the Cities Service Oil, Gulf Refining, Fleetwing corporation, Pure Oil, Refiners, Inc., Shell Union Oil, Consolidated Oil, Standard Oil of Ohio, and the Texas.

WHITE TRUCKS GET $60,000 ORDER FROM CANADIANS

He announced the White company had received an order for $60,000 worth of trucks from a Canadian firm.

"The White plant will be continued in Cleveland—and enlarged," Erskine said. "The industrial growth of a city is probably due mainly to the enterprise of its citizens," he continued. "There is no special reason why so many tires should be made in Akron, or so many cars in South Bend or Detroit, beyond the fact that people of enterprise started those industries there and they grew."

RAILROADS FAR BEHIND MOTORS IN ENGINEERING

BY HAL FOUST.

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The national automobile show, which closed here today to open in Chicago's Coliseum on Jan. 28, marks another advancement in highway transportation over its competitor, the railroads.

"There has been more progress in automotive engineering in the three years of the depression than there has been in railroad engineering since the first of the century," said Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Sale corporation, after reviewing all the 1933 models displayed at the automobile show.

"As far as apparent to the customers," the young executive, aged 41, continued, "the only improvement in railroading that has been made in the last year is that passengers are now served tea on one of the crack trains between Chicago and New York."

No Improvement by R. R.'s.

He talked without restraint of modesty on the accomplishments of automotive engineers after pointing out that he is not one of these technicians, but a salesman whose job it is to tell the public about the feats of the mechanical experts.

"If the automobile industry were managed like the railroad industry," he said, "we'd still be chugging over the highways behind two cylinder engines in high buggies with hard tires.

"At the head of the train is a steam engine little different from the locomotive of thirty years ago. With a cylinder and a drive shaft on each side, chugging and shaking, creating a lot of furor, it's a romantic picture rocking and swaying down the rails. It's romantic, but it's rotten engineering. The locomotive vibrates its head off. It's a tremendous loss of energy.

"Behind the locomotive, dragging steel whels over a steel running surface, is a string of coaches, blunt nosed box cars without windows. Dead weight is balanced high off the ground. Flat surfaces are pushed through the air without any thought being given how to push with less effort. For each passenger there's probably ten tons of train weight.

Now, the Automobiles.

"Let's turn to the automobile. At its very beginning the engineers abandoned the steel tires of the horse drawn vehicles. This year the tires have been increased in size, the air pressure reduced, and the riding comfort improved. The railroads are just beginning to consider pneumatic tires for trains.

"On the 1933 models automatic shock absorbers have been generally adopted. These adjust the tension of the springs to fit driving conditions. Railroads retain their heavy, unresponsive springs that they used in 1900.

"The automobile is using bearings to reduce friction between moving parts. There are only three or four roads that use roller bearings and only these on a few trains.

"The automotive engineer has done much to improve seat cushions and back rests. The upholstering has been designed to fit the human body. The Pullman car is at a disadvantage in that the seats have to be used as beds at night, but nothing has been done to make the day coach chair any more comfortable.

Auto Speeds Increased.

"In highway travel, the average speed on the open road has been increased from about 20 miles an hour in 1910 to 30 miles an hour in 1920, to 45 miles an hour in 1932. The 1933 models will cruise at 60 miles an hour under better control than the 1923 models were driven at 30. Railroads haven't increased their speeds materially in the last generation.

"The designs this year show a further use of the engineers' knowledge of aerodynamics. We are coming to complete stream lining in a few years, as soon as public taste will adjust itself to the style. American railroads haven't considered wind resistance and the only stream lining in railroading has been introduced in Germany by engineers outside of the railroad industry.

"The railroads deserve credit as pioneers of safety in transportation. Some of this is due to natural advantages. The trains travel over fixed routes and the operators are employés, whereas the automobile doesn't have any rails and the operation is turned over to the public at large.

Safety Devices.

"In addition, the railroad managements have won the praise of the public with safety devices and control. But the automotive engineers are not asleep to the hazards of travel and are doing much to make motor car operation safer.

"On the 1933 models there is a widespread use of power brakes. Even those models without power brakes have control 40 per cent more effective than the 1929 automobiles. Safety glass, stronger bodies, more rigid frames, and lowered centers of gravity have also been inaugurated."

"Is it that bankers and lawyers are managing railroads that they are not progressing?" Mr. Hoffman was asked.

"I don't want to indulge in any personalities," he replied. "Can you name the chief engineer of any railroad in America? I thought not. They're veteran mechanics promoted for seniority in service.

"Automotive engineers include a lot of bright young men, highly specialized in technical training, eager to tear down precedents with new ideas. In the nineteenth century railroading attracted this type of youth. Today they turn to automobiles and airplanes for their future."

What to Do?

"What should the railroads do to recover their business?" the interviewer inquired.

"The automobile enjoys some inherent advantages, delivering its freight or passengers to their destinations rather than to stations or depots," he answered. "The motor car hasn't any fixed schedule or fixed route, but moves at the convenience of the owner. But the railroads can get their normal portion of the transportation business, the long hauls, by opening their eyes to elemental engineering. You can understand what I mean when I say it's not sound economics to drag ten tons of awkward weight to carry a single train passenger.

"Let the railroads use the initiative, ingenuity and fearless aggressiveness of the automobile manufacturers. We have a revolution in style and performance every five years in normal times. Spurred by the depression to greater efforts, we've had a revolution since 1929."

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

MISPLACED SIGNS.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—Recently a large sum of public money was spent to avoid the hazard of a grade crossing at the intersection of route 21 and Dempster road. The hazard has not been eliminated on account of the misplacement of directional signs.

Under the present system a north bound car on route 21, in order to turn west on Dempster road, must cross the path of south bound traffic on route 21. Similarly, a south bound car, in order to turn east on Dempster road, must cross the path of the north bound traffic on route 21.

A very simple change in the directional signs, if made, would eliminate this hazard.
THOMAS L. HOHMS.

POTOMAC AND WESTERN.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—During the last few months quite a number of accidents have occurred at Potomac and Western avenues.

The people of this neighborhood view with growing apprehension the repeated occurrence of these accidents, and we take this method of describing to the people of Chicago how ruthlessly and cruelly their fellow Chicagoans are being run down and killed.

We demand that immediate action be taken in the matter. A "through street" sign has already been put up, but unfortunately it is not in the least heeded. At least four accidents have occurred since the putting up of this sign and we wish that a stop and go could be installed.

I am just a 13 year old boy and I am hoping that the people who read this article will demand action in the matter, for no person would allow this to continue much longer.
ROBERT BRONSTEIN.

TIRE SIZES.

Would an automobile, equipped with tires 29x4.40x20, consume less gasoline per mile than the same car would if equipped with tires of 29x5.00x19? And if so, about how much less, assuming that the car is driven on hard surface road? Is it not a fact that the broader the wearing surface the greater the amount of motive power needed, other things being equal?
O. H.

KIMBALL AND WRIGHTWOOD.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—I am writing this to you with the feeling that you may be able to assist in impressing upon the Chicago bureau of streets the necessity of erecting some form of stop light at the intersection of Kimball and Wrightwood avenues.

Kimball avenue is a through street until it reaches Milwaukee avenue, two blocks north of Wrightwood. Motorists coming south naturally do not notice the absence of stop signs after passing Milwaukee. Motorists using Wrightwood also consider it a through street inasmuch as traffic is heavy and includes buses.

Buildings are erected close to the corners obstructing the view when approaching the intersection. In one day, during the recent snow, there were seven accidents of varying degrees of seriousness. The next day two cars collided, breaking the front wheels of one car when it went over the curb. The repairs for these cars cost more than six or eight stop signs.
HAROLD OKSNEE.

ELEVATED HIGHWAY.

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 7.—Chicago became the great city that it is because it was a railroad center. Other smaller nearby cities prospered in proportion to their facilities for railroad communication with Chicago.

Today, the highways are rivalling the rails as arteries of commerce. Salesmen are covering their territories in motor cars. Farm produce moves to markets in trucks. Manufacturers distribute their goods in trucks.

Chicago, to maintain its importance, must develop pavement facilities. It must become the world's greatest highway center as it became the world's greatest railroad center.

The rural pavements have been built. THE TRIBUNE was instrumental in widening the radial routes within the last two or three years. But the city still lacks terminal facilities, it lacks the west side elevated highway.

The narrow, congested and dangerous surface streets are a Chinese wall around Chicago, shutting out commerce. As a consequence, all northern Illinois suffers from this barricade to traffic. Peoria, for example, will benefit when it can get its products and its salesmen into Chicago with less delay and risk.
J. V. HARDNER.

WHO CAN ANSWER!

Chicago, Jan. 8.—I am interested in obtaining both a scientific and a lay explanation for the following:

What is there in a 1924 car which permits passage through the ruts and mud of a bad country road over which a new 1932 machine with balloon tires makes no headway, but instead promptly mires down and stays that way?

Is it the balloon tires, low slung body, lack of power, or any combination of these factors?

Isn't it true that a car may have great power and still not make headway in a mire because of the churning of the wheels?
MEGENE UPPET.

CAN'T FIND WARRANT.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Last Feb. 16 I swore out a warrant for a hit and run driver who tipped me over. After experiencing difficulties in securing the warrant, I have been unable to trace the warrant from the judge's clerk. I have been sent from the bailiff's office to the sheriff's office, to the police department, and no one seems to know who has the warrant.

Whoever has the warrant has not served it on the party since that date, a mere matter of nine months.

Such is public service.
ANOTHER VICTIM.

NEWS AND VIEWS

A. L. Walsh, general manager of the Franklin Illinois Company, Inc., has announced the appointment of Tyk Motor Sales, 1022 West Madison street, Oak Park, as a Franklin dealer. Robert P. Tyk, head of the company has been associated with the automobile industry for 22 years.

Chevrolet's 1933 trucks which were placed on display yesterday include three distinct lines: The half ton, with a wheelbase of 109 inches; a 131 inch 1½ ton wheelbase truck; and a 157 inch 1½ ton wheelbase truck.

EAST'S ELEVATED HIGHWAYS SPEED UP AUTO TRAFFIC

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—A small and shiny sedan jogged between traffic lights in Manhattan's congested surface streets. An inexpensive 1933 model, it was outperforming big and costly machines two or three years old, but its progress was slow due to conditions of the road beyond the control of its manufacturer. On this busy surface pavement, with cross traffic and with pedestrians, the car was not able to deliver to its five passengers all the service intended by its designer.

At 23d street the sedan soared up a ramp onto New York's $15,000,000 west side elevated highway. There was a low purr from the motor as it accelerated to forty-five miles an hour, joining a stream of south bound automobiles proceeding with safety and celerity, free from stop lights, cross traffic and pedestrians.

What Chicago Needs.

"This is what Chicago's west side needs," said Harry G. Moock, general sales manager of the Plymouth Motors corporation, and former Chicagoan, who was sitting in a rear seat. "The industry has a selfish interest in that it would increase the automobile market in Chicago; such improvements enhance the value of motor car ownership.

"It's to the public's interest as well, bringing the city markets closer to the farmers and bringing the fresh air and sunshine of the open country closer to the city dwellers."

"This convenient travel on the elevated," added James H. Hoag, Plymouth sales promoter for New Jersey, "is only half the picture here. It has taken the through traffic from the surface streets, relieving the congestion and hazard of local travel."

The sedan descended another ramp to a broad plaza with arrows marking lanes to entrances to the Holland tunnel under the Hudson river. These lanes led through gates where 50 cents toll was paid. Then they converged into two lanes at the tunnel's mouth. By having several gates, there was no delay in collecting the toll although traffic was heavy.

Through Well Lighted Tube.

Through a tube well lighted and well ventilated, with walls and ceilings like white bathroom tile, two lanes of automobiles maintained an uninterrupted thirty to thirty-five mile an hour pace to New Jersey. There it connected with a depressed highway passing under the congested local traffic of Jersey City.

Following direction signs, the sedan, without encountering a stop light, cross walk or cross traffic mounted the $40,000,000 elevated highway across Jersey's meadows that was opened last fall. Traffic was moving at between forty and fifty miles an hour. Over the railing could be seen the blockades on nearby surface streets.

The roadway, fifty feet wide, rose 135 feet over the waters of the Hackensack and Passaic rivers and descended to a surface highway at the Newark airport.

"Automobile travel like this," said Mr. Moock, "is just like flying; there is the same freedom from stops and starts that wear out passengers as well as vehicles."

Aids Air Passengers.

At the airport, Ted Weaver, Atlantic divisional superintendent for the Transcontinental Western, Inc., said that passengers were taxied from the planes to the Pennsylvania station in Manhattan, fourteen miles, in twenty-nine minutes on an average with some trips requiring but twenty-four minutes. Before the elevated highway was built, the average trip, he said, required forty-five minutes and sometimes more than an hour.

"There's some inducement to take a plane to New York," said Varley Young of J. Stirley Getchel advertising agency as the sedan was leaving the airport. "In flying to Chicago, all the time that is gained by using the air is lost in traveling the narrow streets from the municipal field to the loop."

Mr. Hoag turned west and north using, by way of contrast, the ground level pavements that formerly carried all traffic now accommodated by the elevated. The surface roads, with Sunday crowds, were still heavily traveled. There were long delays at intersections. An especially long blockade was encounted on the four lane Broad avenue in the village of Ridgefield.

Another superhighway, sometimes elevated and sometimes depressed to obtain continuous grade separation, was found approaching the George Washington bridge over the Hudson river. At forty to fifty miles an hour, automobiles were streaming under and over village streets and crossroads.

Over High Bridge.

With two toll gates for each lane of traffic on the bridge, there was no delay as drivers paid 50 cents for the crossing. In its first year of operation, 1931, 5,500,000 vehicles used the span.

Tall towers on both sides of the broad river support two bands of cables, almost as thick as a man's body, draping from the mastheads across the river. Vertical cables suspend from these master coils to the roadway. Ships on the river far below looked tiny. The skyline of Manhattan likewise was foreshortened by distance.

On the high, rocky eastern bank of the river, arrows marked traffic lanes for travel north, south or east. There was no cross traffic on these lanes.

The sedan, following direction signs, descended ramps like an airplane making a landing to get on the right side of Riverside drive for a boulevard trip back to the hotel.

U. S. MOTOR BOAT SHOW TO OPEN IN NEW YORK FRIDAY

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The 1933 national motor boat show fleet will move into New York City next week for the 28th annual exposition to be staged by the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers. More than 150 manufacturers of boats, engines and marine accesories will be represented when the show opens Friday night to give the boating public the first glimpse of what is new for 1933.

MEN

STABLE CONNECTIONS MAY BE HAD WITH US IF YOU CAN FOLLOW INSTRUCTIONS WITH ZEAL.

Our success is directly traceable to our course of instruction and supervision. We do have a product practically without competition—but we also have a method that is successful today. Our plan of selling has been original with us since our organization. Recently it has been copied bodily by practically every distributor in our field. We are instructors of men and corporations.

Maurice Lazaer found a college education insufficient for today's battles, so he came to us for assistance. Our plan and his zeal earned $322.00 for him last week, his twenty-first week in the business.

The years slowed down Glen Willey for bicycle racing but not for winning. He came to us with a fighter's spirit and followed our instructions. Every week in 1932 paid him over $100. Last Saturday afternoon he made $80.00 between noon and 7 p. m.

Our plan works for Jack Yarrin in all kinds of weather. In December, 1931, he earned over $1,500 with us, and in December, 1932, he earned over $1,500.

George Cooke is a new man with us and so is Henry Waud but last week each of them drew checks of over $100.

Your past experience may have shaken you. We have the product, the plan, and the company to restore your confidence. You may not earn over $150 per month to start with but if you are not licked and can do what you are told, you will soon be earning twice that much.

Apply for interview Monday, 9 to 12, 2 to 3:30, Room 1009, Mather Tower, 75 E. Wacker-dr.

Should You Buy a Home Now?

Since buying a home is a once-in-a-lifetime event, families who have the means and the desire to own a home should take advantage of today's once-in-a-lifetime opportunities.

Convincing proof of these rare opportunities of today can be found every day in the Tribune Real Estate-For-Sale want ad columns—which, during the first eleven months of 1932, carried more real estate want advertising than any other Chicago newspaper.

Reading these columns even for a few minutes will show you that almost every type of dwelling is selling at bargain prices, from frame cottages to brick bungalows and pretentious estates. Prices not only have been reduced, but also down payments. That means smaller monthly payments or complete ownership in a shorter time.

If you are one of those who can take advantage of the present real estate market, don't hesitate—look for a home now! For reliable information about the bargains available read the Tribune Real Estate-For-Sale want ad columns daily. Begin with today's Tribune!

PROMISE FULL PROTECTION TO BONDHOLDERS

Probably Will Avoid a Receivership.

BY AL CHASE.

A. WATSON ARMOUR. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Full protection to the holders of the $6,500,000 first mortgage bonds of the forty-two story La Salle-Wacker building is promised in a reorganization plan just announced by a committee representing the bondholders, headed by Charles F. Clarke, and comprising A. Watson Armour and Henry E. Miller, which is serving without compensation. In working out this plan the committee states it has had coöperation from both security holders and officers of the La Salle-Wacker Building corporation, resulting in a substantial saving to all and avoiding receivership.

More than 90 per cent of the outstanding $6,500,000 first mortgage series A bond issue has been deposited, and in the event the balance are turned in, a foreclosure will be avoided, it is stated.

The reorganization plan contains provisions for the definite repayment at a reasonable future date of not only principal but also of all interest due up to Aug. 1, 1932. It is based, according to Mr. Clarke, upon a careful study to find the best solution for giving satisfaction to the bondholders and yet not interfering with the operation of the building.

Occupancy Increased.

Simultaneously with the announcement of the reorganization plan, Francis E. Manierre of Dibblee & Manierre, agents of the building, issued a report on the status of the structure at the present time.

"He has personally directed the renting and operation of the La Salle-Wacker building during the last year and a half," said Mr. Clarke, "and has carried on an aggressive campaign to lease additional space. As a result, the building is now 56 per cent occupied, although it was completed in a period of generally depressed business.

"During the last year and a half 95,000 square feet of new space was leased.

"As shown by audits by Arthur Andersen & Co., independent accountants, operations of the La Salle-Wacker Building corporation for the fiscal year ended April 30, 1932, resulted in total income of $371,760, while net income, after operating expenses and taxes but before financing charges and depreciation, aggregated $23,538, as compared with a loss of $94,908 for the eight months ended April 30, 1931.

"For the six months' period ended Oct. 31, 1932, the company has reported net earnings, after operating expenses and taxes, but before financing charges and depreciation, of $46,015.

"Although these figures indicate that the building is now producing only a small return upon the large amount of capital invested, a gradual improvement in this respect is evident.

1928 and 1929 Taxes Paid.

"Taxes for 1928 and 1929 were promptly paid but because of a dispute upon the completion time of the building, a portion of the 1930 taxes have been withheld. It is expected that ample reserves will be set up for the balance of the 1930 tax due and for the 1931 and 1932 taxes by the time they become due."

The bonds defaulted on June 1, 1931. The reorganization plan provides for the payment of principal and 6 per cent interest for the twenty months from Dec. 1, 1930, to Aug. 1, 1932.

Under the plan, all earnings from operations are to be applied as return up to a specified rate on the securities allotted to present series A bonds, or toward the retirement of a part of the securities so allotted.

According to the plan, each $1,000 series A bond will be exchanged for a $500 first (closed) mortgage gold bond, due Aug. 1, 1957, and $600 in gold debentures due Aug. 1, 1962.

Based on Rentals.

"Neither issue, at the outset, will bear interest at a fixed rate, but will receive a rate of return consistent with the earnings of the property," said Mr. Clarke. "It is expected, however, that increasing amounts can be paid on the first mortgage bonds during the next few years, and that thereafter the full 5 per cent can be paid on these bonds, together with graduated sums on the debentures.

"Interest will be payable on the debentures to the extent of 75 per cent of net earnings after interest charges have been paid on the first mortgage bonds, but at a rate of not more than 5 per cent of the principal amount of the debentures.

"Twenty-five per cent of such net earnings, or the balance after 5 per cent has been paid on the debentures, will be applied at least annually to the purchase or redemption and cancellation of the debentures."

Outlines Advantages.

According to the committee, a brief summary of some of the advantages ot the plan include the following:

1. It shortens the time required for reorganization, and as a natural result, decidedly decreases the expense.

2. It removes the building from the stigma of default, thereby materially aiding the renting campaign and consequently the earlier establishment of the earning power of the property.

3. It provides that in case of a future default in the payment of interest or principal an assessment shall be made against the holders of junior securities, who shall either pay such assessment or suffer their securities to be transferred or sold for the protection of the bondholders.

4. It eliminates the necessity for active management on the part of the bondholders and obtains for them the benefit of the retention of the present management.

"More than 90 per cent of the series A bonds are now represented by the committee," said Mr. Clarke, "and it's expected that the holders of all the series B bonds and the capital stock of the corporation will become parties to the plan by the deposit of their securities."

The original bond issue was underwritten by Halsey, Stuart & Co. and the Harris Trust and Savings bank. Halsey, Stuart & Co. have been designated reorganization manager.

Sokol Slavsky Gymnastic Association.

I hold a principal promissory note for $1,500 which is one of nineteen comprising a loan of $35,000 to the Sokol Slavsky Gymnastic association, Kaspar American State bank, trustee. It defaulted March, 1932. The First National Bank of Cicero writes me that the Cicero Securities company, which holds two notes for $5,000 against this property, has placed same in the hands of an attorney for foreclosure, and ask that I join them in this proceeding. What would you advise? Is it necessary that I join with them to protect my investment?—E. P.

We believe it probably would be cheaper protection for you to join in this foreclosure, but we don't give advice in such matters. We will give what information we can obtain and you'll have to use your own judgment.

Frank Mayer, attorney for the Cicero Securities company, states that he has had several conferences with the officers of the Sokol association, who state that their inability to pay is due to loss of 400 members.

The gross receipts from Jan. 1 to Oct. 1, 1932, are reported to have been $1,558. Operating expenses were $1,134. Foreclosure proceedings have been started. No receiver has been asked for because the manager has been depositing all rents with the Cicero Securities company.

General taxes for 1929 on six vacant lots, amounting to $327, forfeited; taxes for 1930, amounting to $415, unpaid. The building and land on which it is located are exempt from taxes. It is stated that $20,000 of the $35,000 notes has been deposited with the attorneys for foreclosure coöperation.

Rose Apartments.

I have a bond of the Rose apartments, 7429-51 Kingston avenue, which are owned by Samuel Schmalhouson and wife. Both interest and principal defaulted in 1931. The Drexel State bank is receiver and reported that up to Jan. 1, 1932, the building was 92 per cent occupied. Would appreciate any further information. O. T.

Ratner, Chapman & Ratner, attorneys for the receiver, state foreclosure proceedings are now under way. The building is ten years old, contains thirty-eight apartments, is in good physical condition and in December, of last year, was 90 per cent occupied, they report.

They also state that gross receipts from January to June, 1932, were $10,262 and that the disbursements for the same period were $8,493.

"The disbursements include extraordinary items, such as payments of $100 a month, or a total of $600 on refrigeration that was unpaid for and which otherwise would have become the subject of a mechanic's lien claim if not paid for," the attorneys state.

"We have since made an additional payment on account of taxes in a like amount. There was allowed $600 in attorney's fees and a like amount to the receiver for his fees.

"The premises have an occupancy above normal to date and as soon as extraordinary expenditures can be gotten out of the way, there should be substantial accumulations."

Plan World's Fair Parking; 20,000 Cars

With the closing of what is claimed is the largest ground lease ever negotiated in Chicago, comprising 20 city blocks, this city is to have the world's largest open air parking space, to be in operation throughout the period of the Century of Progress exposition. The property has frontage on 31st and 35th streets, Archer and Ashland avenues, as well as along the west bank of the south fork of the south branch of the Chicago river. It was leased from the Illinois Steel company by the Anthony Wayne Oil corporation of Fort Wayne, Ind., of which John Tibbles is president and A. C. McCoy is secretary.

Visitors to the World's Fair may drive direct to the big parking area, leave their cars there for a day or several days, or weeks if they care to, and journey on to a hotel or direct to the fair by bus lines which will be run to and from the loop and also to and from the fair grounds.

Work Now Under Way.

Every foot of the big reservation is being leveled. The entire tract will be drained, inclosed with a high wire fence, flood lighted, equipped with telephone and signal system, and will be manned and policed day and night throughout the exposition months.

A huge insurance policy has been negotiated, covering fire, theft, and public liability. It is estimated that at times the area will have cars valued at 10 million dollars or more.

The terms of the lease were not disclosed. Thomas Nash, vice president of the Real Estate corporation, was the only broker in the transaction.

Must Be Diverted.

G. W. Barton, chief of the Chicago Motor club highway department, states that it has been estimated that during the fair from 25,000 to 50,000 cars will come to Chicago daily from points outside the metropolitan area.

Unless large numbers of these cars are diverted from the central district Chicago's downtown streets will be a Saragossa sea of automobiles at the very time mass transportation should be facilitated instead of interrupted.

E. S. J. Irvine, chief of the transportation division of the World's Fair, said: "Our committee has met at least a hundred times and we welcome any comprehensive plans that will divert incoming motor cars from the downtown and central sections of Chicago."

Split Note Mortgages.

The following article suggesting the best plan of organization for split note mortgages was compiled for the Home Owners' Friend by Richard P. Hummer of the Chicago law firm of Hummer & Hummer.

Several years ago when banks and mortgage houses were conducting a profitable business in the making and selling of mortgage loans, there developed a form of issue, the purpose of which was to bridge the gap between a single mortgage and a bond issue. It was very difficult to sell a loan above $5,000 without setting it up in the form of a bond issue, and rather impractical to handle by way of bond issue a loan under $20,000.

The great mass of mortgage buyers made their purchases in small denominations. It was due to this condition that the so-called "split note issue" came into general use. An owner who wanted to negotiate a $15,000 mortgage on his property would be accommodated at his bank because the issue could be split in such a way as to be readily salable. The bank would issue and offer for sale to its customers fifteen $1,000 notes or possibly ten $1,000 notes and ten $500 notes.

The owner of a note representing an entire mortgage can usually negotiate with the owner of the equity and satisfactory solutions are often arrived at. The problem of the holder of a split note, however, is not so easily solved, particularly if his note was purchased from one of the banks that are now closed.

He is only one of the group interested in the issue. It is necessary that they all act together, but concerted action is difficult to obtain. The holders are usually strangers to one another and are recipients of a wide range of advice from solicitous friends and neighbors. Quite frequently a note holder seeks advice from his attorney, who may hurry to file a bill for foreclosure for the sole purpose of being the first in the field.

The result of all of this is a loss of time and the incurring of expense which in many instances can be avoided. It is quite often the case that while the note holders are so engaged the owner of the property is prepared and willing to offer some satisfactory proposition for the sale of his equity, or a plan of reorganization. He is balked by the fact that there is no one with whom he can deal.

In my opinion the best plan yet devised for handling defaulted split note issues is a liquidation trust agreement, created in the first instance by the deposit of the notes, thus avoiding the deposit agreement and a subsequent liquidation trust agreement.

The bank or mortgage house which sold the issue, or the agency handling the real estate loan affairs of a closed bank, sends a written notice to each note holder on the defaulted issue, notifying him of a meeting of all note holders to be held at a certain time and place for the purpose of taking steps to protect the security.

They are then informed of the benefits of concerted action under this liquidation trust plan. All of the notes are to be deposited with some responsible bank or trust company under a trust agreement, the principal features of which are as follows:

1. The trustee can negotiate with the owner and junior encumbrances for the purchase of clear title up to the mortgage, either for cash or junior beneficial interest certificates;

2. The trustee, as the owner of all of the notes, may foreclose the mortgage if that is the only solution;

3. He may bid at the master's sale and later acquire title by master's deed;

4. After acquiring title he can manage the property until sale, and distribute the net income and proceeds of sale to its certificate holders;

5. If requested by its beneficiaries he can delegate the management of the property to another;

6. Any sale or encumbering of the property must be approved by a certain percentage of the beneficiaries.

Beneficial interest certificates are issued to each note holder in exchange for his note, in the same proportion to the total number of certificates as his note bore to the total note indebtedness. The trust property thenceforth is unaffected by the death or incapacity of any of the beneficiaries, or by possible judgments or bankruptcy proceedings against them.

If Uncle Sam hadn't tucked a $350,000 postoffice in Oak Park's Christmas sock the December suburban building figures would have ended the year in a nose dive. They'd have hit the bottom of 1932's long list of lows. But adding in the Oak Park postoffice permit gives the suburbs a total of $567,994, making it one of the four best months of the last year. The year's total in suburban building was $9,312,000 for 1932, as compared with $23,767,000 in 1931.

These figures are from the building survey conducted by S. W. Straus & Co., under the direction of Frederick Doyle, who has been with the Straus organization for a number of years. Mr. Doyle, who lives in River Forest, where he has been active in zoning and other civic matters, supplies the following month by month figures for fifty-three communities for two years:

February	399,000	2,529,000
March	291,000	1,747,000
April	715,000	2,623,000

December	567,000	1,165,000
Totals	$5,307,000	$23,763,000

The list of communities whose permits totaled approximately $100,000 or over is as follows:

HERE'S A SAD CASE- IT TELLS ABOUT A YOUNG MAN WHO HAS JUST BEEN SENT TO THE PENITENTIARY FOR THIRTY YEARS FOR A CRIME THAT HE COMMITTED- THINK OF IT- THE BEST PART OF A LIFE TIME-
JUST THINK OF IT- SERVING A SENTENCE OF THIRTY YEARS AT HARD LABOR- TO BE CONFINED BEHIND THOSE COLD-GRAY PRISON WALLS ALL OF THAT TIME- NEVER TO BE ALLOWED TO MIX WITH ANY OF HIS FRIENDS- WHAT KIND OF A MAN DO YOU THINK HE WILL BE WHEN HE GETS OUT OF JAIL?
WHAT KIND WILL HE?

DICK TRACY
by CHESTER GOULD
DICK TRACY JR.
IN HIS NEW CAP
IN AN EFFORT TO "PUT THE INDIAN SIGN" ON TRACY, GANGLAND HAS IMPORTED ONE "STOOGE" VILLER, ACE PICKPOCKET AND SLIGHT OF HAND WIZARD, WHOSE ORDERS ARE TO RUIN THE DETECTIVE PROFESSIONALLY, REGARDLESS OF HOW IT IS DONE.
HAVE YOU GOT THE PHONEY MONEY?
YEAH – I'M ALL SET. S'LONG.
ONE HOUR LATER, DICK TRACY AND JUNIOR ENTER A DOWNTOWN ELEVATOR ON THEIR WAY TO A FIFTH FLOOR SHOP TO PURCHASE AN OVERCOAT FOR THE BOY. THEY PAY LITTLE ATTENTION TO THE OUT OF TOWN STRANGER IN THE REAR.
WITH UNBELIEVABLE SWIFTNESS, AS THE ELEVATOR LOADS UP, DEFT FINGERS HOLDING A RAZOR BLADE SLIT THE DETECTIVE'S OVERCOAT AND INSERT A PACKAGE OF BILLS BETWEEN THE CLOTH AND THE LINING.
THEN DURING THE JOSTLING ABOUT AS THE CAR STOPS AT ANOTHER FLOOR THE SAME HANDS SLIP OTHER BILLS INTO THE SIDE TROUSER POCKET.
TWENTY MINUTES LATER
YES – I THINK WE'LL TAKE THAT COAT – DOES IT SUIT YOU, JUNIOR?
I'LL SAY – CHEE! DIS IS DE KIND OF A COAT I ALWAYS WANTED.
GREAT SCOTT! HERE ARE SOME BILLS I DIDN'T EVEN KNOW I HAD! NOW JUST HOW??? OH WELL – I MUST HAVE MISCOUNTED MY DOUGH THIS MORNING – HERE YOU ARE.
SHALL I SEND THE OLD COAT OUT, SIR?
HEY YOU, I'M FROM HEADQUARTERS – I'M LOOKING FOR A COUNTERFEITER THAT'S SUPPOSED TO BE IN THIS BUILDING WITH A BOY PASSING OUT BAD MONEY. —— DID HE COME IN HERE?
DOWNSTAIRS
YEAH – WE'LL TAKE THAT CAP – WELL, JUNIOR, YOU'RE PRETTY WELL FIXED NOW, EH?
CHEE – DIS IS SWELL, TRACY.
BETTER REPORT TO HEADQUARTERS ON THAT BILL – I'M GOING AFTER THAT GUY. WE PLAINCLOTHES MEN HAVE BEEN ON HIS TRAIL FOR A WEEK.
BROTHER – I'M TRACKING DOWN A COUNTERFEITER THAT'S WORKING WITH A BOY AND SUPPOSED TO BE PASSING PHONEY DOUGH IN THIS BUILDING —— HAVEN'T SEEN 'IM, HAVE YOU?
WORKING WITH A BOY? WELL FOR – I JUST WAITED ON HIM!
HELLO – CHIEF OF POLICE? MY NAME DOESN'T MATTER – BUT I JUST WANT TO TIP YOU OFF THAT YOUR ACE DETECTIVE, TRACY, IS CONDUCTING A LITTLE COUNTERFEIT RACKET ON THE SIDE. IF YOU DON'T BELIEVE ME, SEARCH HIM WHEN HE REPORTS IN.
CAN "STOOGE" VILLER'S TREACHERY POSSIBLY WORK? WE SHALL SEE...

SPRING COATS EXPRESS BEST ARTISTRY OF PARIS SALONS

Most Striking Changes Seen in Silhouettes

Low Necked and Too Wide Furless Wraps in Rough Woolens Are Superchic.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Spring wraps the like of which have not been seen for some time are being offered by Paris. A sweeping ambition agitates the French dressmakers to get wraps out of the rut of standardization. They forsake the get-together spirit and go off in diverse directions, designing wraps in lots of different forms.

They don't dare leave the traditional coat out altogether, so in all the Paris showings you will find some slim and trim coats that wouldn't shock the eyes of the most conventional minded. But these coats aren't the last word in new styles. Not by a thousand kilometers they aren't.

What is new in spring wraps is the Mainbocher coat that is actually low-necked and filled in around the shoulders by the dress that is worn with it: the Schiaparelli coat that is short, super-wide, and with soft, bulky shoulders; the Worth long cape, the Patou short-sleeved, round-necked coat, the Lucien Lelong hip-length corduroy cape, and such things.

Just what Mrs. World and her daughter are going to do about these styles is something we must wait until the break of spring and warm weather to find out. Certainly some women are going to take Worth's short, fur trimmed capes, because these are more like what we have worn before. Others will adopt Vionnet's fitted coats that are belted at the waistline and have fur collars.

Coats for the South.

Lucile Paray's narrow line wool coats that button smack up the front from hem to chin do not shock anybody and look chic, so they are already accepted by coat seekers for the south. Most of the new wraps, in fact, be they capes or coats, button on with few or many buttons, or with metal clips or disks.

The silhouette is not all there is that is strange and new in French coat styles. Some of the first dressmakers of Paris are making practical coats in the new, vivid pastel colors of pink, green, orchid, and blue wool. They do look springlike and appetizing after the somber colors of our long winter.

To offset this daring change in coat color schemes Paris shows a big array of black and dark blue coats, and heaps of gray, grege, and beige coats.

Most of the true, genuine, born-to-the-mode coats and capes for spring have no fur at the neckline. They are made to wear with or without separate furs, which continue to succeed amazingly in Paris fashions. As I have mentioned heretofore the newest and smartest separate fur pieces are going to be in two or three different colors to one piece, and Mainbocher's fox scarfs in beige and gray combined are runners of this fashion.

If you buy a long coat for spring you don't have to bother about matching it to the dresses you wear with it, and three-quarter coats, as Paris sees them, do not match their dresses either. When you wear the short fur-trimmed cape, however, it matches the dress in both color and material.

Fabrics Are Rough.

Coat woolens for spring are getting very rough. There are lots of cloky weaves, woven tucks, and other raised patterns to disturb the monotonous smoothness of the materials in vogue. These rough coats look too intriguing worn over a silky smooth dress. Short wraps that match the frock they keep company with are inevitably in the same material, this being a lightweight woolen that looks porous and is closely woven underneath so it doesn't pull and get out of shape. Corduroy is going strong as a spring coat and cape material. It is lined with wool for warmth.

Schiaparelli makes her short coats of the stunningest new material having raised wavy stripes a half-inch deep, and dresses with such coats are made of the same stuff. The ensemble shown at the extreme left is made of this silky-surfaced stuff. The coat is purposely made to look two sizes too broad, and that is why it is smart. It is dark, reddish brown in color, and has no collar, only tailored revers. The patch pockets help its bulk along. It is worn over a pinky beige dress that is starkly simple with a narrow fitted silhouette. It has a pink rough silk scarf attached at the neck, which is worn outside the coat. The color combination of this outfit is stunning.

Second from the extreme left is shown Worth's new long cape for spring, with a fitted vest to hold it snugly in place. This cape is made of a rough gray tweed, and it is neatly fitted around the shoulders by seams at the front and back. The vest, made of the same tweed, buttons up the front on silver buttons. It is worn over a green and gray striped knitted frock with fringe trimmings.

Sleeves Trimmed with Beaver.

On the figure second from the extreme right is shown a new spring coat from Jean Patou, designed to wear with a printed silk frock. This coat is about as narrow in line as a coat can well be, and looks slim and young. It makes up for its narrow body in the short sleeves that are very wide and made of bias bands with extra large cuffs of beaver fur The coat is brown in color and buttons at the center front on four brown buttons placed near the waistline. The dresslike neckline is round and is held together by a scarf of the coat material which passes through a slit in the left side front and

SKETCHED IN PARIS BY A TRIBUNE STAFF ARTIST.

PARIS SNAPSHOTS

Plain and practical woolen frocks in the Mainbocher collection are brightened up by belts of gold, silver or copper.

When spring suits come out the smartest blouse, if the suit is light, will be one in black satin cut like a shirt.

Youth and Ignorance Called Great Assets by Lillian Wald

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

"WE had those two great assets—youth and ignorance," said a woman the other day—one who has a lifetime of great achievement behind her. Youth and ignorance! Would you think of them as two great assets? It is a rather startling idea.

Most people who are parents, and most who are not, would feel quite the opposite to be true. Most of us, as we watch our boys and girls grow up are inclined to think that two of the greatest weaknesses in the armor they present to the world are these very qualities—youth and ignorance. We usually think of youth and ignorance as liabilities to be turned into assets as quickly as possible—the assets being their two opposites, age and knowledge.

But are these such unquestioned assets, after all? And are youth and ignorance such liabilities? Let's go back to the statement made in a speech by Lillian Wald at a dinner given in her honor.

You may know about Lillian Wald. But in case you do not, let me tell you that she is the head of the famous Henry Street settlement in New York, and is connected with many social and civic betterment movements. But perhaps the work that is her more remarkable feat is that of district

Ability to Make Friends Can Be Turned into a Lifelong Treasure

By Doris Blake.

IF the good fairy came offering you ONE gift of your own choosing, what would your request be?

Money? All the money you could spend? Jewels? Ropes of pearls and armfuls of bracelets? A trip around the world? A vocational ambition gratified? A grand home?

What is this greatest gift?

That people like you!

Whether you're very young, in middle life or later, what matters more than that people like you—that they want to have you with them or be with you?

Money buys a certain brand of devotion. Fawning, scheming, self-aggrandizing, too often. Not that moneyed people can't have loyal devotion. But if and when they have it, it isn't their money that is speaking. We've seen the tragic denouement of many a foolish human caught in the money debacle of the last couple of years. We've seen men—and women—who spent high, wide, and handsome in entertainment for "friends" who scuttled the ship immediately the fortune evaporated. Experience has proved time after time that friendships made and held by money glamor last no longer than the money lasts. When

Knowing Cooks Are Adept in Use of Spices

Add Just Proper Amount to Provide Foods with Tantalizing Subtlety.

By Mary Meade.

"O, the little more and how much it is!
And the little less, and what worlds away!"

SO mused some kitchen philosopher wise in the magic of the orient—in the treacherous perils and spicy pleasures of thyme and turmeric, caraway, cardamon, and sweet marjoram. And so muse we the more we adventure in cookery matter and glean wisdom from artists of the salad bowl, the curry kettle, and the soup tureen.

For to the sophisticated palate foods without seasoning are like people without personalities—unthinkably dull and stupid. Yet just as distressing are dishes smothered in too much spice. The happy conjurer of flavors is the one who has learned from master chefs or from continual adventuring just what glad point between the "little more" and the "little less" that makes foods twinkle with flavor and guests come back for more.

In America one sometimes suspects that we've so taken to ourselves the salt and pepper complex that foods are coming to taste more and more alike and less and less like the individuals they ought to be. And the answer is—find out about spices. Get acquainted with them by name and then set about discovering what they can do for you. Your own adventuring will teach you better than any cook book can. Remember that a spice should never dominate the dish, but rather subtly flatter it and lend a bouquet or aroma so elusive and so blended that even the most epicurean gourmet will hesitate to name it.

Vegetable Substances.

So, first, what are spices? The whole group of them are vegetable substances. Some, such as pepper, cloves, nutmegs, etc., come from the fruit of plants. Cinnamon is made from the bark of a tree. Thyme and sage come from leaves, and ginger and turmeric were originally roots.

We hear about spices primarily as seasonings for food, but many of them also fall in the class of medicines. Most of them are eastern gifts, with China, Japan, India, the West Indies, and the Malay archipelago as the donors.

In every spice we find oils called "volatile" because of their properties of speedy evaporation. It is these volatile oils which give the spices their aroma and flavoring value. The better the spices, therefore, the more choice are the flavors.

Now for a look in on names and descriptions. Some members of the spice family may be used so seldom that it seems valueless to have them on hand. But it's not valueless. The very infrequency with which we bring them out boosts family enthusiasm when they do appear.

Use Pepper Sparingly.

BLACK PEPPER is the fruit of a climbing shrub known as the piper nigrum. It is a perennial, originally a native of India, and clambers up tree trunks, from which it hangs its spikes of reddish-green berries. When partially ripe the spikes are picked and the berries dried, leaving them shriveled and blackish. After being cleaned they are packed away in bags or ground ready for the market. There are an assortment of black pepper types, since peppers grown in different localities boast differences in flavor. Pepper is liked by most diners, and is popular either whole or ground for seasoning meats, relishes, pickles, soups, salads, and vegetables. It is also one of the worst offenders when the cook becomes too enthusiastic, so shake pepper with care.

WHITE PEPPER is not, as some people assume, a spice of a different family. It is merely black pepper undressed. One or more of the outer layers of the berry are stripped off by machinery, and, since much of the "peppery" flavor is hidden in the shells, white pepper is less potent than its darker brother. The light color is in its favor, however, and we often use it for that reason in eggs, soups, mashed potatoes, etc.

RED PEPPER is not even a distant relative of the true black pepper plant. It is a member of the night shade family, bears a pod which is green when unripe, scarlet when ripe, and boasts an assortment of shapes, sizes, and degrees of hotness. The usual ground red pepper is made from the powdered ripe pod of any of these varieties.

CAYENNE PEPPER, GUINEA PEPPER, or CHILLIES comes from any of several kinds of nightshade pepper plants, and are dried and ground much as is red pepper.

PAPRIKA is less fiery than cayenne and may be used wherever bright color and delicate flavors are needed. It is made from the Hungarian red pepper, of which only the flesh is used. It makes an appealing garnish in addition to adding piquancy to soups, salads, meats and the like.

PIMENTO OR ALLSPICE should not be confused with the nightshade fruit "pimiento," sometimes spelled "pimento." The true pimento or allspice is the berry of a certain type of evergreen tree and gets its name because it much resembles the berry of the real pepper plant. The name allspice has been given the berry because it really has the flavor of the three principle spices—nutmegs, cloves, and cinnamon. The next time you make apple pie or bake a spice cake, use allspice as the main seasoning. You'll be proud of the blend you've produced—with the help of nature.

NUTMEGS also grow on certain

New Beauty Calls for Youthful Figure

Regular Exercise Routine Wards Off That Thick, Heavy Look Common to Middle Aged Women.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

TODAY, we're getting after arms and legs that need exercise. Whether they are overdeveloped or underdeveloped, the same exercise works the wanted charm if done with consistent regularity.

Arm exercises are also of benefit to the shoulder line, bust, upper back, and waist. Unless war is begun early enough on this section of the body—exercise war is meant—after thirty a general thickening is seen. Arms get too fat, the bust gets heavier, shoulders thicker—and the whole effect is ageing.

So first do the old-time arm calisthenic movements [not illustrated here]. Do them briskly, starting with clenched fists at the neck hollows. From here, shoot arms overhead, out to the sides, and directly in front. Do this a dozen times daily. You can do it clothed.

For the Upper Part of Body.

Then, getting down to real business, put your arms, shoulders, and bust area on the "circle" treatment, as illustrated in No. 1.

Take a good punch at those over or underdeveloped arms, as shown in No. 2. A punching bag, real or imaginary, is there to take the blow. Drive one fist forward, then the other.

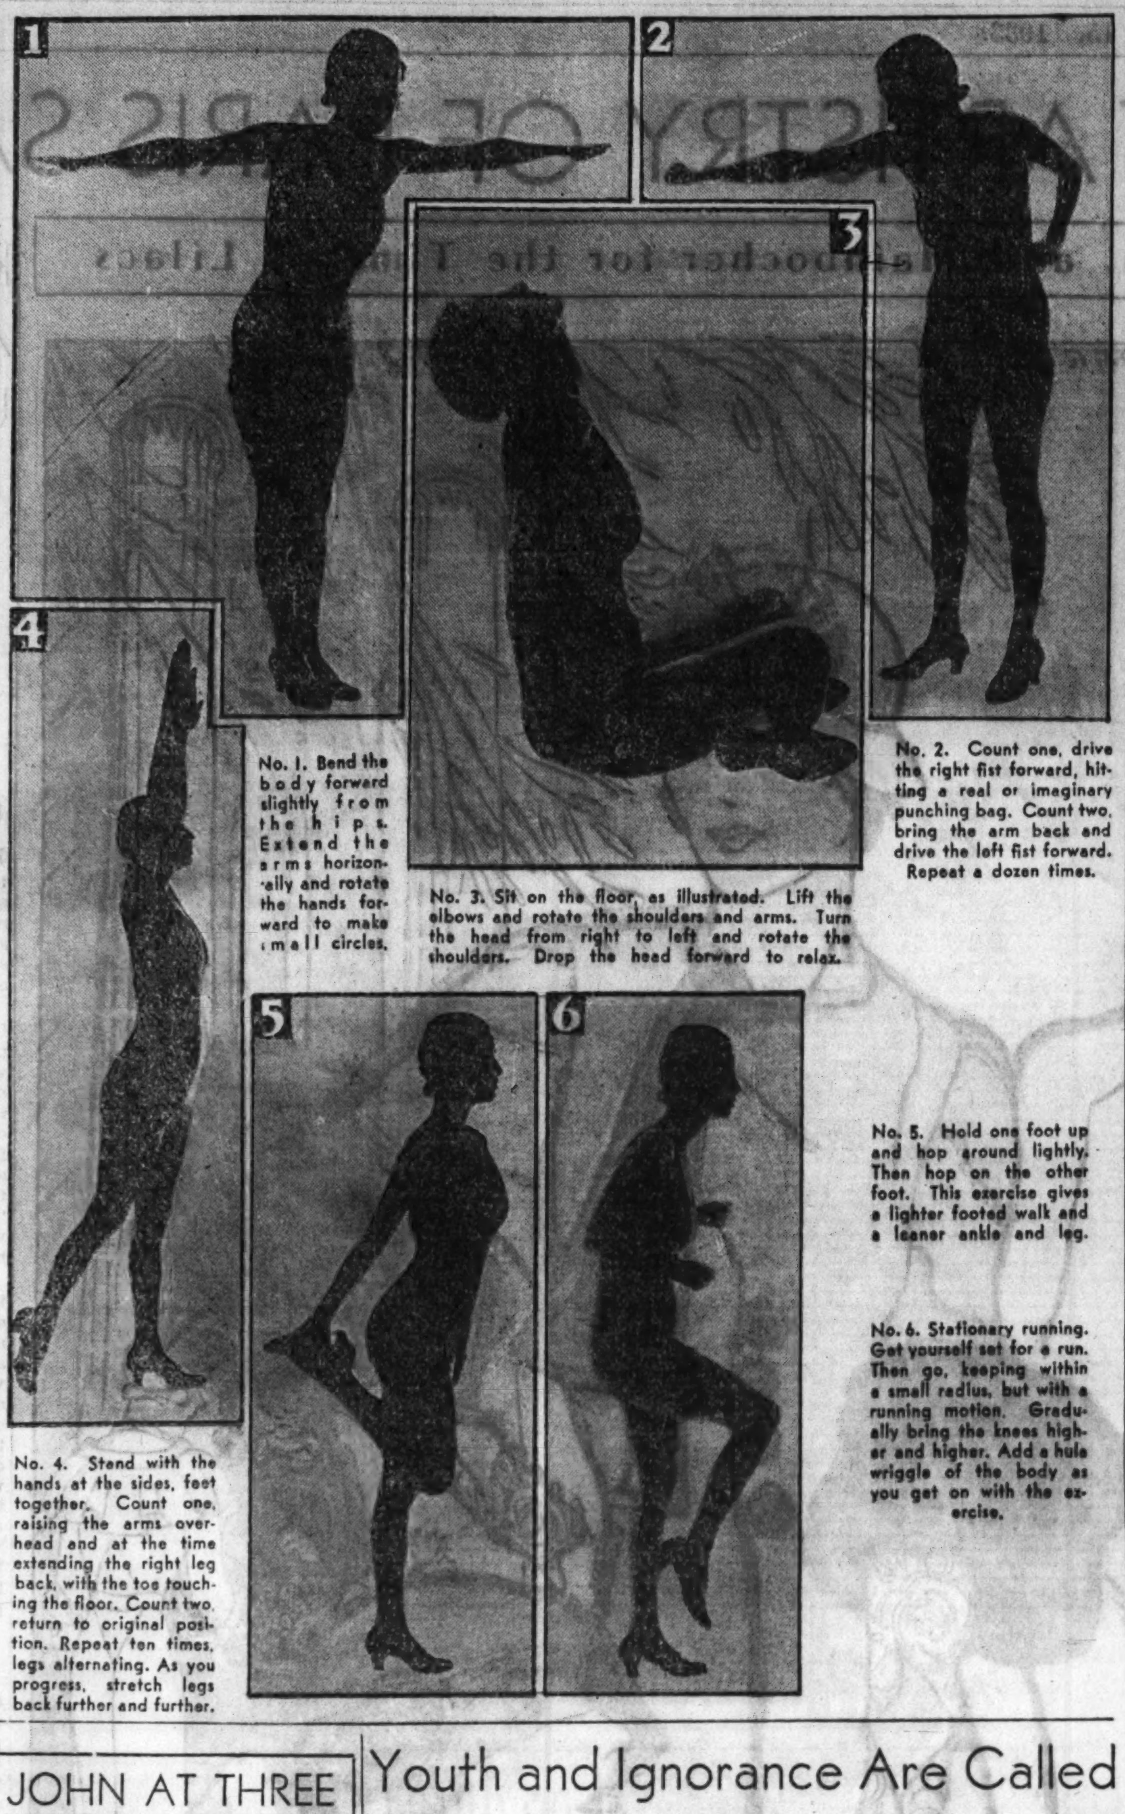
No. 3 is another exercise for the arms, shoulder, and bust area, with added benefit to the neck.

Leg Reducing Exercises.

Nos. 4, 5, and 6 are primarily exercises for leg reducing, but they'll also provide you with the new kind of beauty needed for modern requirements—the beauty of pliant grace, bouyancy, flexibility, lightness, and youth.

No. 5 is especially good for injecting more lightness of foot into your walk. No woman is younger than her feet, you know, so you can judge by your hop how young or how old you are.

As has been said before, the only way to meet the new beauty requirements is to limber up the stiff muscles, coaching them to light, easy reaction. Only daily exercise will do this.



No. 1. Bend the body forward slightly from the hips. Extend the arms horizontally and rotate the hands forward to make small circles.

No. 2. Count one, drive the right fist forward, hitting a real or imaginary punching bag. Count two, bring the arm back and drive the left fist forward. Repeat a dozen times.

No. 3. Sit on the floor, as illustrated. Lift the elbows and rotate the shoulders and arms. Turn the head from right to left and rotate the shoulders. Drop the head forward to relax.

No. 4. Stand with the hands at the sides, feet together. Count one, raising the arms overhead and at the time extending the right leg back, with the toe touching the floor. Count two, return to original position. Repeat ten times, legs alternating. As you progress, stretch legs back further and further.

No. 5. Hold one foot up and hop around lightly. Then hop on the other foot. This exercise gives a lighter footed walk and a leaner ankle and leg.

No. 6. Stationary running. Get yourself set for a run. Then go, keeping within a small radius, but with a running motion. Gradually bring the knees higher and higher. Add a hula wriggle of the body as you get on with the exercise.

ABILITY TO MAKE FRIENDS CAN BE LIFELONG ASSET

Material possessions, the bigger and better house, the coveted antique, the silver plate, the Ming vase—these are satisfying generally until they are possessed. But there's nothing human about their companionship to answer the crying need in the soul.

Fame has its big moments—on the way up. Yet some of the loneliest people in the world are those whose names are best known to the reading public. The single track pursuit of their life ambition serves often to isolate the fame seekers. They make no business of friendships—and learn too late that there is no substitute for them. Money may be an isolating factor. The rich man frequently is afraid that he is cultivated for mercenary motives. And decent, friendly people are afraid to court the rich man for fear their motive may be misconstrued.

How to be an isolated soul with no capacity for making people like you, however, isn't what you want to hear

Possible to Remake Oneself.

What is in the prescription that makes people liked? Can an individual who is not popular remake his or her nature? Answering the latter question a story comes to mind of a woman whose domineering, high handed method of dealing with her club women friends made her thoroughly disliked. These women largely made up the body of her social contact. She had a disinterested way of listening to what was said. Maybe she was planning one of her razor edged comebacks, of which she was frequently guilty. And how righteous that woman was! Hard as nails toward persons whose conduct did not follow her prescribed pattern.

Well, there came a day when her college boy son brought disgrace upon his parents. The woman hid away for a time. When she finally did emerge, there was an extraordinary change in her. Gone were the high handed manner, the ruthless judgments, and the indifferent ear. There was tolerance now, an air of humility, a desire to be liked, and the understanding that there had to be more than the average kindness to offset the former impression. But the woman won.

However, one doesn't have to await a tragedy to awaken him to the alienating qualities in his nature.

The people we like best are those people who vitalize and energize us. The people who "lift" us out of our selves. So, one of the ingredients in the popularity prescription certainly must be enthusiasm born of a healthy energetic body. Friends are made most easily in youth because youth has an abundant store of this energy of which we speak.

First Impressions Important.

How do you meet people? Do you act as if you are really pleased to meet people, or does a wall of reserve rise up and cut you off from furthe contact? Are you indifferent, making no effort to catch the name or mention it aloud at parting? Are you fresh, pert, wise cracking on the occasion of a first meeting?

Do you ever think of your voice as a striking feature of why people like or do not like you? That voice of yours reports at once to the new acquaintance a cold, a bored, a supercilious character or a cheerful, kindly, friendly one. The manner in which you carry yourself influences people to or against you. Your bearing radiates well being and a happy spirit or a dispirited, discontented soul.

Habits, too, have a great influence as to whether people are disposed to like or dislike you. There may be nervous, fidgety habits that get on others' nerves. There may be habits of speech that are offensive. There may be bad mannered habits committed through ignorance or indifference to other people's feelings.

Develop Breadth of Vision.

The narrow little viewpoints permitting others only your opinion on politics or religion or social life are ostracizing.

But perhaps on this about-to-be named failing more people are disliked than on any other. It is being so wrapped up in one's self and in one's own aims, pursuits, and accomplishments that there's no time for interest in the other fellow.

This is cited as the most dangerous fault because you may have a thousand failings, yet if you can make the other fellow feel that you are truly interested in him and what he's doing all else will be forgiven.

types of evergreen trees. Actually they are merely the kernel of tree seeds. When they are ripe they appear to be pale orange, and about three inches long. First the outer husk cracks off, looking much like the husk of a hickory nut. Next comes a substance around the outer shell of each nutmeg. This is actually another spice—mace—which is removed before the nutmeg is reached. When once the shells are off, insects are likely to attack nutmegs unless discouraged, so the kernels are dipped into a strong solution of lime, which gives them their familiar white coat and preserves them indefinitely. Nutmeg gratings make a delicious topping for custards, puddings, sauces and fruit dishes. Or add a dash to curried rice and bow to the family applause.

MACE, as explained above, is removed from around the shell of the nutmeg. At first it is brilliant red, and then dries to a golden brown color. Use it whole or ground in pickles, and ground in pastries, cakes, and puddings. It is pleasantly tantalizing when blended with other spices and used to flavor meats.

CINNAMON AND CASSIA are ground from the inner bark of trees of the laurel family. The bark is sun dried and curls of its own accord into the quills we find on the market. Whole cinnamon is used in pickles and in preparing certain meat dishes, while ground cinnamon adds a delectable flavor and aroma to milk drinks, cakes, pies, all sorts of fruits, and is especially delicious with chocolate flavor. Cinnamon fudge is a treat to talk about, and a sprinkle of cinnamon in none other than spinach is thought by French chefs to bring out the most delicate flavor.

Many Uses for Ginger.

GINGER is the root of zinzibar, a perennial plant grown readily in most tropical countries. Green ginger is so called since it is undried. We usually find it preserved in heavy sirup or candied. Chopped fine and sprinkled over fruit cup or in the heart of a ripe pear, it adds a new sparkle of flavor to a familar dish. Dried ginger may be scraped until nearly white or it may be ground with the dark peel attached. A dash of ginger in apple pie gives a pleasant change from the usual cinnamon flavor. Cakes, pickles and cooked fruits also enjoy ginger for a new tang.

CLOVES are neither roots, bark, nor berry, but dried flower buds of still another type of evergreen tree. They are picked when they have turned dull blood red, and are carefully dried. Many times cloves may be used effectively in cakes, pies, and puddings as well as in pickles. Rice pudding and fruit betties are especially flattered by the clove flavor.

CARAWAY SEEDS are the fruit of the plant Carum Carui, grown in Europe, Asia, and in America. Many European cookies and cakes as well as breads and cheeses sport caraway seeds atop their crustiness. A plain cookie takes on a new flavor when sifted over with these seeds.

CUMIN SEEDS—sometimes spelled "cummin" seeds or called "cominos," are used mainly as one of the constituents of curry, a blended seasoning powder. They also may be used either ground or whole in pickles and sausage meat.

ANISE is a plant widely grown along the Mediterranean. The part we usually call the seed is really a fruit and is very strong in odor and flavor. It is used as a seasoning in puddings, candies and cookies.

CELERY SEEDS are natives of southern France and are collected from wild celery there. A sprinkling of seeds in soups or meat dishes adds an indescribable tang.

Poppy Seeds.

POPPY seeds come from poppy plants in various parts of Europe, but connoisseurs look most favorably on the Dutch variety—a deep blue seed. Usually we think of poppy seeds as belonging strictly to foreign markets, but our own domestic cookies and breads take a new lease on life when sprinkled with these small, mild bits of flavor.

CARDAMOMS (often spelled "cardamon") is an herb found mainly in India—one which is a very popular ingredient in curries. The flowers or seeds are pleasantly spicy and are often sprinkled over fruit puddings or cookies.

MARJORAM, especially the "sweet" or "knotted," and the "pot" varieties, are used for their aromatic leaves. These are dried and are used in meat dishes, soups, egg dishes, and other foods which relish variety and piquancy in their flavoring.

MUSTARD seeds—often times bought in powder form—come to us in cream colors or in brown. The powdered mustard is simply the mustard kernel, ground up. Brown mustard is hotter than the yellow and usually too fervid for most tastes. It is more important that a mustard be sweet in taste and odor than that it be exceptionally pungent. A dash of mustard in the meat or vegetable salad, or prepared mustard as a seasoning for broiled chops and sandwiches, will give you a start on an endless chain of mustard possibilities.

TARRAGON is another aromatic herb and tastes a bit like anise. The French call it ESTRAGON and knowing chefs advise the use of its leaves, either dried or fresh, as a delightful flavoring for salads, soups, and pickles.

THYME is also an herb, this time of the mint family. The leaves are dried and usually powdered and are excellent additions to vegetables, soups, sauces, meats, and dressings.

TURMERIC comes from the ginger family, is a native Asiatic herb and has a root which is dried and powdered. It helps out in the making of curry powder and in the seasoning of meat, egg, and cheese dishes.

BAY LEAF comes from the small laurel shrub or bay tree. The leaves are dried carefully, powdered, and used by careful cooks as frequent seasoning in soups, pickles, and meat sauces.

Don't Overseason with Sage.

SAGE is a common sweet aromatic herb grown in most moderate temperatures. Sausages, meat dishes, dressings for fowl and savory sauces make excellent mediums in which it may appear. Don't over season with sage, as too much may be distasteful to some.

CORIANDER is a fruit, though sometimes called a seed. It belongs to the celery family and is well liked by the initiated, who put it in combination meat and vegetable dishes with telling effect.

DILL shouldn't be left only to pickles. The leaves of the dill herb are dried and make excellent flavoring for soups and sauces, while the seeds do duty in the pickles.

FENNEL is another cousin of the celery family and may be grown in our own gardens. The fresh leaves are tasty as salad garnishes and when dried are used with the seeds as a flavoring for mild flavored main dishes.

SAVORY is another herb of the mint family grown for its leaves. Use them frequently fresh or dried in sauces, vegetables, soups, etc.

SAFFRON is an infrequent visitor in most American kitchens since it is quite high in price. It is composed of the dried stigmas of a certain flower grown in Spain, and is used to give a yellow color to soups, bread, cookies, and sauces.

CURRY POWDER is a blended seasoning powder combining ground spices and flavoring seeds. A great many of the above spices go into the making of a typical curry powder. To add curry powder to a dish is to "curry" the dish. Fish, game, eggs, and chops especially enjoy being curried.

POULTRY SEASONING is another combination, this time of ground herbs and spices. It gives a most delectable and uniform flavor to dressings for meats and fowl.

JOHN AT THREE

By Eleanor Jewett.

Mother! Why do we go to sleep?
And why has an egg a shell?
Why, when I fall, do you quickly say,
"Darling, I'm sorry you FELL"?

Does the sun wear pink pajamas?
Are his blankets and comforter pink?
What do I do with my thoughts
When I sometimes forget what I think?

Are the stars your blown-out candles?
Is the moon afraid in the night?
Why is the summer rain gray
And the snow in winter, white?

Mother! Do you like questions?
O, dear, is it time for bed?
Do you think I will know my own answers
When I have an older head?

Youth and Ignorance Are Called Great Treasures by Lillian Wald

nursing in the establishment of which she was the pioneer. This idea she conceived and developed into the great work that it is today.

It came about after she had spent some five years in the east side in New York. After she had seen the terrible conditions there she had this impulse to serve these wretched people. In the 1890's you can imagine the poverty, ignorance and squalor that existed in those crowded tenements. Then, imagine one young person expecting to make any impression on it, expecting to interest the west side, the north side and the south side in these shocking conditions, expecting to stir them to the need for improving those conditions, and further, expecting them to supply the wherewithal for doing such a job.

If you could have seen the east side as people knew it then you would have thought the idea ridiculous. "But," said Lillian Wald at the dinner given for her, "I had two great assets—youth and ignorance." If she had asked the advice of a wiser, older person we can imagine what it would have been. But she did not. This is the spirit of youth that has accomplished some of the wonders of the world. This is how many of the things actually proved impossible by the old and wise have been achieved.

Suppose, for instance, the Wright brothers had believed the wisdom of that genius, Sir Isaac Newton, who proved conclusively (!) that a heavier-than-air machine was impossible to build. Knowledge has laughed at those who toyed with the idea of flying, ever since Leonardo da Vinci designed his aeroplane, hundreds of years ago. But youth often has the high heart to attempt the impossible.

Young Eyes See Clearly.

Youth sees things clearly because things are fresh to its eyes. It is often because youth is ignorant of obstacles that it overcomes them successfully as it meets them—they don't loom up ahead in a solid mass.

We undervalue some of the finest things about youth. We must not make the children think of these priceless possessions—youth and ignorance—as qualities that are their weakness, but as qualities that are their strength.

Another thing. We think altogether too much of youth as a preparation. In fact, many people think of it only as a preparation for living. But youth is living—youth is a rich and glowing part of life. It should not be thought of as getting ready for being an adult, as if that were the finished product.

We are coming to realize more and more that being grown up isn't being finished—that people go on growing and learning and changing. Look at all the courses, in colleges and out, for adult education. Look at all the people, some famous and some merely well known, who tell about how long it took them to find themselves in an art or a profession. At the legal age of 21 they were not finished products. Often they were 25 before they reached the goal for which their youth was a preparation.

Happily there are more and more people working with children today who value youth and who refuse to consider it merely a preparation. A striking instance of this came to my attention the other day in connection with education.

New Curriculum Pending.

You know how widespread the belief is that the four years of study represented by high school must be devoted to preparation for college. It is for this reason that private schools are usually called "prep" schools.

Of course, all of us who really know youth know that this is all wrong. But here at last is light ahead. A committee has been made up of the heads of a group of colleges and secondary [high] schools who are going to work together. Their aim is to so liberalize the college requirements that the four years of adolescence need not be spent in an academic grind of preparation. Instead these young people, at this fast growing, rapidly changing time, will have this constant pressure and anxiety removed and be able to live a richer, freer life both in school and out, and at last enter college really fitted for a higher education of a live sort.

It seemed to be like reaching for the moon to express such a wish a few years ago—and now it is coming to pass. So, youth as a time to be lived for itself is being given a new chance. I think that parents who are interested in this point of view, and those young people who have been made to feel that their immaturity and inexperience are such tremendous drawbacks, will enjoy reading Robert Louis Stevenson's little known book, "In Laus Veneris" (In Praise of Youth).

You will see the clever black wool frocks, simple of silhouette, tailored and detailed with faultless artistry, made with intricate design, fashioned of fascinating new fabrics and then accented with just a wisp or two of crisp white organdy or sparkling white piqué.

The new sleeves are mercifully restrained . . . slim sleeve enthusiasts will rise and cheer for the new slim sleeved numbers. It was inevitable that gargantuan proportions in sleeves should fizzle this new season when moderation, individuality, and distinction are being stressed. Uncontrollably generous sleeves are doomed, for which some one should be handsomely decorated by appreciative shoppers and the girls who struggled to stow the cumbersome things in outside coat sleeves that were made for minimum yardage only.

Omnipresent Capes.

The one thing we, as females, seem to have with us always are the capes, the cape collars, the cape-d coats, the shoulder cape collars, and the cape-d sleeve effects. Everything from early morning dresses to swanky, slinky evening gowns are made with capes or things that look like capes. Another sticker is the matching detachable jacket. All the scraps left over from a dress are twisted and turned and cut into the smart little extras that masquerade as boleros, jackets, and capes.

Most of the new woolen fabrics are thin and some are sheer, but all are smooth and frightfully ladylike, even a bit sissy. Tweeds are tweeds and the daytime wools are just as different from rough nubby wools as the makers can manage. When silk is used the rough crinkled textures again get the fashion spotlight; even the simple black and navy blue silk costumes are fashioned of thick crinkled crêpes and rough bumpy silks.

Four selections for immediate wear have been sketched . . . four distinctive models that any clever fashion wise shopper can buy and slap right on the old backbone. And when you buy these charming new things, you are being shrewd, perspicacious, and typically feminine, for any one of them can be used with telling effect under your fur trimmed winter coat, and then used weeks later when the spring zephyrs lure you into leaving the heavy outside layers hanging on the hanger while you dash down the boulevard, a slim young thing in black or navy blue, with a flattering fur scarf cuddled around your neck for chic as well as cozy warmth.

Seams Cut on Bias.

At the extreme left is shown a black crinkled crêpe silk suit, perfect for daytime wear from morning till the dinner hour. The dress owns the sleeves. It is divinely slim and skins inches from the average figure. The important seams are cut on the bias and the skirt joins the blouse top in clever triangular sections at the fitted hipline. A new neckline has been launched, the puckered draw string effect, shown in this dress, that is pulled over a piece of material in a bib. The coat is hip length, with fitted shoulder capes that are universally becoming. For sharp contrast, stiffened white cotton voile roses are placed around the collar line. Other interesting alternatives in color, flower, and collar ideas are more than possible.

Bow to the return of the tailored coat dress that seems blithely to enter the best fashion showings every spring. The sketch, second from the left, shows a crêpe silk dress in navy blue combined with a contrasting underskirt of crinkled blue and white silk. The shallow yoke and side bow are also of the same ribbed and ruffled silk. Huge red bone buttons complete this dashing costume.

A Slenderizing Model.

The costume, sketched second from the right, is a knockout. It is made of thin black wool, simply and smartly, and will make you look like a slim poplar tree. Exactly sixty-five shiny braid covered buttons march right down the front seam and outline the inverted kick plait in front. Plain unpuffed sleeves are beautifully tailored and also button with braid covered small buttons. The most exciting shoulder scarf ever designed comes with this good looking dress . . . a long wool scarf collar uses a slightly ruffled band of shiny black silk military braid for smart accent. This scarf can be used in numerous alluring effects, of which is sketched.

At the extreme right is sketched the two piece navy blue wool suit. A straight line dress hugs the figure and double triangle seams are used for fitting the slender waistline. The dress is short sleeved and the coat is perfect . . . drop shoulder sleeves with one button anchored at each wrist and matching buttons are used in front. White piqué, that most versatile of accents, is used for the perky tailored bow on the dress and the contrasts on the suit coat.

These, ladies—and interested gentlemen, who pay the bills—are what the first excited early bird shopper will find in the way of different looking midseason costumes for instant purchase, just four of many other infinitely attractive things that are hanging temptingly fresh and new for questing shoppers. All found in one Chicago shop!

KNITTING'S BACK IN FASHION AND IT'S LOTS OF FUN

Expert Designer Will Supply Chicago Tribune Readers with Instructions for Making Their Own Chic Costumes

Knitting-time is coming on, coming on, coming on;

Knitting-time is coming on, my fair lady . . .

By Beatrix Williams.

THREE months in advance of our seasonal fashions we must go yarning! Knitting takes time after we already have spent much thought and labor in definitely deciding what we want to knit. Already there are busy fingers working on what will be worn in the spring.

The greatest pleasure in knitting for personal wear is in planning and executing our own individual ideas, for no one actually wants to follow the crowd. With knitted wear more than anything else there is the delightful feeling of creating something with our own hands to our own taste. There is the all-absorbing interest in how it is going to turn out, while all the idle hours are put to practical use.

Economy predominates in producing new clothing at nominal cost with pleasant labor, and we are fast becoming style conscious as we have never been before since we developed a knitting conscience. Never before has there been such a wave of actual style in handmade clothing and never, never have we had such a generous array of yarns to cover the needs of every occasion. That's why we go yarning first of all. It is a liberal education to shop on yarns, to know about their utility and suitability, their effects and working qualities, their possibilities and our own.

Wide Varieties of Yarns.

There are yarns for fair ladies, tiny little newcomers, growing youth, and mere men. The manufacturers have given due consideration to all our wants. They have become color-minded as they have never been before. It is perfectly safe to sally forth without a single idea in mind as to what we are going to knit, for whom, and why. With simply the urge to knit we may learn this simplest of handicrafts and join the happy band of case hardened disciples of the knitting pins and then rest assured it will come out all right.

To be perfectly frank about knitting in general we must first of all be color conscious about our knitted wear. This coming year is our purple year. We have it in all varying shades, ranging through the blue purples, the red purples, and the magentas of our grandmothers to the cherry reds. All these colors are variants of the red and blue combinations which go to make up a purple dye.

Thereupon we build our color scheme. We bear in mind the fact that we need an ensemble carrying something of these hues, with the idea away back somewhere in our mind that we have some favorite main color upon which we more or less base our wardrobe. We judge which shade of the fashion of the moment will blend with this and combine it in our selection.

Then we must introduce our third or complimentary color in such a way as to complete the balance and tone so dear to the heart of the fashion expert. At the bottom of our color column we always note that black and white are neutral—being either cold or warm in effect as the other two colors fit into the scheme. Establishing our color balance, we go forth to find these in the most suitable yarns to meet our needs as to price, as to effect, and for a pleasing display. All of us at heart respond to color in some way, and all during the period of knitting a garment we enjoy it more or less as the colors affect us.

We Crave Style.

Then we crave style. Has there ever been a time when we have known such a wide and varied field to draw upon? There is a style for every occasion, from our bed jacket, if we like, in the early morning to the evening formal in the choicest of yarns. Our imagination runs riot as we study books, fashions, and styles pro and con.

We may want only one garment, the utility garment which we may wear informally for the whole day. Choosing our own yarn, we embark upon a two piece long sleeved ensemble with our color scheme in mind, with a basic color to fit all times in the form of any of those medium shades.

We seek a sports outfit—then we still keep to the two piece, but change the yarn to a purely sports wool, wool and silk, wool and rayon, wool and bouclé with interchanging colors already spun into them, or select our basic single-toned main color and break out in a rash of stripes, blotches, patches, or even Fair Isle patterns. The wilder and more bizarre the combination we have in the soft wools or combinations, the more cheerfully we go about our golf, tennis, or play.

Fashions for Any Hour.

We seek a street dress, suit, or ensemble and have a one piece, two piece, or three piece fashion style, using the ever popular bouclé, wool, or silk arrangements to suit our taste and our pocketbooks. Business wear is especially effective in the styles given for street wear, and over the one piece we simply must have our capes or jackets to bring them up to the minute. Between raglan two piece, one piece with capes or jacquettes, and the three piece suit of last spring we must spend considerable time deciding which is to be our most becoming business dress ensemble.

In knitting fashions we cater specially to the leisured afternoons, parties, and bridge teas with our one piece dress in attractive patterns, lacy and smart, the sleeves being our main concentration for effective styles. Whatever we see in sleeve fashions we introduce into our knitted dresses for social functions up to 6 o'clock. From then on we depart from sleeves to capelets, sleevelets, drapes, and shoulderettes of some sort or other and add our cocktail jackets of every kind in all the lacy patterns we can find.

Our colors follow us all through the night in bouclés, lightweight silks and mercerized threads, from plain knitting to Irish crochet work and remarkable copies of Maltese, Levlon, and filet laces to our daisy wheel patterns. Still we keep it up to the formal evening gown of these finer yarns and silks, where we may work out all the fashionable styles of the moment, fortify ourselves with the correctly fitting and matching underslip and then value our garment up to three hundred dollars at midnight.

Dress Pattern Features Two Chic Necklines

Bodice May Be Buttoned High or Worn Open in Becoming Rever Effect.

The Winter Fashion Magazine, a 32 page Clotilde pattern book in color, is available for 15 cents a copy; but if a Clotilde pattern is ordered at the same time, the price of the magazine is only 10 cents. By Clotilde.

THIS simply designed but very smart dress—made by pattern No. 3135—is quite different in character and will surely appeal to college girls as well as women.

It has the new high neckline, so important this season, long close fitting sleeves, and a two piece circular skirt attached to the bodice in a pointed outline. The bodice can be worn open in rever effect if you like it better that way than being buttoned to the neck.

Care must be taken in laying the pattern pieces on the material, for left and right fronts are not alike. After the dress is cut out and all marks transferred to the material, baste a line down the center front and back of both skirt and bodice, and in fitting be sure to keep these bastings where they belong. The bodice buttons on the right side and the bottom is cut in deep, diagonal points.

The top of the skirt is cut to fit into the bodice outline, the bodice being turned under a seam's width around the bottom and basted over the upper skirt edge. Pin the skirt and bodice together first at the points then the sides, and the center front and back. Then baste and stitch, putting in either one or two rows, depending on the material used.

The neck may be bound or faced, and, if the dress is woolen, baste a strip of cambric in between the facings or hems on the bodice so that it will be easier to make good buttonholes.

The sleeves are cut in one piece, and in pinning the seam together, see that the fold down the outside is perfectly smooth. If there should be a twist, shift the upper seam edge ever so little, one way or the other.

A wine red supple woolen with toning bone buttons will be stunning and rough silk crêpe is lovely for this design.

A pretty blouse pattern is always welcome, and this one, made by pattern No. 2850, is a darling. It has the Victorian puffed sleeves and the raglan shoulders that are so well liked. It's a practical type, too, fashioned of a novelty woolen, or one of the rough silk crêpes, and is very easy to make. The bottom of the blouse is gathered into a two piece, fitted band with buttons on the left side.

emerges to hang down like a jabot. The scarf and coat are lined with brown silk printed with white outline roses, done as with a pen.

TEMPER

By Grace Sartwell Mason

Cristina Blake Had Been a Quiet, Mouselike Little Thing, Waiting on Others, Obeying Orders; Then One Day She Rebelled, and with a Loud Bang She Shot the First Gun in Her Fight for Independence.

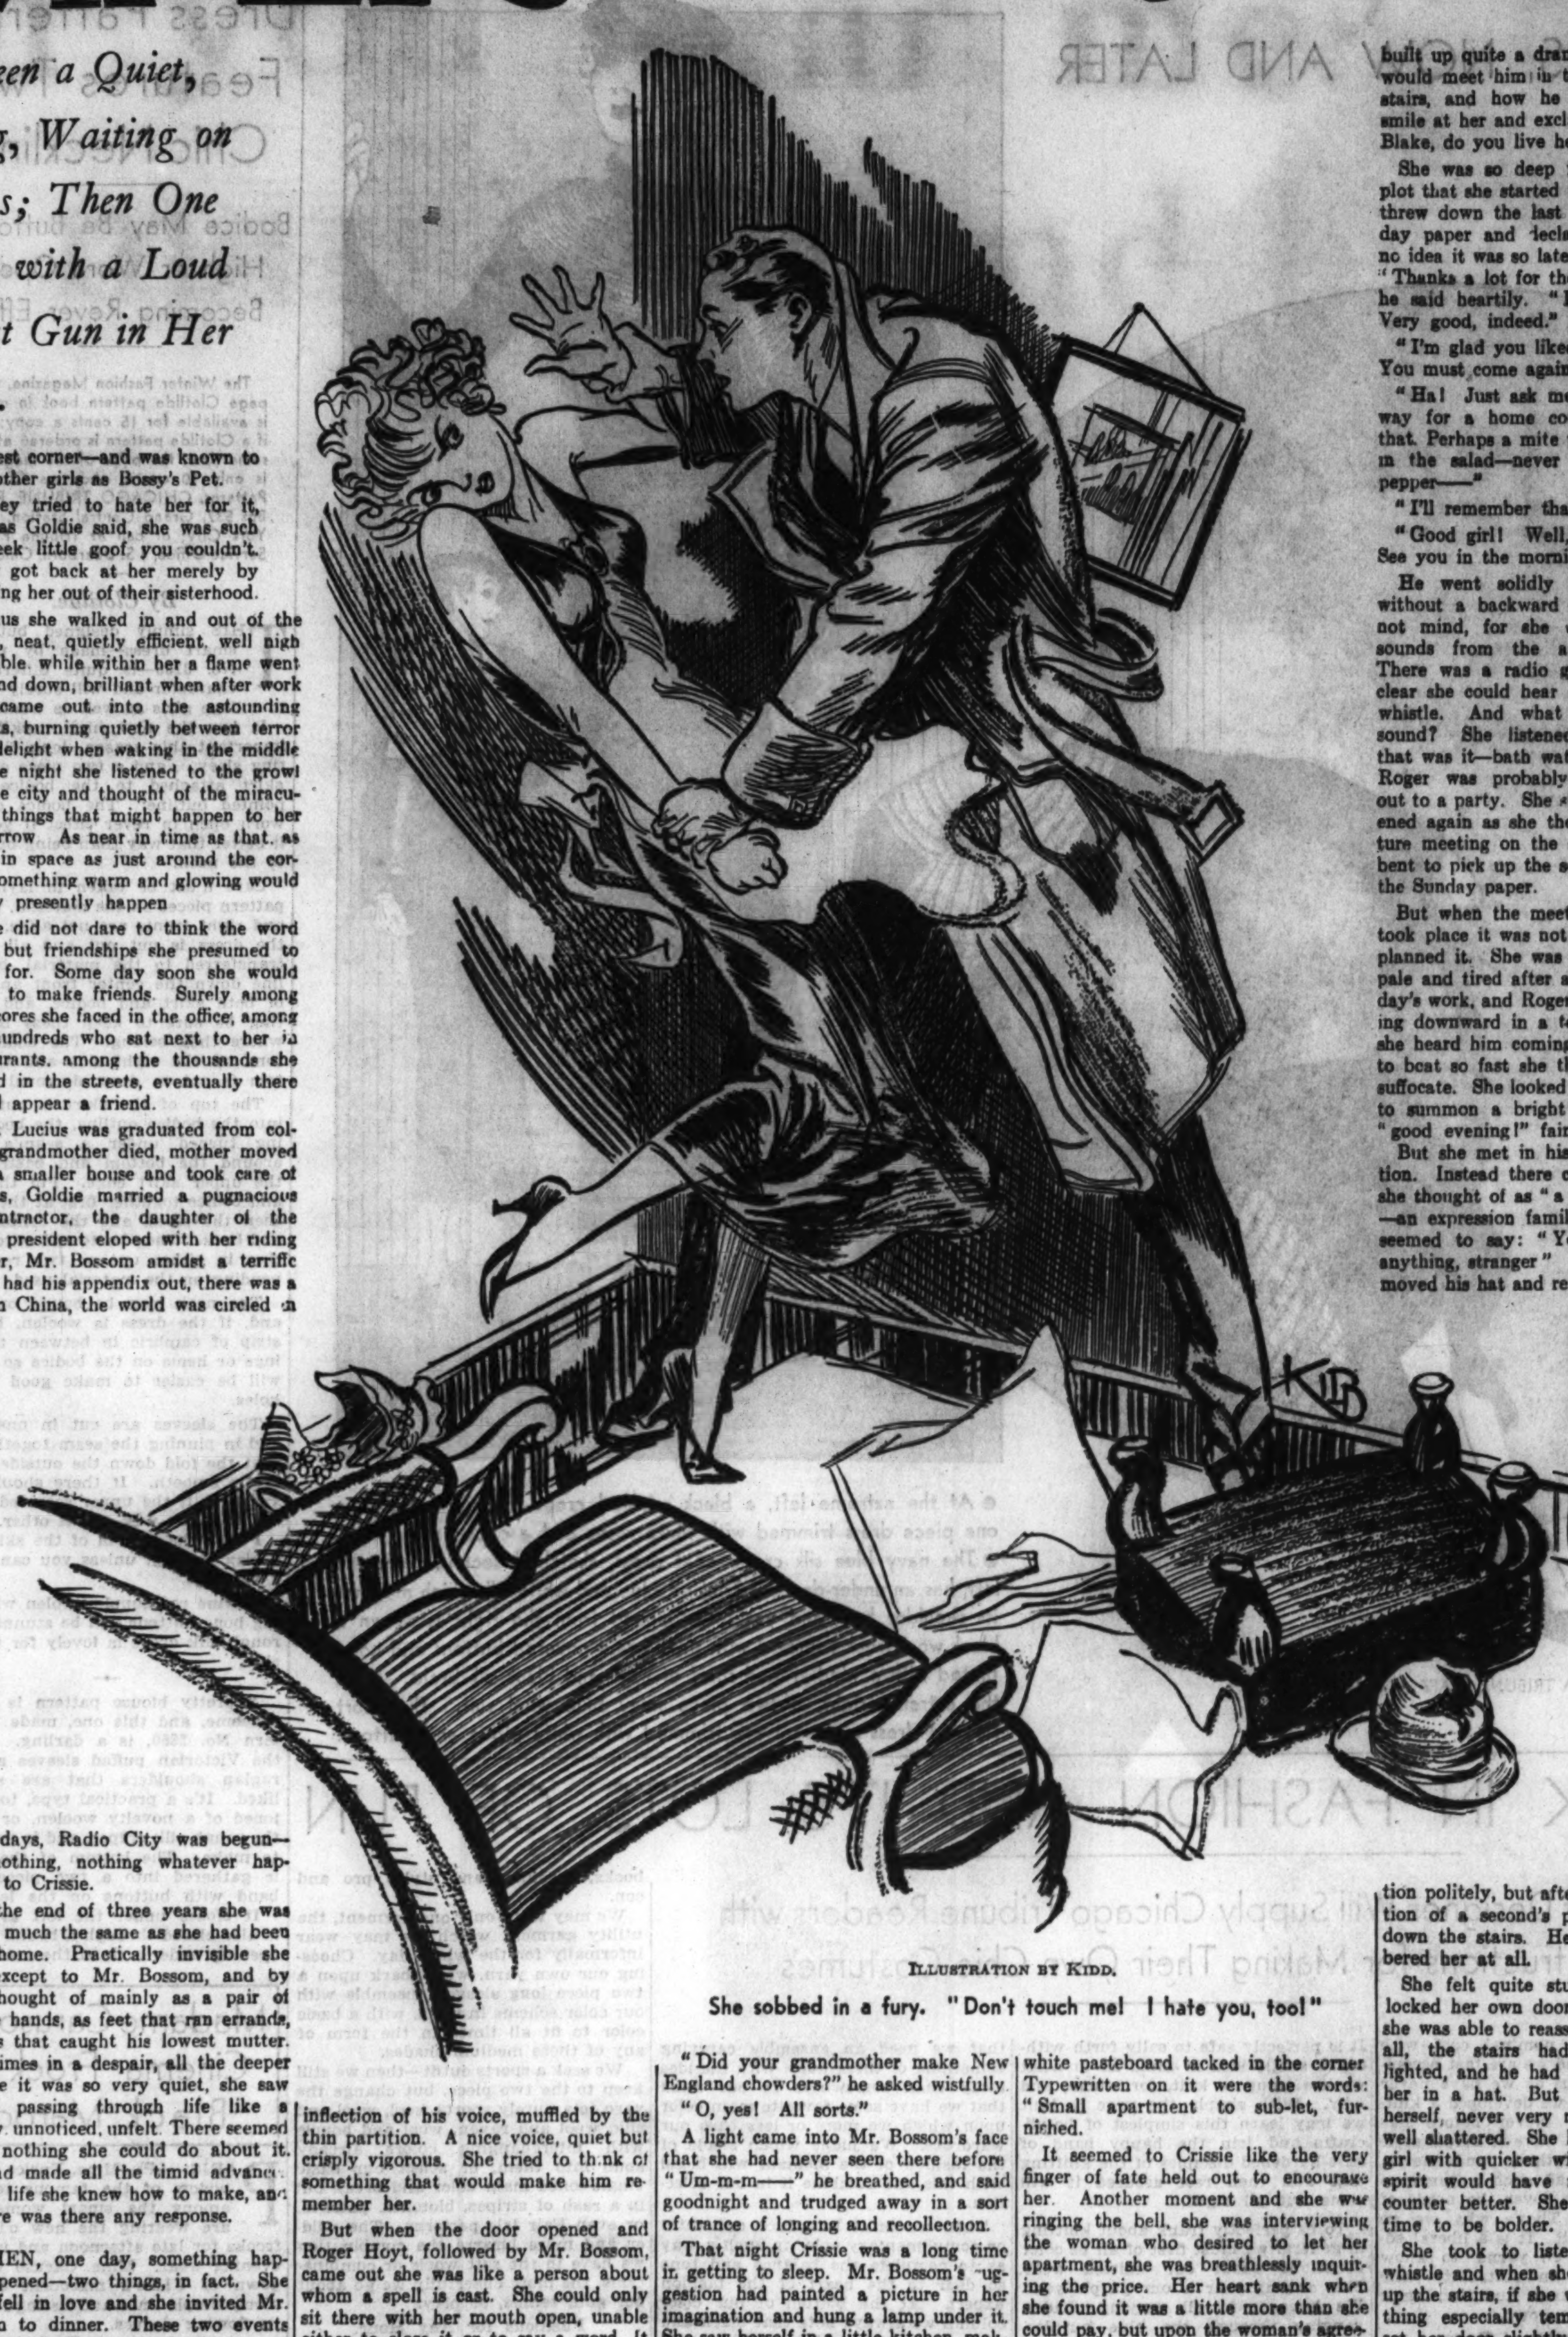

ILLUSTRATION BY KIDD.

She sobbed in a fury. "Don't touch me! I hate you, too!"

CRISTINA BLAKE was born sweet and unselfish. That would have been very nice had her family taken pains to tell her that she was also pretty. But, unfortunately she had an extremely handsome brother, and it was Lucius who got all the admiring words. It was inevitable that sooner or later Crissie should have it fixed in her mind that she was as the dust, and that it was a privilege to worship, admire and wait on Lucius From that moment she was material in the making for Mr. Bossom

Mr. Bossom was her first employer It had been intended that Crissie should be sent to a girls' boarding school for a brief time, and then should sit down to wait for a suitor. They were an old fashioned family. Lucius of course, should go to Harvard

But to their astonishment Crissie said that she thought she would like to take a business course and then get a job. And Lucius, with brotherly frankness, said that would be a good idea; she would probably be an old maid, anyway, and a job would be a good thing for her. Mother smiled archly at Lucius and said that some day he might have little ones of his own, in which case Crissie could take care of them.

At this point Crissie rose and fighting back tears, went quickly out of the room. O, never, never would she be Aunt Crissie! She knew she was not brilliant and popular like Lucius but all the same, how could they dispose of her future like that? And suddenly her right arm tingled violently and she banged the door behind her. It made a sound exactly like a loud "damn!"

"Tut! Tut!" muttered grandmother "Temper!" It was unbelievable! Crissie, always so sweet and meek and biddable.

Nevertheless, it was the remembrance of this episode and the thought of Lucius' unborn progeny that made Crissie the prize pupil of her class at business school. Immediately after graduation she was offered two positions, one in Pratt's grocery in her home town, and the other with a real estate firm in New York. Mother said of course Crissie would prefer to live at home and work for that nice Mr Pratt, but Crissie chose the New York firm.

And when she had won their consent to leave home, her heart leapt like a lamb in a green pasture. Let her get away from home, she thought, and she could begin all over again. She could forget what the family thought of her and be dashing, attractive, adventurous. The Crissie she longed to be.

She did not know, poor Crissie. that scenery may change, but it is very hard to break the mold in which the spirit has been poured in childhood. When she stood in front of Mr. Bossom's desk for the first time, she may have felt dashing, but she looked meek.

Mr. Bossom was the office manager and general smoother down; he believed that the whole concern would at once go to the dogs without him He was an old-young man with thinning hair and a premature thickness of the waistline. He looked at Crissie critically. He saw a slim little girl with lovely, frightened, large gray eyes and a shy sweetness about her mouth.

"You don't look very husky to me. Miss Blake. I hope your health is good," he growled discontentedly.

"O, yes, sir! It is, really. I'm very strong."

"Well, you'll have to be," said Mr. Bossom grimly. "No watching the clock and powdering your nose all the time. And no moaning at a little overtime work. I work overtime myself and—where the heck is that bottle of soda-mints?"

"Here they are, sir. Shall I get you a glass of water?"

She handed him the bottle, a gesture she was to repeat a thousand times in the next few years. But not knowing that, nothing dimmed her excitement, her exultation, her terror during this first day under Mr. Bossom's critical eye. She wanted most dreadfully to please him. She was paid to please him, whereas she had never been paid anything to please Lucius.

SHE was the first girl who had ever felt like that about Mr. Bossom. Goldie and Miss Atkins, the other girls in the office, called him Old Bossy and were bored by him. He was a bachelor, always talking about his mother and what a wonderful cook she had been. Food was the one thing next to the firm he took most seriously. With a quiet passion he thought about food. and with a pathetic hopefulness, forever baffled, he sought for a restaurant where the cooking was as good as his mother's, and cheap. He had simply no allure for Goldie and Miss Atkins

But to Crissie his word was wisdom and the law. At first he was slow to believe in his luck. Could you pile up work on a girl who looked so fragile? But Crissie, he soon found, had the endurance of fine steel Very soon he was saving up for her the jobs requiring precision and patience, and when a piece of work had to be got out in a hurry it was Crissie he chose to stay after hours to help him. She kept an eye on his soda-mints and his mineral water, she systematized his untidy files she shopped for him. She listened while he told her about his mother's corn-meal muffins and sour cream salad dressing. And presently she had her own desk in a corner of his office—the darkest corner—and was known to the other girls as Bossy's Pet.

They tried to hate her for it, but, as Goldie said, she was such a meek little goof you couldn't. They got back at her merely by keeping her out of their sisterhood.

Thus she walked in and out of the office, neat, quietly efficient, well nigh invisible. while within her a flame went up and down, brilliant when after work she came out into the astounding streets, burning quietly between terror and delight when waking in the middle of the night she listened to the growl of the city and thought of the miraculous things that might happen to her tomorrow As near in time as that. as near in space as just around the corner. something warm and glowing would surely presently happen

She did not dare to think the word love, but friendships she presumed to hope for. Some day soon she would begin to make friends. Surely among the scores she faced in the office, among the hundreds who sat next to her in restaurants. among the thousands she passed in the streets, eventually there would appear a friend.

But Lucius was graduated from college, grandmother died, mother moved into a smaller house and took care of Lucius, Goldie married a pugnacious subcontractor, the daughter of the firm's president eloped with her riding master, Mr. Bossom amidst a terrific to-do had his appendix out, there was a war in China, the world was circled in eight days, Radio City was begun—and nothing, nothing whatever happened to Crissie.

At the end of three years she was pretty much the same as she had been back home. Practically invisible she was, except to Mr. Bossom, and by him thought of mainly as a pair of nimble hands, as feet that ran errands, as ears that caught his lowest mutter. Sometimes in a despair, all the deeper because it was so very quiet, she saw herself passing through life like a shadow. unnoticed, unfelt. There seemed to be nothing she could do about it. She had made all the timid advances toward life she knew how to make, and nowhere was there any response.

THEN, one day, something happened—two things, in fact. She fell in love and she invited Mr. Bossom to dinner. These two events were entirely disconnected. It was not with Mr. Bossom that she fell in love, but with a young man named Roger Hoyt, and it happened in the space of five minutes with the most devastating thoroughness.

The day she first saw Roger Hoyt she was in the outer office minding the switchboard for Goldie, who was getting a shampoo on the office's time when the door opened and in stepped a brisk young man with an air of knowing what he wanted and how to get it. He asked for Mr. Bossom He was with a firm of hydraulic engineers and he wanted information about a leasehold downtown.

Crissie looked up and saw a face that was vigorous, blunt, pleasant young. A pair of clear, keen eyes that gazed at her with a slight frown between them and rather absently as if they were too intent on visions of their own to see a mere slim girl behind a switchboard. His hair was a crisp, red-brown cap, his clothes were well made, but his tie was that of a man who seldom gave a second thought to his appearance.

"I could pick him out a tie that would go better with that coat." she told herself, and then blushed. For on top of this thought had come another She had never seen a young man so exactly her ideal, in appearance at least.

"I could like him awfully," she thought, and then in confusion forgot to write down his name and business and stammered when she told Mr. Bossom there was a Mr H-h-hoyt to see him. She was to remember always that it was while she stood there staring down at Mr. Bossom's inkwell the amazing moment arrived. She knew that she had fallen in love.

Slowly she closed Mr Bossom's door behind her and stood looking at Roger Hoyt. Her eyes had grown very large and amazed and shining, and there was a lovely color in her cheeks. If Roger Hoyt had really looked at her in that moment—but he did not. He merely passed her with an absent-minded "thanks" and went into Mr Bossom's office without a glance at her

She sat down at the switchboard with glowing eyes, trying not to miss an inflection of his voice, muffled by the thin partition. A nice voice, quiet but crisply vigorous. She tried to think of something that would make him remember her.

But when the door opened and Roger Hoyt, followed by Mr. Bossom, came out she was like a person about whom a spell is cast. She could only sit there with her mouth open, unable either to close it or to say a word. It was deplorable.

"Back at three, Miss Blake," said Mr. Bossom. Roger Hoyt bowed politely in her general direction, and they both went out. And that was that. All unconscious that she thought in movie titles she asked herself, with bliss and misery of her heart—had he gone out of her life forever? O, no, no! Nothing so dreadful could be. She had his name, his business address. And, anyhow, trust Mr. Bossom to hang onto a client.

IT was that very evening that she invited Mr. Bossom to dine with her. Which in itself showed that she had changed, that she was waking up. They had worked half an hour afer closing time and as they came down in the elevator together Mr. Bossom sighed: "I wish I knew a place where they have real home cooking."

She looked at him and saw for the first time something disconsolate and forlorn about him. Her heart, which only that afternoon had stirred and unfolded its wings. was touched. Before she had time to grow self-conscious and shy she had invited him to dinner at her boarding house.

"It's chicken pie night," she said diffidently. "If you like chicken pie."

Mr. Bossom's face lighted. He admitted a fondness for chicken pie, and said he was willing to take a chance once But the dinner was not too successful. On the doorstep he asked with his customary frankness, how she stood it. "Why, look at that chicken pie! That was made from a hen as old as my aunt. Now, my mother——"

He described at meticulous length his mother's chicken pie, while Crissie leaned dejectedly against a cold iron railing. Then he said the words that were to change the course of her life.

"How a girl can expect to do decent work on food like that," he cried, "I don't see. Why don't you get a flat with a kitchenette and cook yourself some real food? I'll bet you can cook coming from New England and all."

Crissie admitted modestly that she could cook. Her mother and grandmother were famous cooks and they had taught her.

"Did your grandmother make New England chowders?" he asked wistfully.

"O, yes! All sorts."

A light came into Mr. Bossom's face that she had never seen there before "Um-m-m——" he breathed, and said goodnight and trudged away in a sort of trance of longing and recollection.

That night Crissie was a long time in getting to sleep. Mr. Bossom's suggestion had painted a picture in her imagination and hung a lamp under it. She saw herself in a little kitchen, making fish chowder and chicken pie—not for Mr. Bossom, but for Roger Hoyt Charming Roger Hoyt with popovers and cheese soufflés, fascinating him with steamed Indian puddings.

Next day she took a step that for her was very bold. She asked Mr. Bossom to get her an increase of salary. Because, she told him, she wanted so much to have a little flat in which she could cook for herself some of her grandmother's famous dishes. Mr. Bossom's eye gleamed at the mere thought.

"I'll see what I can do with the boss." And added, playfully: "On condition I'm invited when you have fish chowder."

Her next week's salary envelop contained a slight increase of pay. So slight, indeed, that it seemed as if her darling dream could not possibly be made to come true. But something unexpected and in the nature of a miracle happened. She had not seen Roger Hoyt since his first visit to the office, but she had written him a letter or two for Mr. Bossom, and once she had actually said good morning over the telephone when she delivered a message. Then one day, telephoning him for Mr. Bossom, she learned that Roger Hoyt was working at home that day because of a slight cold.

INSPIRED, and with the excuse of a document that had to be gone over that day, she secured his home address from the girl in his office. Then, trying not to look eager, she asked Mr Bossom if she should take the paper to Mr. Hoyt herself. Mr. Bossom merely looked surprised, said he had plenty for her to do right there, and to send the boy.

This was disappointing, but anyhow she determined to look at the house that sheltered Roger Hoyt and his cold Merely to look up at its windows, to wonder which were his, would be enough. And that afternoon she made her way to the address she had written down. It was that of a quiet and respectable old red brick house, evidently converted into apartments. There was the regular "apartment to let" sign near the entrance, but she would scarcely have noticed it had not her eye been caught by a square of white pasteboard tacked in the corner Typewritten on it were the words: "Small apartment to sub-let, furnished.

It seemed to Crissie like the very finger of fate held out to encourage her. Another moment and she was ringing the bell, she was interviewing the woman who desired to let her apartment, she was breathlessly inquiring the price. Her heart sank when she found it was a little more than she could pay, but upon the woman's agreeing to come down a little, since she was obliged to rent quickly, Crissie said to herself that it was a sign, and closed with the offer. It seemed to her as they talked over references that she heard a footstep that might well be the footstep on the floor above.

IT was on Friday evening that she brought her trunk and her few small belongings to her new home. Instantly she adored it, though it was only two rooms, the furnishings were sparse, and the woman had forgotten to have the curtains washed. Mr. Bossom had allowed her the Saturday half-day off. In a large apron she swept and polished happily all day. Then she went to market. She bought supplies, she bought four daffodils and a bottle of soda-mints, for Mr. Bossom was coming to dinner next day.

She had invited Mr. Bossom to dinner out of gratitude for having made this lovely little flat possible, and as a sort of propitiation of the gods. But she felt very much heartened and pleased by his frank appreciation of his dinner. She could tell from his relief and his pleasure that he had had forebodings about her cooking. But with the first taste of her fish chowder he became blander than she had ever dreamed he could be. He ate with the slow thoughtfulness of true appreciation.

With the coffee and dessert he described minutely his mother's last illness. Then, while Crissie washed the dishes, he smoked a cigar and read the Sunday papers he had brought in with him.

To snuff the aroma of his good cigar, to hear the crackle of page after page of the Sunday paper falling to the floor, to see Mr Bossom sitting there so solidly and contentedly in her one comfortable chair, gave Crissie quite a nice warm feeling in her heart. As if at last she had a home and a friend.

When she had finished the dishes and had rubbed lotion on her hands, she did not disturb Mr. Bossom, who was deep in the real estate section, but sat down quietly with the clean sash curtain she was mending, and fell into a day dream about Roger Hoyt. She built up quite a drama about how she would meet him in the hall or on the stairs, and how he would start and smile at her and exclaim: "Why, Miss Blake, do you live here?"

She was so deep in this delectable plot that she started when Mr. Bossom threw down the last page of the Sunday paper and declared that he had no idea it was so late, and he must go "Thanks a lot for the dinner. Crissie. he said heartily. "It was very nice Very good, indeed."

"I'm glad you liked it, Mr. Bossom. You must come again."

"Ha! Just ask me! I'd go a long way for a home cooked dinner like that. Perhaps a mite too much paprika in the salad—never could eat much pepper——"

"I'll remember that, next time."

"Good girl! Well, so long, Crissie See you in the morning."

He went solidly down the stairs without a backward glance. She did not mind, for she was listening for sounds from the apartment above There was a radio going. Faint but clear she could hear an accompanying whistle. And what was that other sound? She listened intently. Yes that was it—bath water running. Then Roger was probably dressing to go out to a party. She sighed, but brightened again as she thought of that future meeting on the stairs. And then bent to pick up the scattered sheets of the Sunday paper.

But when the meeting on the stairs took place it was not quite as she had planned it. She was climbing upward pale and tired after an unusually hard day's work, and Roger Hoyt was charging downward in a tearing hurry. As she heard him coming her heart began to beat so fast she thought she would suffocate. She looked up at him, trying to summon a bright smile, and said "good evening!" faintly.

But she met in his face no recognition. Instead there came into it what she thought of as "a New York look"—an expression familiar to her. which seemed to say: "You can't sell me anything, stranger" Of course. he removed his hat and returned her salutation politely, but after the merest fraction of a second's pause he went on down the stairs. He had not remembered her at all.

She felt quite stunned as she unlocked her own door. But after a bit she was able to reassure herself. After all, the stairs had not been well lighted, and he had never before seen her in a hat. But her confidence in herself, never very robust, was pretty well shattered. She knew that another girl with quicker wits and a hardier spirit would have managed the encounter better. She determined next time to be bolder.

She took to listening for his gay whistle and when she heard it coming up the stairs, if she was cooking something especially tempting, she would set her door slightly ajar. She hoped that some evening he would stop and sniff, whereupon she would laughingly invite him in for a piece of warm gingerbread, or something.

But one evening the janitress, an unpleasant woman, panted up the stairs with a request that Miss Blake keep her door closed when cooking. The other tenants, especially the young man upstairs, she said, complained of the odor in the halls.

"O, I hate him! I hate him!" thought Crissie.

But she did not, really. She could not. The sense of his presence was with her always; she could not stop listening for his quick charge up the stairs at night, for his whistle, his radio, his nice voice.

FORTUNATELY, the despair of twenty-two has always a little hope left in it, and Crissie did not really give up until the night when she finally, at last, spoke to him. That evening she had known he was going to a party from the way he whistled and crashed bureau drawers and sang to the radio. She heard him presently slam his door behind him and come rushing down the stairs.

"O, he has left his radio on!" she thought. and ran into the hall Leaning over the bannisters she called down to his retreating back: "O, please! O, Mr. Hoyt, you have left your radio going."

He looked up at her. startled "Golly, that's right!" He leaped up the stairs again. Like a vital breeze he passed her. "Thanks a lot," he called as he took his own stairway two steps at a time.

She could not think of anything jolly and effective to say. She retreated to her own doorway where she waited, despising herself. He came down again, he showed his white teeth in a brief, impersonal smile.

"Sorry the darn thing bothered you," he murmured.

"O, it didn't. I didn't mean——"

But he did not hear her; he hastened down the stairs. He had merely flashed at her a half smile, perfunctory and unseeing.

When she heard the front door close behind him she went into her room and sat down. She was trembling and she felt queer—hollow and terribly sad. Something had come to an end. That unseeing smile of his had given the death blow to all her hopes. She would never again listen for his footsteps; her youth would never again call out to his. It was no use. She was a girl without allurement. Some spring within her was too tightly coiled. Perhaps long ago the very essence of her—that delicate and vital perfume that is magnetism—had been too securely bottled up. She could not uncork herself She put her face in her hands and wept desolately.

After this she invited Mr. Bossom to dinner more frequently. It was not that she like Mr Bossom so much; no girl could, it seemed to her. For he was not really young, he was as self-absorbed as a hen, and he talked a great deal about such dull subjects But she was so desperately lonely sitting there, listening to those lively footsteps springing up and down the stairs. Mr. Bossom appreciated her cooking so much, and to see him sitting there after dinner with his cigar and the Sunday papers gave her something she so badly needed—an illusion

Sometimes she wondered how it would seem if some Sunday afternoon he should look over the top of the real estate page at her and say: "Crissie, what nice eyes you have?" Anyhow, it would be a change! And she supposed she ought to be thinking about her future. She was almost twenty-three, an advanced, a really quite threatening age, she thought.

Her uneasiness about her future was brought to a head one day by a letter from her mother in which Lucius' marriage was announced. An unexpected marriage to a girl who was very sweet. according to mother, but also very poor. "Poor Lucius," wrote mother. "has been so unfortunate in all his employers."

In short, mother thought that Crissie ought to help Lucius get started in his own business with her bit of savings and the five hundred dollars grandmother had left her. The letter aroused in Crissie a very fever of revolt and foreboding. If she should lend Lucius all her money and then should lose her position she would have to go home, give up her independence and this sweet little flat. Give up the sound of those springing footsteps on the stairs. She might even be forced in time to become nursemaid to Lucius progeny. Aunt Crissie Ugh! Was there nothing a nice girl could do to save herself from so dreary a fate?

Apparently not. She felt desperate and panicky, as if narrow walls and alien stairs were closing in on her already. And tomorrow would be her birthday. She had asked Mr. Bossom to dinner, not able to bear the thought of the day spent alone.

THE night after mother's letter she slept badly. Saturday afternoon on a sudden impulse, she turned in at a hairdresser's. If the end of everything had come for her she might as well have a henna-rinse. She had always wanted one, but had withstood the temptation for fear of looking hard-boiled. Then, recklessly she had a facial and a wave. She did not know what had got into her. It was silly to think of tomorrow as if it was going to be a terribly important day Nothing would happen, she knew And yet—O, if tomorrow, on her birthday. some one, Mr. Bossom or any one, would just look at her once as if they liked to look at her, it would be a sign A sign that maybe she was not doomed to be a spinster aunt.

The day started auspiciously, for the henna-rinse made her hair seem much livelier and that affected her spirits. And when Mr. Bossom arrived she saw at once he had brought her gifts. A small bunch of roses and something in a pasteboard box. She opened the box in quite a flutter, but it turned out to contain a patent ash-tray—one of those that balance on the arm of a chair.

"Many happy returns of the day!" cried Mr. Bossom, pleased with himself and attaching the ash-tray to the arm of the chair that had become his by right of occupancy. Then he sniffed the air complacently and unfolded the Sunday papers.

Crissie's smile stiffened a little, but she told herself that at dinner he would notice her hair. Every time she passed a mirror she knew the girl at the hairdresser's had been right; she certainly had more allure since the henna-rinse. and the girl had been right, too, about the shade of lipstick. Surely, feeling as she did, all lit up in side and hopeful, something would happen, the sign would be given.

But there was one fact she had overlooked: the better the food the less attention Mr. Bossom was capable of paying to anthing else. The dinner today was especially good. Therefore. though she flitted about and chattered much more gayly than usual Mr Bossom gave her only the most divided attention. He was trying to make up his mind, he said, whether a mite of walnut catsup would go well in the sour cream salad dressing.

Presently Crissie felt her spirits beginning to droop. She tried to keep them up for she had a queer feeling that if once she stopped laughing and talking she would drop plumb into a black well without a bottom. She was aware toward the end of dinner that Mr Bossom looked at her with some disquiet.

"As if he thought I was coming down with something," she thought. and was seized with so uncontrolable a desire to scream with laughter that she ran into the kitchenette where she doubled up, shaking.

"Come on, now, you're not going to sit down and read those old papers!" she cried to him. "You're going to wipe the dishes. I'll tie an apron on you——"

Mr. Bossom backed away affronted. "I'll do nothing of the sort. I never wiped a dish in my life."

"Please! For me!" She was laughing, but her cheeks were flushed and there was something wild about her that brought a slight alarm into Mr Bossom's face. He buried his head quickly in the real estate section. "Got to read my paper." he muttered.

She put down the apron she had held out to him, but she did not at once begin on the dishes Behind the kitchen door she clasped her hands over her quaking diaphragm. How queer she felt—as if inside her she was laughing, and yet not jolly. Not jolly at all.

Mr. Bossom held the real estate page in front of his eyes for a long time without turning it once, and then rather abruptly he cast it down. looked at his watch and said hastily that he must go, he had an engagement.

Crissie said nothing except "O!" from the kitchenette. Mr. Bossom shrugged himself into his overcoat.

"Thanks for the swell dinner, Crissie," he said. "Sorry I had to eat and run, but—uh—a man's waiting. Well, see you in the morning."

SOLIDLY he descended the stairs without a backward glance. She heard the front door close behind him. Slowly she came back into her cozy sitting room, blankly she looked about it, at the roses, at the ash receiver in which languished two cigar ends. at the drift of Sunday papers around the armchair.

Then, all at once she felt as if within her an enormous cauldron had boiled up and over. With a smothered sound she rushed across the room, drew back her foot automatically and kicked Mr. Bossom's chair.

With this incredible gesture something—perhaps a tiny grain of dynamite too long stored up—exploded It loosened a band that all her life had bound up Crissie in a neat, tight bundle. She seemed to fly—the old Crissie—into a thousand pieces. Without an instant's hesitation and with a sensation of keen pleasure she kicked Mr. Bossom's chair again.

Then she swooped upon his Sunday papers and thrust them out the window. After them she hurled the patent ash-tray. And after that the innocent roses sailed through the air.

It was as if she thrust out the window not only Mr. Bossom with his selfish blindness, but herself Her old self with its meekness and self-doubt. But the new self left behind demanded more violence, more destruction. She wanted to smash things, a lot of things. Darting upon the kitchenette she banged a saucepan against the stove. That for Lucius who had told her she was going to be an old maid! That for mother who had said she was not pretty! That for grandmother who had taught her to cook and to wait on a man! Smash! Bang!

Such savage satisfaction she had never known. A soup toureen smashing in the sink was for every humiliation she had ever known, for every soft answer she had ever given. She had just executed a victorious and demented hop, her hair was swirling about her vivid face when a voice from the doorway cried: "Hey, what's the idea? What do you think you're doing?"

She whirled and faced Roger Hoyt. His eyes were almost as wild as her own. He held in his hand a good Derby hat with a crushed crown He shook it at her. "Look at that! Beaned me, that's what you did. Don't you know you can't throw things out of windows? Hit me on the head with an ash-tray or something. What's the idea?"

"I don't care!" she cried. "I wish I could hit everybody on the head. I hate everybody! I hate the whole world!"

"Girl!" he breathed, awed. "You're good! Hi! Don't do that! You can't smash things up—that's silly. Here!" He sprang across the room and firmly seized her wrists.

She sobbed in fury. "Don't you touch me! I hate you, too!"

Upon which she kicked him smartly on the left shin. At once complete astonishment possessed them both. They stood perfectly still staring at each other. The devil that had for a few brief moments inhabited Crissie fled—who knows where?—and in her eyes horror welled.

"But—but—I kicked you!"

"Nothing to it. Please don't look like that."

"O, please go away! Can't you see I'm——"

SHE looked up at him, her cheeks and eyes still flaming from the recent storm. He studied her with the liveliest interest.

"I can see you're in no condition to be left alone," he said. "Here, sit down and take a long breath."

"I can't think what happened to me," she moaned from the divan.

"Just a little brainstorm, nothing to worry about. I had one once myself. Got mad enough to bite a dog. It did me good."

"But—but—me! I never——" She passed her hand dazedly across her forehead, and then as if the gesture had cleared away a fog, she suddenly laughed. She laughed from a sense of sheer well-being, she laughed because it had come to her all at once that she didn't care at all about a number of things that had troubled her terribly before.

She didn't care how she looked. what she said, or what any one thought of her. "I believe I'll take my five hundred dollars and go to Honolulu," she cried absurdly.

He stared, dazed but fascinated Then as one who indulges the slightly mad he added: "O, yeah? Just my luck. I meet a pretty girl and the next minute she tells me she's off for Honolulu"

"You meet a—would you mind saying that last part over again?"

"A darned pretty girl. Of course, you've got a terrible temper, but that only seems to make you cuter. I've never seen a girl quite like you. Do you mind if I sit down?"

She laughed again She did not even ask him to sit down. That sort of thing wasn't necessary; nothing was as important as this odd sense of gayety and lightness inside her. this convic-

The Paradine Case

By

Robert Hichens

Synopsis:

Sir Malcolm Keane is induced by Sir Simon Flaquer, solicitor, to defend Mrs. Paradine, charged with the murder of her blind husband. Sir Simon tells Keane that Mrs. Paradine is a Dane who had been rescued from a life of degradation in Copenhagen by an American diplomat. Sir Malcolm is happily married to Gay, but when he calls on Mrs. Paradine at Holloway jail he experiences a strange fascination. He studies a photograph of William Marsh, Col. Paradine's valet, and the idea occurs to him that the man might have had an opportunity to kill him. Lord Horfield is appointed to preside at the trial. Lady Horfield expresses to Sir Malcolm her fear for Mrs. Paradine, owing to Lord Horfield's cruelty toward women who come up for trial before him. Sir Malcolm goes alone to the north of England to look over the Paradine home at Hindley. He meets William Marsh there, and the valet tells him he is on the wrong side of the case. Upon his return he invites the Horfields to dinner and the theater against Gay's wishes. Leaving for the theater, Keane takes Lady Horfield in his car. Gay accompanies Lord Horfield, who makes love to her, much to her disgust. When the Paradine trial opens, Gay goes to it with Judith Flaquer, unknown to Malcolm.

INSTALLMENT XIV.

The Fatal Evening.

GAY and Judith were in court No. 1 of the Central Criminal court. The large dock, placed in front of the public gallery, which only held about seventy people, although it was crammed, had sides made of plate glass. Directly facing it and the gallery, raised up on a high platform, sat the judge, Lord Horfield, curiously changed by his wig and robes. On either side of him were the seats reserved for the use of the sheriffs. Below, sitting in front of a large oak desk was the clerk of the court, and below him, between his desk and the dock at a large oak table, sat the police officers in charge of the case, the prosecuting solicitor and Sir Simon Flaquer, the solicitor for the defense. On the right of this table, rising towards the side of the court, were rows of green leather covered seats. In the first three rows sat counsel. The remaining rows, called "city lands," reserved for the use of the aldermen and sheriffs of the city of London, were crowded with spectators, some of them women. On the other side of the table was the jury box, raised to the level of the judge's platform. In it sat nine men and three women. To the left of it was the witness box, shaped, Gay thought, like a church pulpit, with a large fan-like screen of oak behind it to improve the acoustics. Behind the dock, and on each site of it, were oak benches. And these benches were crammed with people.

Judith touched Gay gently.

"There's papa! And over there's Sir Malcolm!"

Her keen eyes went to the dock, but she said nothing about it or about the woman seated in it between two female officers. Gay could find out Mrs Paradine by herself. Judith knew that any help from her was unnecessary

Although Gay had already seen many people in the court there were two whom she had not seen yet, whom she had managed instinctively to miss seeing, her husband and Mrs. Paradine. (The latter indeed she had seen for an insert as an occupant of the dock, but not as an individual woman.) Now she at last looked definitely for Malcolm.

She found him sitting beside his junior. Malcolm looked very large and impressive in his white wig and black robes with the falling white below his collar and the white ruffles—as she thought them—falling over his wrists. He was rather lounging in his seat as he listened to the prosecutor with his long legs crossed and his arms folded. As she gazed at him she saw him frown and uncross his legs, then cross them again. He moved his arms, put his hands on his knees, turned and stared at the jury. Then he looked at the dock. And Gay did not look at it. But she now paid some attention to the harsh voice which went on:

"Hindley hall, where these two people lived, is a somewhat remote place not far from the coast of Cumberland, and facing the hills of what is called the lake district. There were neighbors, of course. Col. Paradine was a well born man, one of the county people, belonging to a family universally known and respected in the north. On their taking up residence at Hindley everybody called at the hall as a matter of course, anxious to sympathize with him and to make acquaintance with his foreign wife. The prisoner in the dock is a Scandinavian, I am instructed, born of a Danish father and a Swedish mother. Her origin was humble. At one time she served in a barber's shop at Copenhagen, and while there was taken notice of by a young man of infamous character——"

GAY began to listen intently. She was listening to a lucid account of the origin and life of the woman who had assumed such a terrible importance in her own life. But while she listened she still looked at her husband, obliged to try to see what effect the narration was having on him. But now a clear, silvery voice interrupted the harsh voice that was speaking.

"What was that you said? A house of bad character—was it? I didn't quite catch."

"Yes, my lord, of bad character."

"By that do you mean a brothel?"

"I am instructed that it was a house frequented by women of a certain class, my lord."

"A brothel," said the clear, carrying voice of the judge.

And he bent over the desk in front of him and wrote

Gay saw her husband make an abrupt movement, turning his head towards the bench. Then he sat back, folded his arms, and remained motionless. Judith Flaquer's eyes went to Gay. But Gay did not return the glance. She was thinking about Lord Horfield. She was convinced that Lord Horfield had only pretended that he hadn't heard what counsel was saying and that he had made counsel repeat it in order that it might be at once driven home to the minds of the jury. The words "a brothel" still sounded in her ears, and no doubt in the ears of every one in the court.

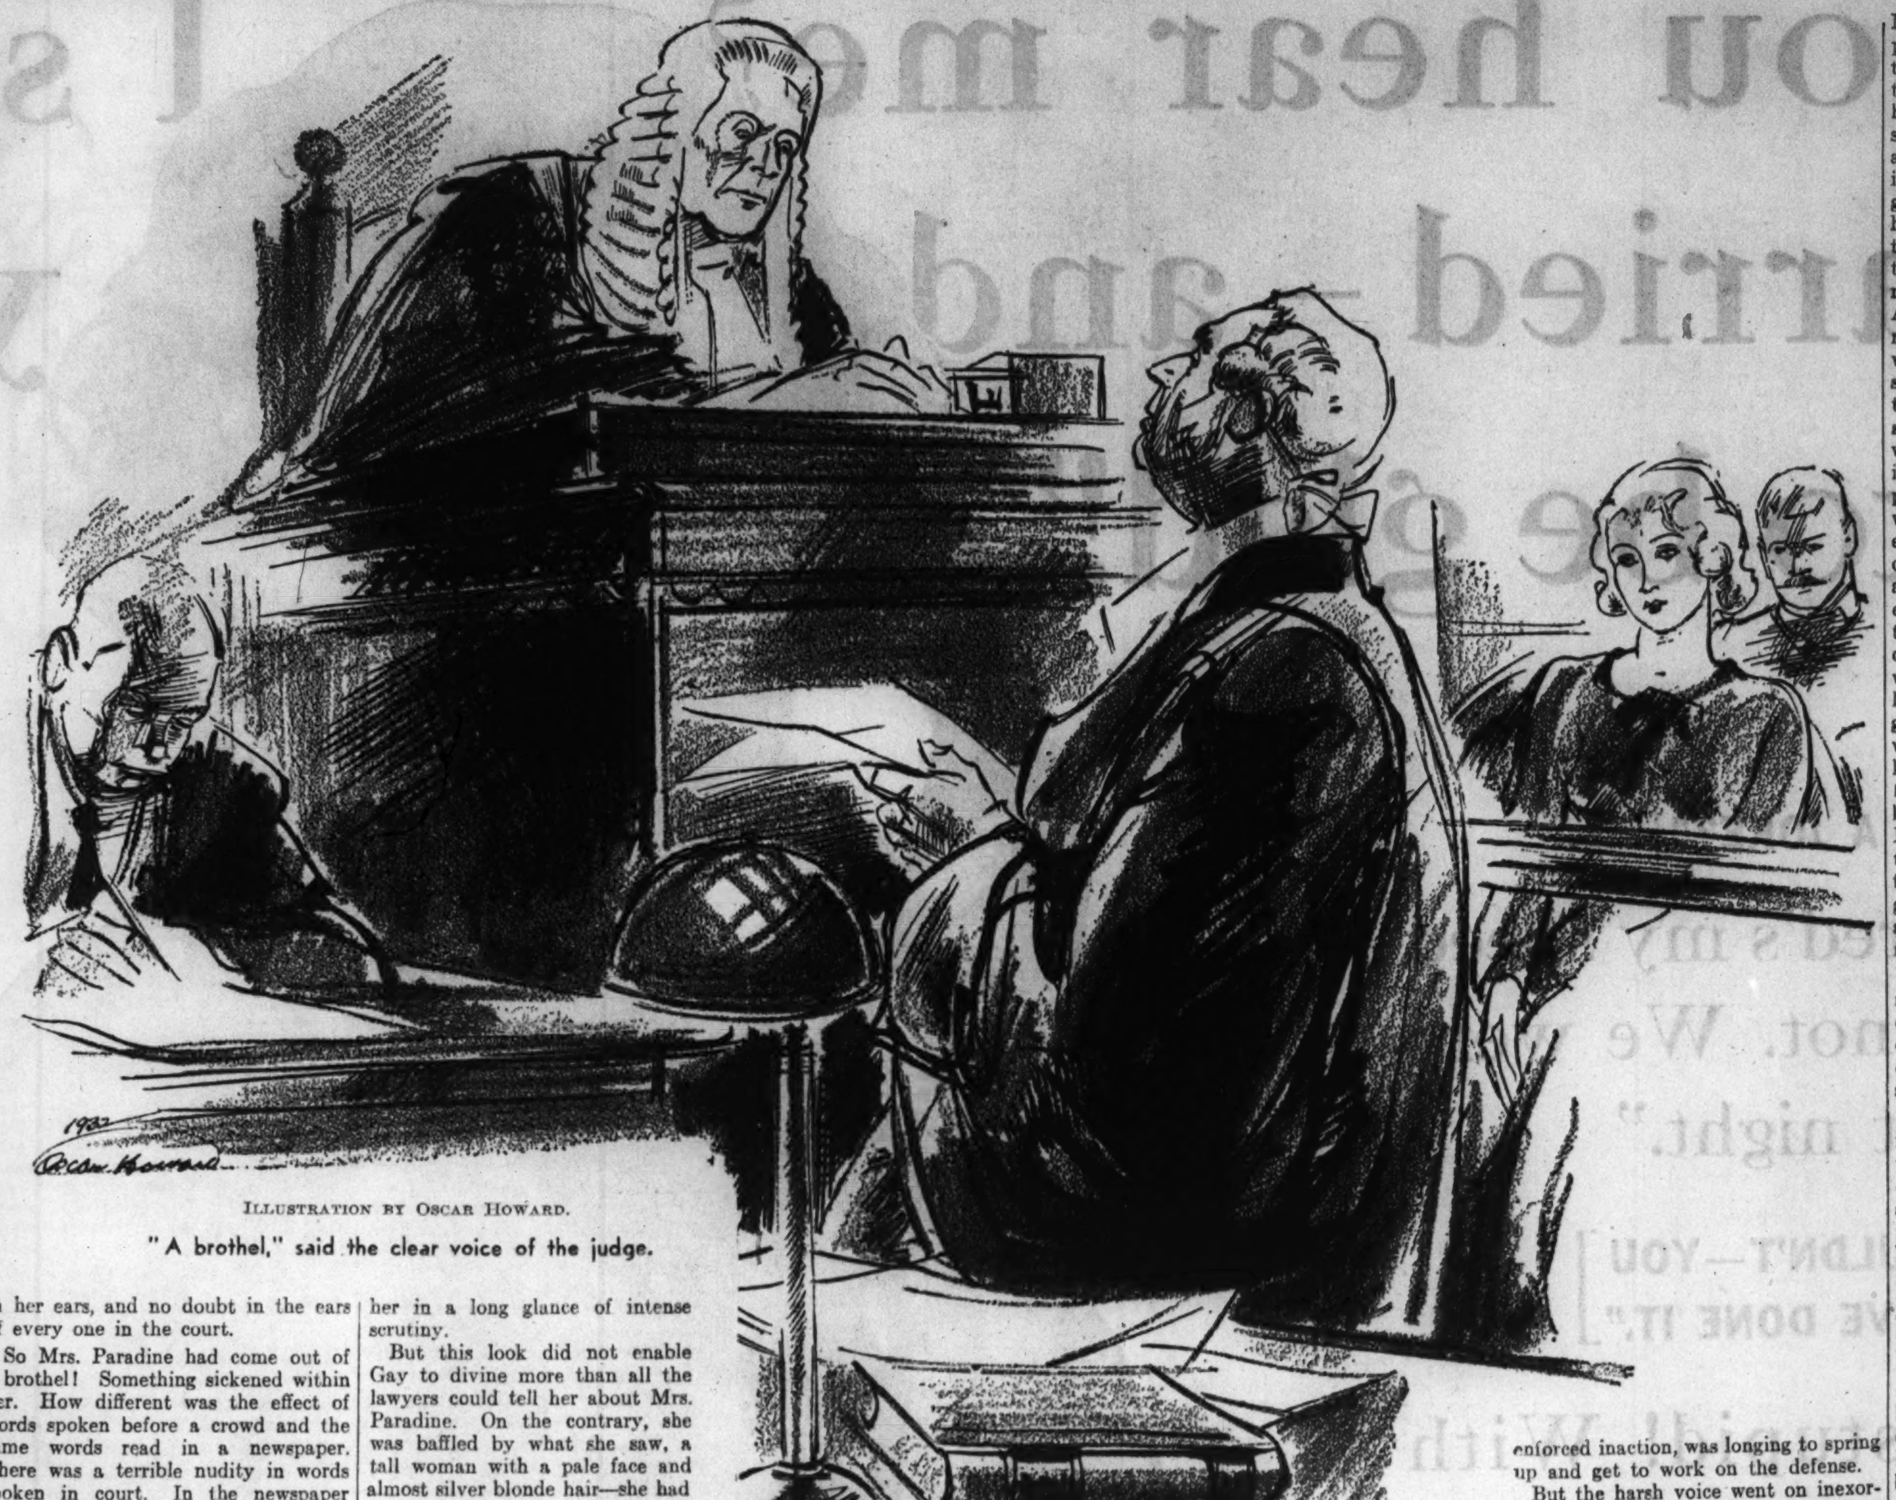

ILLUSTRATION BY OSCAR HOWARD.

"A brothel," said the clear voice of the judge.

So Mrs. Paradine had come out of a brothel! Something sickened within her. How different was the effect of words spoken before a crowd and the same words read in a newspaper. There was a terrible nudity in words spoken in court. In the newspaper there were some rags at least of clothing about them.

"I understand why Malcolm never wanted me to enter into this part of his life," Gay thought.

"When seeking to bring home a crime to one suspected of its perpetration the first thing we do, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, is to seek for a possible motive for its committal. Crimes indeed have been committed without any ascertainable motive. Murders have been done and the why of them has never been discovered. The heart of the human being is mysterious, and it is sometimes difficult, if not impossible, to trace the cause of a terrible action to its source in the human brain, that source which has received an imperative message from elsewhere. But just consider for a moment the case of the woman in the dock before you, of Mrs. Paradine. Here you have a woman, who, through the kindness of the American I have mentioned, this Mr. Powers, the former diplomat, had been extricated from what is usually called the underworld. taken away from all her former associations, and introduced into a totally different way of life on the other side of the Atlantic. Whatever Mr. Powers' motive in interesting himself in this evidently beautiful and fascinating young girl——"

GAY, who had just turned her eyes at last to the woman in the dock, and was feeling furtively for her tiny pair of strong glasses, was startled to hear her husband's powerful voice interrupt the speaker. It said:

"My lord, I must protest against my learned friend's implication. I understand that Mr. Powers is not to be called as a witness in this case. And, therefore, I submit that it is not in order to attempt to prejudice my client by hinting at anything to her detriment which will remain unsupported by evidence on which I should have the right to cross-examine."

"What implication do you allege on the part of the learned counsel for the crown, Sir Malcolm?" asked Lord Horfield in his most gentle voice. "I noticed nothing calculated to prejudice the prisoner."

"My lord, there was, in my view, a distinct suggestion that Mr. Powers had some other motive than chivalry and Christian charity in rescuing my client from the dark misery into which she had been foully inveigled."

"My lord," said Sir Joseph Farrell, "I intended no implication, I merely called attention to the fact that it was not possible to know precisely what was the motive which prompted this Mr. Powers to do what he did do, namely, to take the prisoner into his service after rescuing her from the low people with whom she was, and convey her across the seas to America."

"I find nothing to rule out of order so far in the learned counsel's opening," said Lord Horfield.

"Anyway I will pass away from that," said Sir Joseph Farrell smoothly, having made his point. "As my learned friend objects I will leave it."

And he continued to deal with the past life of Mrs. Paradine.

Gay was at last looking towards the prisoner in the dock. Something had kept her from a close examination of the prisoner till now intense desire to look mingled with a creeping fear of looking.

For the first time she really saw the woman who for so long had troubled her life, had tormented her, had taken away her peace of mind, had even taught her naturally gentle spirit the meaning of hatred. The strong glasses drew this woman close to Gay's short sighted eyes which fixed themselves on her in a long glance of intense scrutiny.

But this look did not enable Gay to divine more than all the lawyers could tell her about Mrs. Paradine. On the contrary, she was baffled by what she saw, a tall woman with a pale face and almost silver blonde hair—she had removed her hat—dressed in brown, with her long, slim hands, very expressive, lying in her lap unclasped, and her eyes apparently fixed on the short, sturdy man with gray whiskers who was bent, it seemed, on her destruction. She sat very still. There was absolutely no symptom of restlessness in her. She did not look concerned, still less terrified, but detached, sitting there in a white composure. And immediately Gay felt her as an enigma, was deeply puzzled by her, was conscious of a great inability to understand her.

Was she beautiful? Gay believed that she had something of beauty. She was not what English people call a beauty. Still her appearance was so uncommon, so typically northern, so impossible to ignore—and this quite apart from the horrible publicity of her present situation—that Gay felt that there must be beauty in her. But, apart from her attitude in the dock, which had a curious natural grace, a sort of slouching grace, she was surely not expressive. She had a shut face—a strange blankness about it; no suggestion of animation either feverish or self-confident.

"Is she really like me?" Gay thought.

And she couldn't tell. What indeed could she tell about this woman?

Yes, there was one thing she could tell, that the prisoner in the dock was marvelously self-possessed, marvelously self-controlled. Was it possible that she could be so self-possessed and yet guilty?

Her brown dress—Gay could see through the glasses that it was beautifully made though apparently very simple—was cut sufficiently low to expose the whole of her neck. And it was certainly a beautiful neck, snow white, columnar and long.

SHE could not take her eyes from that neck and a conviction came to her that when Mrs. Paradine put that brown dress on for the trial she had thought of the hangman; and, not only that, had intended that others, the judge, perhaps, members of the jury certainly, should be attracted by that beautiful and uncovered neck to think of the hangman, too.

"In spite of all he had gone through in the war, in spite of the terrible wound which had resulted in his blindness, Col. Paradine was no invalid. On the contrary—evidence would be called to prove it—he was a man of fine physique and enjoying sound health. There was no reason, so far as the doctors knew, why he should not live into a good old age. But that was not to be. It was fated that the hand of death should be laid upon him at a comparatively early period of life. Some one—it is the business of this court if possible to find out who—had evidently decreed this. The man who, though often in deadly peril, had yet escaped with his life from the war, was destined to be struck down by a mysterious hand when the war was over."

Counsel was pushing home certain traits of the dead man which must have made life with him exceedingly difficult. He seemed, Gay felt, to be doing this with a certain reluctance. anxious, if possible, to keep a balance between shining virtues—to create sympathy with a hero—and painful disabilities—to establish a probable motive for the crime alleged against the prisoner. He seemed at times to be excusing what he was also condemning. She saw him as a man balanced on a tight rope, swaying this way and that, yet somehow keeping his feet. And she began to say to herself, "But was there enough motive for such an awful thing as murder committed by that woman?"

The name, William Marsh, was several times mentioned by counsel. Gay began to feel a certain interest in this man, who had evidently been an intimate member of the Paradine household, and was destined to play an important part in the case. His virtues were dwelt upon, his soldier-like qualities, his devotion to his master, Col. Paradine in and out of the army.

Gay began to receive an impression that this William Marsh was a man of remarkable character, perhaps even of nobility.

Her interest, already painfully vivid, increased when the speaker, always lucid, unemotional and amazingly competent, came to the question of Col. Paradine's health.

"Hitherto strong, in spite of all he had gone through in the war, he became suddenly affected. At the end of July in the year I have been speaking of, he became suddenly unwell. He had a severe pain in the head and there was a sensation of numbness. He complained of these and Dr. Worthingly of Hindley village, was called in. Dr. Worthingly attributed the symptoms to a severe attack of dyspepsia. Whether rightly or wrongly it will be for you, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, to judge when you have heard the case out. But I shall suggest to you that quite possibly Dr. Worthingly's diagnosis was mistaken and that this sudden attack of illness was not caused by indigestion but—" the speaker paused for a brief instant, then added—"was induced by an outside agent. I shall suggest to you that already, in that month of that year, there was a desire in the breast of some one, that Col. Paradine should not enjoy length of days, but that the hand raised to strike for some reason, quite possibly a reason of sudden fear, or even possibly of sudden repentance—at that time—was paralyzed and so failed to push the blow home."

THE speaker stopped for a moment. Gay looked up and saw that he was looking at the jury. Then he glanced down at some papers that were lying before him, handled them with great deliberation, lifted his hands to his shoulders, pulled at his robe, cleared his throat, and added:

"At any rate the dyspepsia, if it was dyspepsia, seemed to die away. The pain in the head ceased. The numbness—a curious symptom, characteristic, by the way, of poisoning with arsenic—disappeared. And Col. Paradine seemed to be restored to his usual health. Evidence will be called presently which will, unless I am much mistaken, convince you that eventually this unfortunate hero—for with all his undoubted faults of temper and morality, Col. Paradine was certainly a British hero—that eventually he died from the administration of antimony taken in the form of tartar emetic, and, as you will learn, he died in London, in a house in Eaton square which had been rented by him for a couple of months. But the fact that he died from antimony does not preclude the possibility of a former attempt to get rid of him by the administration of a different type of poison."

Another rather long pause. Then counsel said impressively, but in a lowered voice, which nevertheless traveled through the court:

"Now as to motive!"

He then gave a graphic account of the life at Hindley hall after the so-called "recovery" of Col. Paradine from his attack of dyspepsia—if dyspepsia it was. Gay listened to it with absorbed attention. He drew Col. Paradine as a man increasingly miserable and embittered in his affliction of blindness, unable, in spite of his former bravery, to resign himself to this terribly blow administered, in counsel's words, "by the mysterious hand of that unknown power whom we have agreed to name God."

"There was nothing of the fatalistic resignation of the oriental in this heroic V. C. He would have been ready, aye content, to die for his country. To live on in darkness without complaint, without bitterness, without kicking furiously against the pricks, was another matter. Gentlemen and ladies of the jury, he could not do it. And who was there in that lonely house to bear the brunt of his misery and to listen to the voice of his complaining? Only the woman whom he had married. She had to stand it.

"It seems that she bore with him in a remarkable way, both before, and after, the attack of illness to which I have drawn your attention. I suggest to you, gentlemen and ladies, that she is a woman of great self-control, not an ordinary woman, but a woman of exceptional will power, capable of wearing a mask, not merely for an hour, not merely for a day, but, if necessary, for months on end. I suggest to you also that she is a woman full of secret violence, who may appear to forgive but who neither forgets nor forgives any wrong that is done to her, or anything that she conceives to be a wrong. And now I must draw your attention to certain money matters which are of considerable importance in this case."

He then informed the jury that it would be given in evidence that Col. Paradine's first attack of illness, the so-called dyspepsia complicated with numbness from which he suffered, took place ten days after he had made a new will, leaving his wife in the event of his death an annuity of four thousand pounds a year. This will cancelled a former will made before his marriage in which, naturally, Mrs. Paradine's name did not appear. His estate of Hindley Hall was entailed, but he was a comparatively rich man. Had he died before this last will was made Mrs. Paradine would have been left with nothing. After it was made, as a widow, she would be a well off woman. Evidence will be produced to show that she was cognizant of the contents of this will. Until this will was signed Col. Paradine enjoyed excellent health. He was miserable, he was irritable, he was sometimes little less than brutal in his conduct to his wife, though there is no evidence that he ever offered her physical violence. But he was perfectly well.

COUNSEL paused dramatically for a moment to let that fact sink into the minds of the jury. During that moment Gay put on her spectacles and looked again at the green leather benches. She found her husband. He was sitting bolt upright. His lips were pressed together, and within the framework of his wig his face looked hard and stern. The time for him to come into action was not yet. Gay knew that he was chafing at his enforced inaction, was longing to spring up and get to work on the defense.

But the harsh voice went on inexorably. It drew the attention of the jury to a second attack of illness which overtook Col. Paradine two months after the first attack, and was of a somewhat similar nature, only more severe. Counsel touched upon the symptoms of this second attack, pains in the head, a feeling of numbness, but with the addition this time of sickness and a sensation of sinking.

On this occasion, Dr. Worthingly, who was again called to the house was more troubled by the state in which he found his patient, and questioned him closely about what he had been eating and drinking. He learned that just before the attack the colonel had eaten raw oysters, of which he was very fond. These had been sent over by a fishmonger at Whitehaven with whom the Paradines were in the habit of dealing, and were not English natives, but Portuguese oysters imported into England. Dr. Worthington apparently thought that some of these oysters, none of which had been eaten by Mrs. Paradine, or the household at Hindley, might have been tainted and in consequence caused the colonel's illness. But being somewhat puzzled by the violence of the symptoms he desired a second opinion, and a Dr. Culford was sent for from Whitehaven and met Dr. Worthingly in consultation. The result of the consultation was that both doctors found that Col. Paradine was suffering from acute dyspepsia, but did not succeed in discovering the cause of it, though they thought it might be due to the oysters which he had eaten, none of which were left for examination.

COUNSEL then told the jury that Col. Paradine seemed to recover from this second attack of illness, but he remained in a very miserable, irritable, and depressed frame of mind and this—"or some other reason"—led to Mrs. Paradine suggesting a visit to London by way of a change. Perhaps she was beginning to find the retired life at Hindley with a blind husband intolerable. But she gave out that she wished Col. Paradine to be livened up, to have some amusement, and she also gave out that she thought he ought to consult a good London doctor about the state of his health. She seemed at this time to be particularly solicitous for his health, and was heard to say on several occasions that she could not understand why he should have been twice seized with illness, and to express an opinion that country doctors were ignorant fools.

Col. Paradine fell in with her suggestion. A furnished house was taken in Eaton square. And the Paradines moved from Hindley and came up to London, accompanied by William Marsh and others of their servants. Col. Paradine never saw Hindley again. He died while in London, after being there for about two months. Soon after arriving in London he was examined by the celebrated physician, Sir William Ackley, who found nothing the matter with him, except extensive nervous depression, and who recommended that he should take a well known preparation for strengthening the nervous system, and get as much air and exercise as possible.

Counsel then passed on to the last illness and death of Col. Paradine, telling his lordship and the jury how on a certain evening during the visit in Eaton square, "after a particularly bad day of depression and irritability" more than one of the servants, as well as Mrs. Masters, the housekeeper, had heard sounds as if a violent altercation were taking place in Col. Paradine's study between him and Mrs. Paradine. No actual words were heard, but raised voices. William Marsh was one of those who, happening to be in the hall, heard these sounds. The voice of the colonel was then raised in a shout for Marsh and the bell was also rung. Stopping the footman, who was hastening to answer the bell, Marsh went at once to the study and shut the door behind him. He remained there for a considerable time. During that time some angry quarrel seemed to be going on in the study. William Marsh would give his evidence and put before them his version of what was occurring, and the jury would be able to judge for themselves of its importance in connection with what happened later. Anyhow, after this scene, Col. Paradine refused to dine downstairs with his wife and shut himself up in a small sitting room on the first floor, next door to his bedroom. Here his dinner was served to him by Lakin, the butler, who remained with him to assist him in eating it. William Marsh was not present at this meal, nor, of course, was Mrs. Paradine. Lakin would give evidence that the colonel, who was evidently in a fiercely nervous condition and laboring apparently under some extraordinary sense of wrong, the nature of which, however, he did not disclose, drank Burgundy at dinner, and when dinner was over directed the butler, Lakin, to put a glass full of Burgundy in his bedroom in a certain place which he indicated, so that he would know exactly where to feel for it. The butler obeyed his master's order, came back to the sitting room in which Col. Paradine was sitting alone, and said that he had done so. Col. Paradine then said that he wanted nothing more, got up and walked into the bedroom, and shut the door behind him, but did not lock it.

There were two doors to this bedroom, one communicating from the colonel's sitting room, the other giving on to the main landing. The bedroom occupied by Mrs. Paradine was opposite to the colonel's bedroom.

The butler, having cleared away the remains of the colonel's dinner, then went downstairs and found Mrs. Paradine alone in the dining room finishing a solitary meal which had been served to her by the footman while he was busy with the colonel. When he came into the room she asked him where his master was, had he finished his dinner. The butler replied that he had and had gone to his bedroom, and added that, by the colonel's order, he had taken a glassful of Burgundy into the bedroom and left it there. Mrs. Paradine then asked whether William Marsh had gone to the colonel. The butler replied that when he came downstairs the colonel was alone in his bedroom. He could not, of course, speak of what had happened since he came downstairs. Mrs. Paradine thanked him, got up from the table and left the dining room. When she was at the door she turned and said to the butler:

"Is he going to bed, do you know?"

THE butler replied that he couldn't say, and Mrs. Paradine then left the dining room and shut the door behind her.

"Where did she go, gentlemen and ladies of the jury?" continued the inexorable voice, which, Gay thought, grew harsher as the speech for the prosecution lengthened out. "Evidence will be called to prove that she went first to the drawing room which—an unusual thing in the average London house—was on the ground floor of the house, remained there for a few minutes, and then was seen going upstairs. In the meanwhile, as you will presently learn, William Marsh, Col. Paradine's confidential servant, had visited his master's bedroom to inquire whether he could do anything for the colonel, and had been told to go away and leave him alone. He wanted nothing. The colonel was then sitting in an armchair at the foot of the bed, apparently brooding. He spoke very sharply to William Marsh, contrary to his usual custom. For though often very inconsiderate, even brutal to his wife, he was generally kind to his servant. William Marsh left the room hurt by his master's behavior. As he did so he saw Mrs. Paradine going into her bedroom, opposite to the colonel's, and shutting the door behind her.

"Marsh, as he will tell you presently, lingered for a moment on the landing. He was deeply attached to his master and disliked to leave him all alone in such a condition of evident misery, yet he did not know how to approach him again after being ordered away. This disturbance of mind led him to hesitate for a moment wondering what he could do, uncertain in his mind, unhappy at the turn of events. While he thus stood, to his surprise, he saw Col. Paradine's door open and the colonel come out. Marsh stood where he was and Col. Paradine, unconscious of his presence, passed by him and went down a short passage. At the end of this passage there was a lavatory. The colonel entered it—although blind he was clever in finding his way about in places he was familiar with—and shut and bolted the door behind him. Just after he did this Ellen Smith, the head housemaid, arrived on the landing from the back stairs and, seeing Marsh standing there, inquired if she could do anything for the colonel. Marsh replied: 'No, we'd best leave him alone. He's not himself tonight.' On that Ellen Smith left the landing with Marsh, and they both went downstairs together, leaving Mrs. Paradine in her bedroom and Col. Paradine locked in the lavatory.

"Gentlemen of the jury—and ladies—I am instructed that not one person of that household, except those two persons, was present upon that first landing of the house in Eaton square during the quarter of an hour which followed. There is no evidence, apart from any the prisoner may presently elect to offer, as to what took place on that first landing during that lapse of time. But evidence will be given that, after the lapse of about a quarter of an hour, servants in the house heard the piano being played in the downstairs drawing room. Mrs. Paradine was there playing an arrangement of the well known Viennese waltz known by the name of "The Blue Danube." No one had heard her come downstairs, so no one could say when she came. She may, of course, have come down sooner or later. The servants seem to have assumed that she began to play directly she came into the drawing room. If so, she would have been upstairs for about a quarter of an hour. However, I am instructed that there is no evidence as to that. The evidence is that she was upstairs when Col. Paradine went to the lavatory, and that some quarter of an hour later she was playing in the drawing room on the piano. She continued playing for a considerable time, perhaps half an hour or more. Then the sounds ceased."

Counsel then related what happened that night in the Eaton square house, as he had been instructed. Mrs. Paradine went upstairs to bed a little after ten o'clock. Her maid, Fanny Greene, was waiting for her and would give evidence that Mrs. Paradine did not go into her husband's room to bid him goodnight, but went at once to bed. The servants retired and the peace of the night descended upon the house. It was rudely broken, however, just before midnight by Col. Paradine, who opened his bedroom door and cried out in a loud, half strangled voice something which woke his wife in the bedroom opposite.

"She has stated that at first she could not imagine what had waked her—she affirms that she was fast asleep—but that, on listening, she heard her husband's voice calling 'Marsh! Marsh! Marsh!' with a rising inflection as if of agony. It is noticeable," counsel said, leaning towards the jury box, and slightly lowering his voice, "That, according to the statements of the prisoner Col. Paradine did not call the name of his wife, whom he knew to be sleeping close to him, but the name of his servant who slept two floors below."

AFTER a pause, to let this sink in, counsel described the acute illness of Col. Paradine, the rousing of the household, the sending for doctors—two arrived at the house within an hour—the complete collapse of the unfortunate man who, after being violently sick several times, sank into a condition of unconsciousness, and in spite of the efforts of the doctors, which counsel described minutely, died soon after seven o'clock on the following morning. From the first the doctors were of the opinion that Col. Paradine's condition was caused by some irritant poison and a death certificate was refused. There was no question of disease. The symptoms displayed indicated internal ulceration, undoubtedly brought about by an irritant poison. The doctors suspected the presence of arsenic, but eventually, when tests had been made by Prof. Blake, to whom certain organs of the dead man and specimens of rejected matter had been submitted, it was discovered that death had undoubtedly been caused by antimony taken in the form of tartar emetic. Nevertheless—at this point in his speech Sir Joseph Farrell spoke very slowly and emphatically, looking steadily at the jury—traces of arsenic were discovered in the body, and the doctors would give important evidence as to that. With regard to the antimony it was suspected that the poison had been swallowed by Col. Paradine in the glass of Burgundy which the butler had placed in his bedroom. But in the hurry and agitation caused by his sudden illness that glass—there would be evidence to the fact that the wine had been drunk, for the empty glass had been noticed by more than one witness, standing on the night table by the colonel's bed—that glass mysteriously disappeared and was never accounted for.

"The assumption is that it was deliberately made away with by some one," said counsel. "But I am instructed that there is no evidence as to that. The glass simply disappeared from Col. Paradine's room and has never been found."

Counsel concluded by describing the arrest of Mrs. Paradine on the charge of being the person who administered the antimony to Col. Paradine and so caused his death, and finished a long and elaborate opening with these words:

"Gentlemen and ladies of the jury, I have to submit to you that there is cogent circumstantial evidence that the antimony, in the form of tarter emetic, which undoubtedly caused the death of this unfortunate man, must have been introduced into the glass of Burgundy which stood on his night table during the short time when he was absent from his bedroom in the lavatory, into which William Marsh saw him go, and that the only person who could have so introduced it was his wife, Mrs. Paradine, the prisoner in the dock, she being alone with him at that time on the first floor of the house and within easy reach of his room, empty while he was away in the lavatory. If you come to the conclusion that it was she who administered the antimony then she is guilty of wilful murder and it will be your painful duty to say so."

At the conclusion of counsel's speech the court adjourned for the lunch interval.

IMMEDIATELY after the interval, when Lord Horfield had taken his seat on the bench, a procession of servants went to the witness box. They were the servants forming the Paradine household at Hindley Hall, some of whom later went with the Paradines to London, and included the housekeeper, the butler, a footman, Mrs. Paradine's maid, two housemaids, two gardeners and a chauffeur. The evidence of William Marsh, for which Judith Flaquer was eagerly waiting, was not reached on the first day of the trial.

The main object of the crown in calling so many of the servants was to establish the fact that Col. and Mrs. Paradine got on very badly together, were a miserable couple, unsuited to each other, leading a troubled and at times an almost intolerable life together, such a life as a sensitive woman might very well wish to have done with.

The object of the defense on the other hand was to water such evidence down, to take all the sting out of it, and to leave the jury with the impression that though there were at times unhappy incidents in the life at Hind-

How Low Prices Inspired One Couple to Modernize Home

Building Gains Added Value in Transformation

Up to Date, Well Planned Two Family Apartment Dwelling Easily Achieved

By Louise Bargelt.

OLD fashioned and run down, this flat building at 7515 Oglesby avenue had reached that period in its life when it had ceased functioning as an economic asset to its owners, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Falvey, and had become a decided liability. So the problem of what to do was considered. What to do this present time, with labor eager to work and material and prices unbelievably low. And finally it was solved by a decision to remodel the entire structure, thoroughly and effectively; to transform it into a modern, up to date structure, a building to give maximum service in every way.

Because it stood in a residential neighborhood the architect, Elmer C. Carlson, 7910 Cottage Grove avenue, designed for the modernized dwelling a structure of the residential two family home type. As such the Falveys decided to make it their permanent home.

Exterior Changed.

Completed only a short time ago, the exterior of the old building has been greatly changed. It is in truth a new home now. The roof is of heavy, dark green slate and the new front addition is of pressed brick with stone trim in the French manner. The entrance has been moved to the side, the old fashioned boxlike sun rooms taken off, and ever-inviting gracious sun bays substituted. By employing a Mansard roof it was possible to give to the second story a studio living room.

The floor plan of the modernized structure affords considerably more room than the old plan permitted. In fact, all the rooms excepting the dining room have been enlarged and an extra bedroom and bath added.

One enters through a small vestibule, with walls of plastic paint and a handsomely tiled floor. Where the old living room was small with few windows the new one is almost twice as large, with leaded glass windows on three sides and a wide woodburning fireplace of terra cotta. Nichés for telephone and books were installed in the reception hall. The walls were redecorated throughout the entire house, but since the floors were fundamentally sound and stable it was only found necessary to sand them thoroughly.

New Bath Added.

A new bath was added. Both baths are now ultra-modern on each floor, with tile flooring and walls seven feet high. There is tile trim around the windows and doors and all the fixtures are new. The tub is recessed in a plaster arch and the walls above the tile are decorated with appropriate scenic painting.

The bedrooms in the old plan were small and irregular in shape. The new chambers are larger and much better planned.

On the ceiling of the second floor the old plaster was removed and replaced with new metal lath. A new heating plant was installed, as were new electric wiring and fixtures and new plumbing. Practically the only remains of the old building which stood as the remodeling progressed were the exterior brick walls, the floor construction, and some of the partitions.

In the basement space was set apart for a future billiard room. A large fruit cellar was also provided.

Value Restored.

This is a telling example of what can be done with a structure basically sound but which has become financially valueless with increasing years. Placing the modernization of such a building in the hands of an experienced and capable architect, one has taken the first step towards the sane restoration of property to values it should by all rights possess.

There is a big economic waste in any house which has been allowed to run down. We can't help a house growing old, but we can keep it from looking old—and acting old. There is a big economic gain to be secured in the rejuvenation of an old home that it may serve better and happier purposes for long years to come.

Buildings that are allowed to get in a state of needed repair are not only hard to live in, psychologically, because of their depressing influence, but they are often a danger to health. Stairs that are too winding, or dark, or are in need of mending, take a yearly toll in broken limbs, and sometimes death. Plumbing which is old and inadequate, fixtures that are defective, imperfectly trapped fixtures, all contribute in sundry ways to reduced cleanliness, to discomfort and even to disease. Houses which are lacking in sufficient windows, sunshine and air mean not only that they are cheerless houses, but damp ones, too, contributing to the decreased resistance of the dwellers to illness and disease.

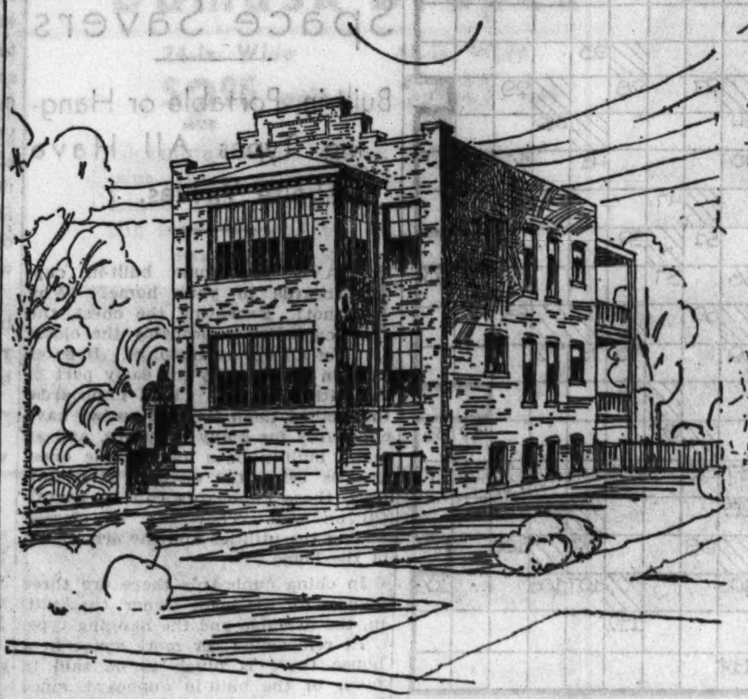
Danger in Outworn Fixtures.

Old fashioned lighting fixtures were not always carefully designed to reduce eyestrain and eye weakness. Old wiring installations often are a fire menace because they are defective in some way. Improper, antiquated equipment may injure the health in various ways. Old time sinks were often set so low that to work at them meant serious back strain. An old stove that leaks through weaknesses engendered by age can endanger lives, and a gas fixture that is defective sends out actual poison.

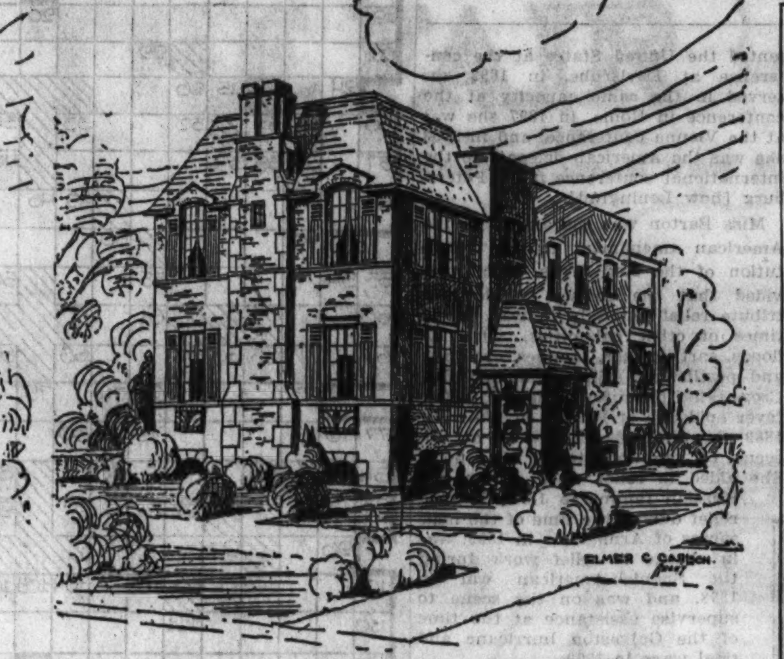
All in all, the old fashioned detached house or the two family house can be brought up to modern standards these days in many ways that are much simpler than we think—and for less money, too, than we may imagine possible until we investigate. We don't need to wait until those halcyon days when we can build that new home which will be just what we want in every way. We can have our old home remodeled now through the skilful and economical medium of modernizing as it is being practiced today!

Non Corrosive Material.

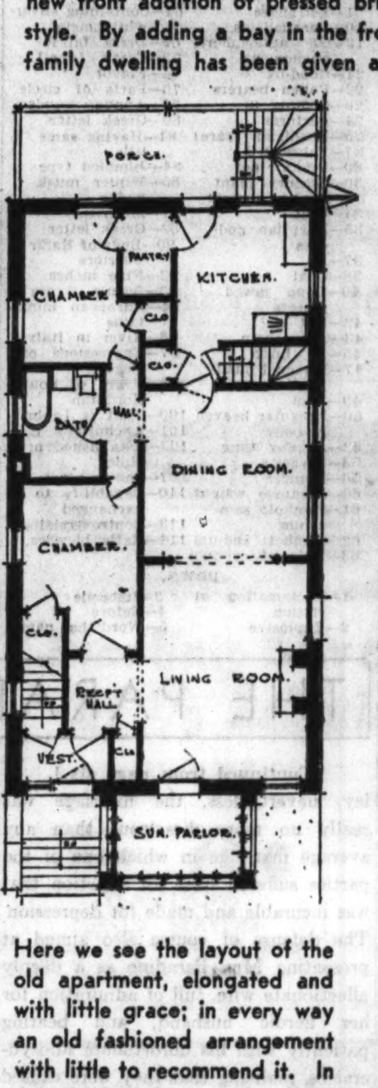
In remodeling as well as in new building it is advisable to use noncorrosive materials wherever possible. If corrosive materials are used, then these should be protected with a corrosive resistant paint.



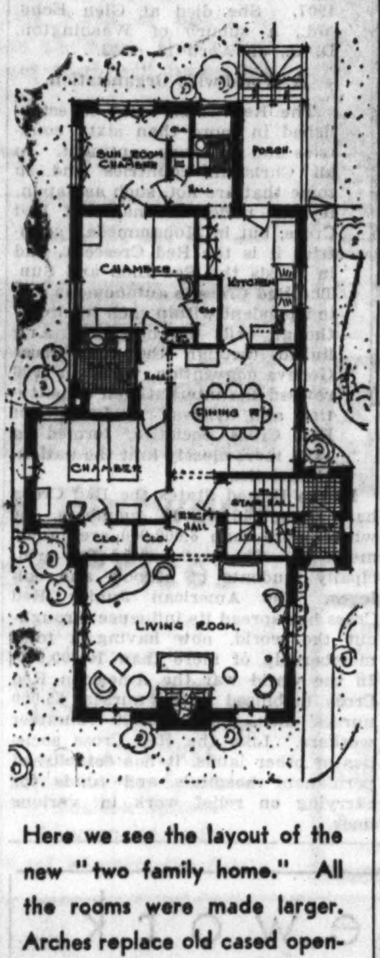
Here is a two flat building of some thirty years' standing. In a run-down condition, it stood in a neighborhood which had outgrown it and had been zoned for residences only. The problem was to make it a paying investment and convert it into a handsome two family residence. So a complete remodeling job was started last summer.



In this remodeled two family home the entrance has been changed to the side. The dwelling now has a heavy green slate roof with new front addition of pressed brick with stone trim in the French style. By adding a bay in the front and enlarging all rooms each family dwelling has been given a new and pleasing spaciousness.



Here we see the layout of the old apartment, elongated and with little grace; in every way an old fashioned arrangement with little to recommend it. In fact, it had been reduced to the point where renting was a problem and the value of the investment had sadly dropped.



Here we see the layout of the new "two family home." All the rooms were made larger. Arches replace old cased openings, there are two baths, and the living room on the second floor is a studio room.

Arranging Small Room to Achieve an Atmosphere of Distinction

By WillElla de Campi.

AN UNUSUAL arrangement of furniture quite as much as the beauty of individual pieces helps to create that atmosphere of charm and distinction which every woman strives to attain in the furnishing and decoration of her home. With a slight rearrangement the room, which somehow seems to be commonplace, may be converted into an interior replete with sparkling personality.

Where space is limited, good arrangement is especially important. How to give individuality to the tiny bedrooms, the no-bigger-than-a-closet dressing room, the small library or the ubiquitous dinette is a problem we meet and attempt to conquer every day.

Today's illustration shows a dinette of average size which has been cleverly handled with pleasing and unusual results. Six of those straight-line modern chairs [sometimes used in groups of three to form a sofa] have been placed flat against the walls in one corner of the room. They are upholstered in brilliant turquoise leather fabric, piped with lemon yellow.

The chair directly in the corner and the two at each end of the group have right angles backs. Placed in this manner, they give the appearance of a costly, made-to-order, built-in bench. In reality, each chair is surprisingly inexpensive. This plan is thoroughly practical, too, since the group may be taken apart and the chairs may be used singly or in sets when the owners move on to larger quarters.

Placed in line with the angle formed by the chair group is a modern, rectangular table with heavy glass top and chromium base. Lemon yellow service plates and china in vermilion, black and white are used on this table. A chromium lamp with lemon yellow cylindrical shade stands at each end.

Instead of the usual serving table, at the other side of the room, there is a fascinating little semi-circular bar. This is amusingly decorated in black and white, with a chromium rail replacing the well-known brass variety. Three high stools, painted white with black seats, stand in front of the bar, and a large round mirror in a narrow turquoise frame hangs on the wall.

An unusual [and easily duplicated] wall treatment enhances the distinction of this small room. Walls are painted smoke gray with flat-tone paint. Strips of glazed white paper in varying widths are glued on horizontally, producing a pleasing striped effect. Windows are fitted with lemon yellow glass curtains and turquoise Venetian blinds. Black linoleum with a waxed finish covers the floor.

Totally different in spirit is a tiny library, which is used also as a card room. Two of the walls are lined with open shelves for books, a third is almost entirely taken up by a window group, and the fourth is completely covered with old maps, shellacked to a mellow tone.

In one corner of the room, with windows at one side and open book shelves at the other, stands a comfortable armchair, upholstered in plaid homespun with scarlet and straw colored lines on an olive green ground. A reading lamp with parchment shade and a magazine rack are placed beside the chair.

Directly in front of it is a walnut card table accompanied by three straight-back chairs with olive green leather seats. When not being used for card games this table affords excellent space for spreading out reference books and papers.

A secretary desk with a chair matching those grouped around the card table completes the furnishings. Hooked rugs are used on the floor and at the windows are draw curtains of percale with tiny scarlet and straw colored flowers on an olive green ground.

Early Bureaus Had Separate Mirrors

WHEN bureaus first appeared in 18th century England they were usually accompanied by small dressing mirrors. These were made with an oblong swinging glass set on a base fitted with one drawer or three little ones in a row, called jewel tills. The feet of this separate mirrow arrangement were often of the claw and ball variety, to match the bureau on which the looking glass was used. Bracket feet were also popular.

During the 19th century this graceful, artistic mirror was attached to the bureau, becoming heavy and clumsy and entirely losing the spirit of the original designers. It is only recently and probably due to the strong demand for honest reproductions of the best antiques that we are once more able to buy chests of drawers with separate wall mirrors, or with the jewel till looking glass.

Bathroom Ventilation.

Eighteenth Century English Furniture as Popular Today as It Was During the Reign of the Georges

Designs of Queen Anne Period and of Chippendale, Adam, and the Rest are Forever Good.

By Edith Weigle.

"WHY was the eighteenth century known as the golden age of English furniture?" asks one correspondent. "And why are designs of Georgian Britain still popular in twentieth century America?"

In answer to the first question, simply glance down the roster of cabinet makers and designers working in England in the 1700s and you'll see why this was a notable epoch. Beginning with Queen Anne, whose reign was very short [1702-1714] but whose influence extended until 1749, furniture became simpler, more graceful, and more comfortable. The extremely high, rigidly straight chair backs gave way to those favored by Dutch craftsmen, then flourishing in England. The bow back appeared, curved to fit the human frame, and with it the vase or "fiddle" splat.

This curving, vase shaped center of the chair back, while Dutch, had its origin in China. Dutch merchantmen in their trade with the orient were bringing back fine porcelains, fabrics, etc. And the vase shaped splat simply followed the lines of a typical porcelain vase from the east. Thus was the famous Queen Anne chair evolved from Dutch and oriental influences.

Walnut was the prevailing wood used during the Queen Anne period, and furniture took on the stolid, simple lines popular in Holland. The claw and ball foot, so indelibly associated with Chippendale, was used in England before his time. Dutch craftsmen put it on chairs, cabinets, tables, etc. They had received their inspiration again from the orient, where the dragon's claw clutching the sacred pearl was an ancient symbol of the people.

Besides the claw and ball foot, the goat's foot, snake's head and pad or bun foot were also used on furniture during the reign of Queen Anne. The cabriole or curving leg was also introduced at this time, although many people connect it inevitably with Chippendale, who put ornate carving on the knee, while a simple shell ornament was all that was used during the earlier years of its history.

Queen Anne furniture is essentially comfortable, livable, graceful, and artistic, and that is one reason why it is popular more than two hundred years after it first delighted the English. The same may be said of the pieces of Thomas Chippendale, whose influence in cabinet making extended from 1749 to 1779. His favorite wood was mahogany and frequently the period included by the two dates just given is known as "the age of mahogany." That immediately preceding it was "the age of walnut." And before that "the age of oak."

Once more, it is wrong to assume that Chippendale furniture is essentially English, for the famous craftsman was influenced by the rococo elegance of Louis XV. sofas and chairs, by the fragile and exotic beauty of the Chinese, and by the massive quality of the Gothic. Some of Chippendale's most beautiful chairs were those with lattice backs, adapted from the Chinese, and some of his most exquisite mirrors were ornamented with elaborate gilded pagodas, birds of the orient, etc.

Chippendale also carried the bow back on from the Queen Anne period as well as the cabriole leg and the claw and ball foot. His name is the most famous of all British furniture designers.

The Adams brothers, Robert and James, were two more illustrious designers of the 18th century. From 1758 to 1792 they created beautiful furniture for well to do Englishmen, also designing the rooms into which it was to go, the ceilings, the mantels, the woodwork, so that the result was an artistic and unified achievement.

Adam furniture is called neo-classic, for it was inspired by the late Roman style, "lightened by an appreciation of its 15th century Renaissance interpretation." While mahogany was sometimes used, satinwood was more the perfect medium for the delicate painted ornaments of Angelica Kaufman, engaged by the Adams for years to put the finishing touches to their chairs, tables, cabinets, etc. Adam furniture because of its classic elegance and aristocratic beauty is used today in formal interiors and is thought by many decorators to be the most beautiful of all the periods.

The latter half of the 18th century saw the workmanship of Hepplewhite and Sheraton. Hepplewhite showed a French influence in many of his designs, which mirrored the grace and form of those of Louis XVI. He was also inspired by the classic lines of Adam pieces, and by the work of Sheraton. His shield back chairs are, perhaps, the thing for which the majority of modern day people remember him.

Sheraton [1790-1810] never actually made furniture, so far as is known. His genius was entirely that of the designer. Like Adam he was fond of satinwood, and like Hepplewhite he was influenced by French craftsmen who worked at the time of Louis XVI. His chairs were, perhaps, more angular in outline than Hepplewhite's. He preferred the straight line to the curve.

Chairs we often call Duncan Phyffe, in this country, are in reality Sheraton in design, for our New York furniture craftsman was an ardent follower of Sheraton.

If one wants proof that 18th century English furniture is ideal in the present day interior the illustration today gives it. What a comfortable room is the one shown! And how good looking. The circular table in the center of the picture has the cabriole legs characteristic of Queen Anne and Chippendale pieces, and the claw and ball feet. The small two tier table at the left might also have been made at the same time.

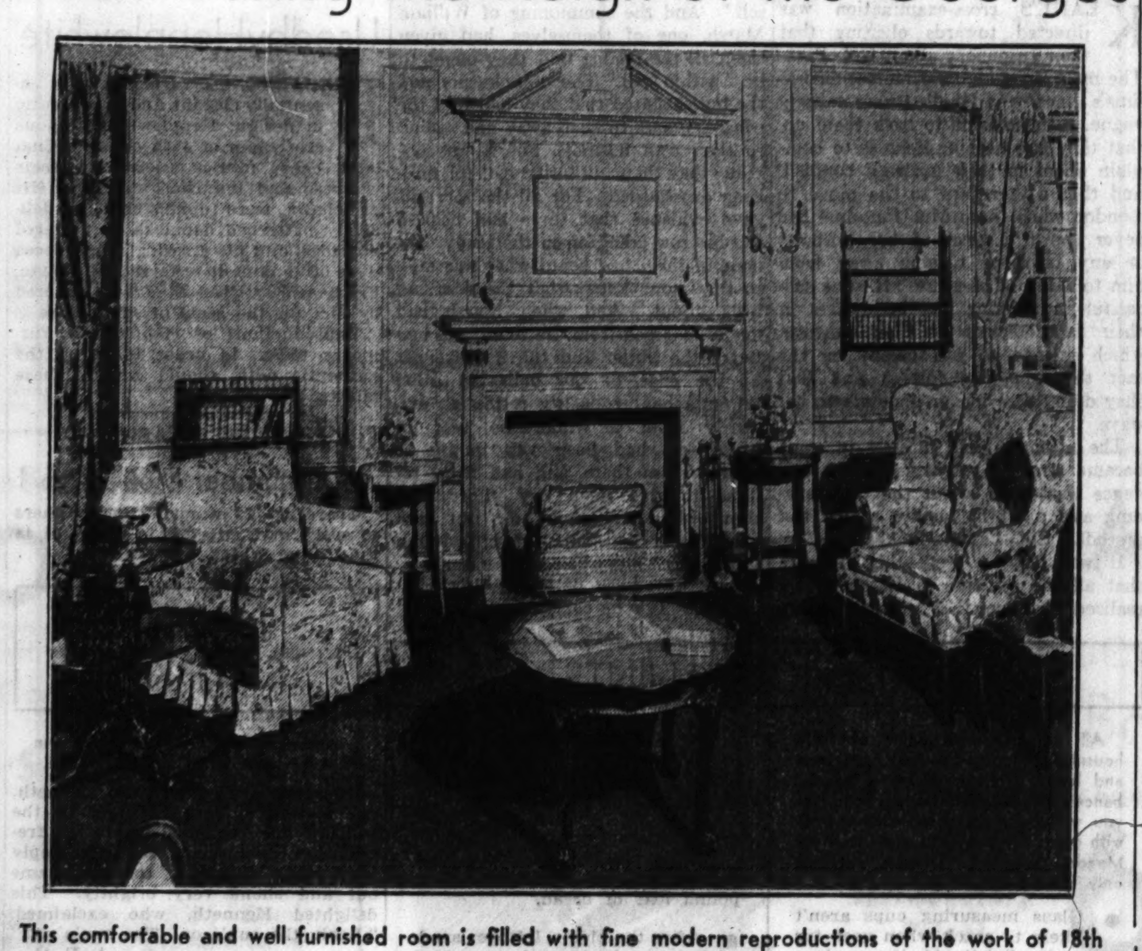
This furniture is made with meticulous care of the best woods by experienced craftsmen, and is sold through stores and decorators in Chicago.



This comfortable and well furnished room is filled with fine modern reproductions of the work of 18th century English designers and cabinetmakers. Chicago stores and decorators carry these pieces.

REMODELING QUERIES

Address inquiries on home building and remodeling to Louise Bargelt, Home Builders' Editor, The Chicago Tribune. For personal reply, enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: We have an old high radiator at one side of a window and we want to know how to hide it so that it won't look so ungainly.—K. Y.

Ans.: You might inclose it in a radiator inclosure. Above this place a bookcase. On the other side of the window you can have a similar effect only in this instance have cupboards below the bookcase. Have the grillework which houses the radiator and the cupboards similar, and, of course, the bookcases above each inclosure should match. Again, you might install one of the newer types of low radiators, better looking and more efficient in the heat they throw out.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: How can I remove some old putty from our windows? Have tried scraping without much success.—T. W.

Ans.: Paint with concentrated lye and you will find that after an hour or so the putty can easily be scraped off.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: What can we do to keep our casters from falling out when we move our furniture around? It's certainly annoying the way they tumble about.—S. A.

Ans.: Wrap rubber bands or friction tape around the stems of the casters and this will keep them firm.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: We find that the basement floor of our house, which isn't so very old, is beginning to chip and show signs of wear. What can we do about it?—Mrs. D.

Ans.: You can put a new topping on the concrete if it isn't in too bad shape. Have the new surfacing about one and one-half inches thick and trowel it on well with rich Portland cement mortar. Be sure before you start that the old surface is thoroughly clean.

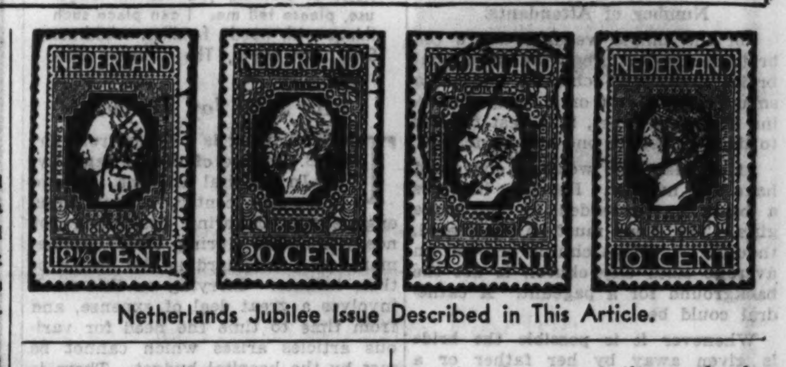
Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Our family which is a large one, is having to double up considerably during these depression times and we have decided to convert our attic into bedrooms for the boys. Would you advise turning it all into one room for better ventilation? Is insulation of wall and roof really necessary? Will ordinary pine flooring of four inch width be satisfactory, the same material to be used for baseboards? Is it true that hot water pipes may be run through the closets, but not down the outside walls?—J. E.

Ans.: "Yes" answers all your questions. If boys are to occupy your attic quarters I would suggest that you insulate your floor a little against noise. Building paper laid under the smooth hard floor will help. You can also install a rough diagonal under flooring. Or you can employ a heavier insulating material under your pine floor to dead sounds more effectively.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen

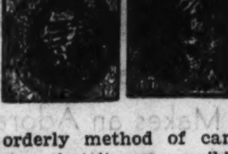
(Nationally Known Stamp Authority)



Netherlands Jubilee Issue Described in This Article.

Mr. Cabeen will be glad to answer questions concerning stamps. A stamped, self-addressed envelope should be enclosed in case a personal reply is desired.

A CANCELLATION is a postal mark intended to render a stamp unfit for further postal use but the word is somewhat confused with postmark and collectors therefore sometimes call the cancellation an obliteration or more concisely a "killer." In the early days foreign countries usually followed some orderly method of cancelling stamps so that it was possible to tell, without seeing the townmark, where the letter originated. Norway, Denmark, France, Great Britain, and many others have assigned a number to each office, and this mark is usually impressed squarely on the stamp.



The United States had no system in its early cancellations, and at the introduction of stamps the postmasters were forced to use whatever was at hand. These include many marks which were applied to "pre-stamp" covers such as FREE or PAID and rate marks such as 3, 5, 6, etc., which were useful when no stamps are on the cover, but meaningless on letters bearing stamps.

After several years the use of such markings ceased and a new series began in which the postmaster purchased boxwood dies or used his jackknife on the ink bottle cork. There were almost as many varieties of these as there were postoffices, and some ambitious postmasters cut special designs for the various holidays, or designs to show their lodge affiliations, and some just cut seemingly to test the imagination of modern collectors.

Uniform handstamps were gradually issued to postmasters so that by 1880 the use of homemade devices had almost ceased, and in the next decade the introduction of machine cancellation still further cut down their use, but even today an occasional mark shows up which may have been in continual though infrequent use in some village since the civil war.

These cancellations are generally collected on the cover where possible, but are equally desirable on the stamp alone where there is enough of the design to be distinct.

Orange-Nassau Jubilee Issue.

During the war between Napoleon and the coalition of kings, the Netherlands were invaded and, siding with the French, were given temporarily an independent government. However, it was soon apparent that the French alliance meant French domination, the liberal constitution was succeeded by another less to their liking, and in 1806 Holland was forced to accept Louis Bonaparte as an unwilling king. In 1810 the Northern Netherlands were made a part of the French empire but following the defeat of Leipzig there was a general revolt in the province and the prince of Orange was recalled to become king of the Netherlands under the title of William I. on Dec. 1, 1813.

This jubilee issue of stamps marks the centenary of the reign of this family. Koning Willem de Eerste [King William I.] ruled from 1813 until 1840 when he resigned the crown to his son, Willem de Tweede, the latter was succeeded upon his death in 1849 by his son as Willem de Derde. William III. died in 1890 and was succeeded by his only surviving child, Wilhemina, a minor, who did not come into full control of the kingdom until 1898. The country was divided in 1831 when the Belgians revolted and set up an independent kingdom. The stamps show portraits of all these rulers in a frame which was quite a novel departure from the usual designs of the time.

Your Questions.

N. G.: There has been more or less trouble at times with people who use precanceled stamps more than once to pay postage and it is not uncommon to find the higher values further obliterated with colored pencil marks. Of course this harms the stamps a great deal from a collector's standpoint but there is no use attempting to remove the marks by erasing them for a practiced eye can always detect it. The best thing to do is to avoid anything that would appear to be "washing" a stamp and keep on the lookout for better copies.

D. R. G.: The word "Caritas" found on any semi-postal stamps means charity and in the case of stamps so inscribed, at least a portion of the proceeds of their sale is assigned to charitable purposes.

The Stamp Dictionary.

Reichspost—an inscription appearing on some of the stamps of Germany meaning imperial post. This was superceded in 1902 by the inscription Deutsches Reich meaning German empire.

Wedding Takes Its Cue from Family Purses

The Small and Inexpensive Affair May Be Just as Charming as the Large.

Miss Bartlett will be pleased to answer etiquette inquiries. If a personal reply is desired, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

By Helen Bartlett.

HAVING a winter wedding? A great many young people are, we find. Hence this article reviewing some of the precepts of wedding etiquette.

First comes the matter of deciding the type of wedding it's to be. If it is an elaborate one, it will be expensive and the bride's family bears the greater part of this expense although the groom and best man and ushers are put to the sometimes questionably sensible expense of purchasing formal clothes.

The simple wedding may not be all that a maiden dreamed of in the way of old lace and filmy tulle and a pageantish procession down a cathedral aisle, but it can be very nice indeed if it is well planned.

Here is the division of expenses:

Bride's Expenses.

The bride or her family pays for:
Invitations and announcements.
Bridal dinner, if given.
Bride's costume.
Gifts to attendants.
Bridesmaid's bouquets.
Awnings, if used.
All decorations of church or house.
Motors used by the bridal party to church and reception.
Musicians' fees.
Sexton's fees.
All expenses of reception or breakfast or whatever festivity follows the ceremony.

It is not customary or necessary for the bride's family to provide the bridesmaids' costumes. This is done only when the family is sufficiently wealthy to prefer to take on the expense. Their bouquets are listed among the bride's family's expenses but if the groom is so inclined he may pay for them.

Groom's Expenses.

The groom's expenses are much fewer than those of the bride or her family. He pays for:
License.
Ring.
Clergyman's fee.
Boutonnières for ushers, best man and bride's father.
Ties and gloves for men in the party.
Bachelor dinner, if given.
Transportation from reception to destination.

The invitation or announcement list is shared by both families; that is, the groom and his parents make up a list of persons to whom they want them sent and submit this list to the bride's family so there will be no misunderstanding.

Invitation List.

Invitations are mailed three weeks before the day of the wedding. Announcements are mailed the evening of the day on which it took place, or the next day.

Most brides, because of the expense, do not have both announcements and invitations. For a small wedding where the number of guests are limited invitations take the form of notes from the bride or her mother, or may be verbal. Then announcements are sent generally after the ceremony. At a large wedding the best plan is to send invitations—at least to the church—to everyone and eliminate the need for announcements.

Number of Attendants.

For the simple wedding where the bride decides to forego the traditional bridal array and chooses instead a smart tailored suit or a softly flattering afternoon dress, it is best for her to limit herself to one attendant.

At an elaborate wedding one could have any number. Recently in Paris a bride was attended by thirty-one girls. The scene must be considered, though. A village church or even an average sized city church is not the background for a pageant. A cathedral could be.

Whenever it is possible the bride is given away by her father or a guardian or some male relative, even at a simple home wedding.

Processional and Recessional.

The order for the processional and recessional is always a fixed one at a church wedding. The groom and the best man come out from the sacristy, with the clergyman, and take their places facing the body of the church when the wedding march begins. At almost the same moment, from the back of the church, the bridal party approaches the altar, ushers first, two by two; then the bridesmaids, also two by two; then the maid or matron, walking alone, and finally the bride on her father's right arm.

Coming down from the altar the bride and groom lead, she on his right arm. After them comes maid or matron; then bridesmaids and finally the ushers. The best man goes out the way he entered, with the clergyman.

Bridesmaids and ushers never walk arm in arm; it's considered quite provincial to do so.

At a church wedding the bride's family and friends occupy the left side of the church facing the altar; the groom's family is on the right side. The parents and immediate relatives occupy the first pews and they are the last persons to be seated before the ceremony and the first to be escorted out afterwards.

Clara Barton, One of Twelve Leaders, Was Founder of American Red Cross

Philanthropist and Humanitarian Remembered by Relief Work Carried On Throughout the World.

By Constance Ray.

WHEREVER the emblem of the American Red Cross goes—on battlefield, in flooded valley, or in famine stricken land—it carries with it the memory of the woman who perhaps did more than any one else to establish the society in the United States. The crimson cross on a field of white stands for service to humanity and at the same time serves as a memorial to the late Clara Barton, one of the twelve outstanding leaders of her sex in America in the last century. She was chosen one of the dozen in a recent nation-wide poll of women.

Clara Barton, philanthropist and humanitarian, was born on Christmas day, 1821, in Oxford, Mass. As a young woman she entered the profession of teaching, soon organizing a free school at Bordentown, N. J. By 1854, at the time she resigned as head of the school to become a clerk in the patent office at Washington, the institution boasted an enrollment of more than 600 pupils.

Started as a Nurse.

When the civil war broke out Miss Barton resigned her clerkship in the patent office to become a volunteer nurse. She served in army hospitals and at dressing stations on the battlefields, in 1864 being appointed superintendent of the hospitals of the army of the James. On several occasions she actually was under fire on the battlefields. At the close of the war she was given the official assignment of organizing a bureau of records to aid in the search for missing men. In this work she aided in identifying and marking the graves of more than 12,000 soldiers at the National cemetery at Andersonville, Ga.

At the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war Miss Barton hurried to Germany, where she assisted the grand duchess of Baden in preparing military hospitals. In 1871 she supervised the distribution of food and supplies to the people of Strasbourg, and in 1872, after the siege of Paris, she headed similar work among the distressed people of the French capital. She was decorated with the golden cross of Baden and the iron cross of Germany.

In 1873 Miss Barton returned to the United States, where she immediately launched efforts to organize an American branch of the Red Cross and to bring her country into the treaty of Geneva. The Red Cross at that time was firmly established in Europe. The organization had grown out of a booklet published by Henri Dunant in Geneva in 1862. Dunant knew much about the horrors of war, and his plan was to perfect an organization to help soldiers wounded in battle. The first Red Cross meeting was held in Geneva in October, 1863, the original members of the commission which organized the society being Dunant; Gen. Dufour, commander in chief of the Swiss army; Gustave Moynier, Dr. Louis Appia, and Dr. Theodore Maunoir. That commission came to be known as the Comite International de la Croix-Rouge.

[American Press Photo.]

Miss Barton's efforts were crowned with success in 1881, when the American Association of the Red Cross was founded. She was its first president and remained its president until her retirement in 1904. In 1905 the society was reorganized and chartered under the name of the American Red Cross. The President of the United States then became president of the American Red Cross.

In War and Peace.

Miss Barton represented the United States at the international conference in Geneva in 1884, the year after she had been appointed superintendent of the reformatory prison for women at Sherborn, Mass. In 1887 she represented the United States at the conference at Karlsruhe, in 1892 she served in the same capacity at the conference in Rome, in 1897 she was at the Vienna conference, and in 1903 she was the American delegate to the international conference in St. Petersburg [now Leningrad].

Miss Barton was the author of the American amendment to the constitution of the Red Cross which provided that the society should distribute relief not only in war but in times of other calamities, such as floods, earthquakes, famines, cyclones, and pestilences. She conducted Red Cross relief for sufferers in the yellow fever epidemic of Florida in 1887. In 1889 she directed relief work at the scene of the Johnstown, Pa., flood. She aided in relief work during the Russian famine in 1891; directed relief during the time of the massacres of Armenians in 1896; was in charge of relief work during the Spanish-American war in 1898, and was on the scene to supervise assistance at the time of the Galveston hurricane and tidal wave in 1900.

Though always active in an executive capacity in relieving distress, Miss Barton found time to write comprehensively of her life's work. She published the "Official History of the Red Cross" in 1882, "The Red Cross in Peace and War," in 1898; "A Story of the Red Cross," in 1904, and "Story of My Childhood," in 1907. She died at Glen Echo, Md., a suburb of Washington, D. C., on April 12, 1912.

A World-wide Organization.

The Red Cross today is established in more than sixty countries and on every continent. In all Christian countries and in some that are not, such as Japan, it goes under the name of Red Cross, but in Mohammedan countries it is the Red Crescent, and in Persia the Red Lion and Sun. The Red Cross is autonomous and independent within each territory, though all organizations are linked through the Red Cross Geneva convention, which in 1906 revised the international constitution and bylaws. A League of Red Cross Societies, formed in 1919, more closely knit the national societies.

In the United States the Red Cross has about 10,000,000 members, of whom more than 6,000,000 are junior members. The last named are principally students of schools and colleges. The American Junior Red Cross has spread its influence throughout the world, now having a total membership of more than 10,000,000. In the world war the American Red Cross mobilized 23,000 nurses, 55,000 nurses' aids, and 6,000,000 volunteer workers. Like the Red Cross societies of other lands, it has established permanent hospitals and funds for carrying on relief work in various lines.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Chicago Maternity Center Appeals to Sally for Aid in Obtaining a Car, Cost of Which the Hospital Budget Fails to Meet.

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you can no longer use, please tell me. I can place such things with needy families. Address Sally Joy Brown, The Tribune, Chicago.

By Sally Joy Brown.

THE following is a letter from Dr. J. B. De Lee of the Chicago Lying-In hospital and the Chicago Maternity center, organizations engaged in bettering conditions for needy mothers during their confinements and safeguarding the health of their infants. Carrying on this work involves a great deal of expense, and from time to time the need for various articles arises which cannot be met by the hospital budget. There is such a need now, and Dr. De Lee, in the name of the organizations he represents, is appealing to you for assistance. He writes:

"Dear Miss Brown: I am not certain that my request comes within the scope of your endeavors, but I am writing in the hope that you may be able to help us in some way.

"The Chicago Maternity center, on July 1, took over the Maxwell street dispensary of the Chicago Lying-In hospital. This institution takes care of poor women during childbirth at their own homes, and teaches doctors, students, and nurses how to do good obstetrics. The institution is thirty-eight years old. The depression has increased our difficulties and also increased our work.

"We are taking care of 310 women during childbirth each month. The distances we have to travel are getting greater all the time; at present we cover about 200 square miles of Chicago territory.

"We need an automobile, really two, to take our doctors and nurses to far cases which are not seldom 15 miles from our base. Do you think that one of the readers of your column in THE TRIBUNE might donate us an automobile? With best regards I am,

"Yours truly,
"J. B. DE LEE."

Upon first thought this might be considered a request of unusual proportions, but I am sure there are many of you who might even find it a convenience to donate your car to such a deserving organization. Perhaps your car is of the vintage that would bring little or nothing in the market today. Maybe you are not using it but have to pay garage rent for it. That would be an annoyance. Perhaps it needs repairs which you are not prepared to spend the money for. Or perhaps you even have a good car which you'd be willing to give. The Chicago Maternity center will be eternally grateful to you and you'll derive much satisfaction from such giving because you'll be helping a most deserving institution engaged in a splendid work.

Orphans Need Clothing.

"I wonder if you can supply a family of orphans with the clothing they need. The three youngest children will be going into a home in a few months, but now they have nothing to wear and no one to help them. Both their parents are dead. The boys are 17, 15, and 12. The girl is 10 years old. W. S."

These children are badly in need of the clothing requested here and they are very deserving. If you can provide them with warm garments discarded by members of your family, it will help them immensely until they are ready to go into the home.

Request for Nightgowns.

"I have an opportunity to enter the state hospital for free treatment. I have several ailments which have disabled me from working and I am so glad to have this chance of recovering but I need your help before I go. Could you get me some nightbowns, size 38? I have none and cannot buy them. MRS. B. S."

Here is really a simple need and someone should be able to fill it. Can you? The woman does not live in Illinois.

Offers Kittens.

"We have a family of kittens we'd like to find homes for. They are two males and two females, now old enough to be playful and very cunning. They are of the tiger variety. F. N."

These kittens, just at the age when they are most attractive, should make fine pets. If you'l like to annex one to your household, let me know immediately.

Felt in a Daring Scarlet Makes an Adorable Hat for Southern Wear or One to Revive the Dull Winter Wardrobe.

By Clotilde.

GETTING smart hats ready for southern wear and Mediterranean cruises is always such fun, and more so than ever this season with all the tricky and youthful models to choose from. With vivid colors and ice white being shown, it is an easy matter to have the right thing in headgear.

The hat illustrated today can be so easily made if directions and measurements given are followed closely. It is made of soft felt in that daring scarlet shade so popular now. The head size measures 22½ inches. French crowns are still shallow in the front, but are left long in the back, since current coiffures call for a longer line there.

Cut the crown 14½ inches deep from front to back and 13½ inches from side to side. Press the brim flat—care being taken to keep the inner circle small—as this is the part that is set on over the crown to form the headsize. This brim can be cut from 1½ to 2 inches deep, but no larger, as the hats are worn so tiny. The sides mushroom slightly, but across the face line the brim must have a straight line.

Mark the front of the crown and front of the brim with different colored thread. Pin the brim on top of the crown, with the marked places together. The crown measures 6¼ inches deep from the top of the brim in front to the top of the crown in front. Pin the brim to the bottom of the crown on each side. From the top of the crown to the top of the brim in the back of crown measures 6¾ inches.

Cut and lap the brim in the back and turn the brim up to fit tightly to the back of the crown, where it is finished off with a large bow of the same kind of material set across the back of the hat. Velvet ribbon can be used if you don't happen to have the felt. Sew the brim on to the crown with small stitches. Sew in a No. 5 grosgrain ribbon in the headsize, as this fits tight to the head. This keeps a shallow hat from "jumping up."

There is no wiring in felt hats this season. Brims allowed to flop any way at all are ultra smart.

ley, nevertheless, the marriage was really no more disastrous than any average marriage in which one of the parties suffered from an affliction that was incurable and made for depression. The defense of course also aimed at presenting Mrs. Paradine as a deeply affectionate wife, full of admiration for her heroic husband, and bearing patiently with his unfortunate idiosyncracies, realizing that they were caused by this misery of his blindness. Important evidence given by the servants was that connected with the two attacks of illness which Col. Paradine had while at Hindley, and with the incidents preceding the attack in Eaton square which ended with his death. The most severe cross examination was directed to the evidence given by the housekeeper, the butler, and the chauffeur.

KEANE'S cross-examination was directed towards eliciting that their suspicions about Col. Para-
The most severe cross-examination was dine's illnesses at Hindley were entirely vague, with no facts to back them up, that they had nothing definite to complain about in their mistress' conduct, and that with regard to the move to London when there Mrs. Paradine had never shown neglect of her husband or any frivolous turning away from him to a life of pleasure. He was successful in showing the hollowness of their faint dislike of their mistress, which seemed to rest chiefly on the fact that she was foreign and that they didn't care for, or understand, her ways.

The attention and interest in court became strongly intensified when evidence was given about the fatal evening and night in London which had preceded Col. Paradine's death.

It was obvious from this evidence that all the servants in Eaton square realized that on that evening before dinner something extraordinary had happened, in which Col. Paradine, his wife and William Marsh were intimately concerned. The butler and the housekeeper had heard the voice of the colonel raised in apparently fierce denunciation. (This when he was alone with his wife.) A shouted summons, as well as a violent ringing of the bell, had brought Marsh to the room. He had entered it and shut the door behind him. A considerable time had then passed. The butler and the housekeeper thought at least ten minutes, perhaps more. They had not, of course, listened at the door. No one had done that. But they and the other servants had been so perturbed by the certainty that something unusual was happening in the house that they had congregated on the back stairs, and in the hall just at the top of those stairs not out of curiosity, not at all, but fearing lest something—they didn't know what—might come about with the colonel. But the sound of his voice had seemed "quite out of himself." And the summoning of William Marsh, one of themselves, had given them all the feeling that they ought to be "within call." The housekeeper and the butler stated that they had told the other servants to keep away and attend to their own business, but it was obvious that their authority had for once been disregarded. For all the servants gave evidence that there had been a terrible row going on in the study. Yet none of them had heard what was said, so that none knew what the row had been about. And when Marsh had finally emerged from the room, and had found the butler and the housekeeper at the edge of the hall—the other servants having hastily retreated, evidently from a wholesome fear of Marsh—he had been very angry at finding them there, and had flatly refused to give them any information about what had happened. But both housekeeper and butler described him as looking "almost beside himself."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

All home makers know of little household suggestions that save time and labor, add to efficiency, or enhance the deliciousness of food. If you would like to share such secrets with other readers, send them to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune. Initials only will be used if desired.

● Glass measuring cups aren't likely to crack when used for measuring hot liquids if you place the inverted glass on the lid of the pan in which your liquid is heating. The glass will thus warm gradually.

● An enamel saucepan that has been burned should be filled with strong salt water and allowed to soak a few hours. Then, if covered tightly and brought slowly to the boiling point, the burned particles will come off without difficulty. Deep spots curl off when dried over the fire.

● To crisp breakfast foods quickly without heating the oven, heat a heavy frying pan piping hot. Pour the cereal into it, cover tightly, and remove from the heat. There is no danger of burning and in a short time the cereal will be crisp.

● About one quart of sandwich filling will be needed to spread the sandwiches from a three pound loaf of bread.

● After the picnic, leftover sandwiches may be toasted or sautéed in a small amount of butter and served with or without a sauce over them.

● Save and dry celery tops. Put them into glass jars and use to flavor stews when celery is scarce. Parsley may also be dried in this way.

There Are Wall Brackets to Suit Any Room or Porch

There is spice and sparkle to the wall brackets we see to-day, and no matter what the mood of your room may be, there are wall brackets attuned to it. We see these in period and in modern design, in the form of crystal flowers, in rare old china, in mirrored glass effects. Again they appear in carved and gilded wood, flaunting tassels of silk. There are also interesting wall brackets for the out of doors terrace or porch.

Cupboards Are Ornaments and Space Savers

Built-in, Portable or Hanging Types All Have Definite Virtues.

HAVE you some built-in cupboards in your home? Why not? Excepting the chest, the cupboard is probably the oldest of all our furnishings. It dates back in England to the early part of the 14th century. China cupboards, they called them then. Now we have cupboards for many purposes, and as many built-in ones as portable ones. Besides being the essence of usefulness, these cupboards can be beautiful as well. They can be classed among the utilities and the ornaments of the home.

In china cupboards there are three choices for the home owner, the built-in, the movable and the hanging type.

In remodeling for more space in a house there is much to be said in favor of the built-in cupboard, since it takes up less room than the other kinds. It can occupy some unused space in a dining room, or in a living room it can occupy that frequently empty space above the fireplace.

To Conceal a Radiator.

Again a radiator may be enclosed, the lower part of the cupboard hiding the radiator and the upper part housing the dishes. Still another spot for the built-in cupboard is the space on each side of the chimney. This is a fine place for twin cupboards if there are no bookcases occupying these niches.

Whether you choose an open cupboard or a cupboard with glass doors is a matter of individual preference. The open cupboard is certainly a very friendly, sociable affair. But still, especially in a city, there is always the question of dust and dirt to be considered. And with glass doors you can protect your cherished possessions, save yourself considerable work, and at the same time you can "show them off." Down through the centuries we have examples of both types, and both types are procurable today in all manner of styles.

Colonial Cupboards Popular.

Of all the cupboards, the Colonial corner cupboard is perhaps the most captivating. Where once they were painted white, now we see their paint tone determined by the decorative scheme of the room. Movable, it has all the advantages of any movable piece of furniture. But it can be quite as charming, built-in.

Easily installed, too, are the hanging cupboards as we see them today. In their simplest form they are merely sets of open shelves with side pieces. These side pieces usually have carved edges, a little irregular in shape. If one prefers one can obtain these hanging cupboards which are enclosed in glass. For use in a small apartment or small suburban home these little hanging cupboards are delightful bits of useful ornamentation for the display of one's choicest china and glassware.

Sometimes a china closet, built-in or portable, forms the dominant center of interest in a room. This is where it is large and there is plenty of wall space for its occupancy. A tall, movable china closet often can fit in between two windows. Odd nooks and corners and irregularly shaped wall spaces, on the other hand, adapt themselves to the built-in or the hanging types.

Brocades and Moires Used by Hepplewhite

BECAUSE his furniture was essentially elegant and aristocratic in design, Hepplewhite, famous craftsman of 18th century England, chose fabrics known for their richness and luxurious quality. His armchairs were upholstered in delicately patterned damasks or flowered brocades, and his drawing room pieces were often done in taffetas and moires. Fairly wide striped silks were favored by him for the seats of side chairs.

BRIGHT SAYINGS

One cloudy morning little Kenneth, age 5, and I were listening to the radio. We changed stations frequently, which kept Kenneth deeply interested. Suddenly the sun came out and shone very brightly. This delighted Kenneth, who exclaimed: "Look, the sun's on! The sun's on!"
A. R. C.

Marjorie, aged 5, is in her kindergarten years and finds numbers very impressive. "Grandmother," she asked, "how old are you?"

I answered, "Sixty-two."

Marjorie looked amazed. "Sixty-two," she exclaimed, "and only that big!"—M. J. L.

tion of being at home with herself. It wasn't even necessary, she perceived, to be pretty if you had that inner sparkle. It was like a little electric flame jumping back and forth between you and the other person. She could almost see it; certainly she could see its effect. Roger Hoyt was leaning forward, puzzled, alight, held fast. For once he was in no hurry to be somewhere else.

"Well," he sighed, "I hear the music, but I don't get the words. Why do you smile like that, as if you knew the best joke in the world?"

"I do!"

"And you're not going to tell me what is is?"

"Never!"

He studied her in puzzled silence for a moment. "You know, there's something familiar about you. Have I met you somewhere before? Perhaps I've seen you coming in with the girl that lives here?"

"The mousy girl?" Merriment bubbled up in her again. She shook her head. "No, I don't think you've ever seen me before." It was no fib—he had never seen her before, not this Crissie Blake. And the old one he would never see again, nor would any one else.

"I'm sorry," he said pursuing the main idea. "I thought if we were old acquaintances I might suggest that a walk and dinner somewhere would be good medicine for brainstorms. Have you an engagement?"

She put her finger to her forehead. "Dear me, I seem to remember something——" How easy it was, once you had the key! You just listened to that airy inconsequence inside you and said whatever came into your mind. Was she really, she asked herself, still in love with this man? She stared at him musingly. Yes, she was. Not in the spiritless way she had been, but even more thrillingly because now she knew that he was completely, satisfyingly aware of her.

"Of course, I might have known you'd have an engagement," he was saying, his face crestfallen. "Couldn't you call it off? No one takes a Sunday night date seriously."

"Hand me that little black book off the desk and let me look," said Crissie lightheartedly.

OVER the little black book she pored, mysteriously smiling. At last she came to a note and cried out, "Dear me, what time is it?"

"Seven-ten. What is the matter?"

"Simply that I have something down here, but it's too late now. I got into a tantrum instead. I'm simply terrible about engagements." Lightly she tore out the leaf and tucked its fragments under a sofa pillow. She could still see before her mind's eye the memorandum that had been written on it:

Hair tonic for Mr. B.
Clams.
Horseradish.
Tomato catsup.
Soda-mints.

"No, what are you smiling at again?" He really wanted to know.

"Do you believe in signs?"

"Signs? You mean mystic stuff? I will if you say so. Why?"

"I've just had one."

"Did it tell you we're going to be friends?"

She smiled demurely. "It told me I'd better not go to Honolulu just now."

They laughed together without knowing just why. Except that the room was full of youth and vitality and a new life. Sweet and thrilling with the new beginning of an old enchantment.

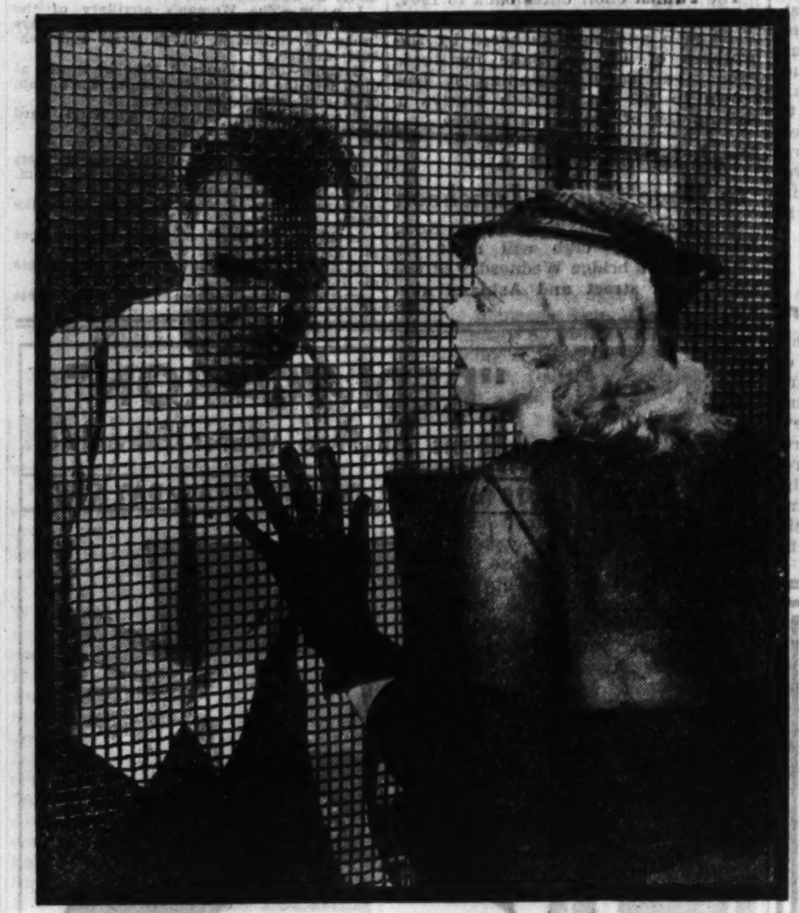
LISTED ON THE THEATER PROGRAMS

Mary Boland, comedienne of many plays and several films, appears at the Grand Opera House tonight in her first musical comedy role. She will be the life of the party in "Face the Music," a successful Broadway show with a score by Irving Berlin. The piece burlesques municipal politics in any American city.

"Doing in Rome what the Romans do," might be a smart monicker for this scene, which is just a little taste of what to expect from "The Sign of the Cross." At the Erlanger.

The hour of fate is about to strike for Gen. Yen! . . . Nils Asther, Barbara Stanwyck, and Walter Connolly await the ominous sound. "The Bitter Tea of General Yen." Palace.

The Chicago Operetta company will make its debut at the Civic Opera house tonight with a revival of the tuneful old favorite, "Robin Hood." Lorna Doone Jackson, formerly of the Chicago Opera company, will lead the cast in the role that carries the famous ballad, "Oh, Promise Me."



Here's a prisoner—but he doesn't seem to be singing any song. Gavin Gordon is the name. The butterfly beating against the bars is one Lillian Miles. This scene is from "Man Against Woman." State-Lake.

This looks interesting—and probably is—Helen Hayes and Ramon Novarro being the participants. You'll know what all the quietude is about when you see "The Son Daughter." Chicago.

Recent Entries in Log Book of Chicago Stage

Both Opera Houses Open with Popular Musical Shows; Civic Revivals.

By Charles Collins.

THE midwinter entries in the log book of the Chicago stage contain a variety of incidents and suggestions that the skies of entertainment, which have been much overclouded in this latitude, are brightening. For example, the two opera houses of the city—the old Auditorium and the new Civic, spacious halls of the lyric muse—are in service again, with shows that have no ambitions to be called "grand" but hope to soothe the popular ear at popular prices.

"Show Boat," an operetta that eventually will be regarded as a classic in its species, came to the Auditorium with the unique and quietly enchanting Helen Morgan as its star; and "Robin Hood," a melodious favorite of the past generation, arrives at the Civic to start a season of revivals in which Chicago will have a paternal interest. Thus the town's pair of dreadnaught theaters are again in action. Or, to change the figure of speech, the white elephants of the Rialto are on parade, striving to earn their keep. They make a stirring spectacle. Give them a cheer, everybody!

New Shows for Old.

The Blackstone theater, undismayed by the closing of the famous hotel to which it was a sort of annex, carries on bravely under the ministry of Guy Hardy & Associates by offering Guy Bates Post in "The Play's the Thing" in place of Henry Hull in "Springtime for Henry." In a season sadly deficient in light, urbane comedy it serves nicely. . . . Cornelia Otis Skinner has come and gone in a week's time, proving with her sequence of sketches depicting the career of the Empress Eugénie that her success with "Wives of Henry VIII." was not a brilliant accident, but the inspired discovery of a new field for a striking talent. . . . "Face the Music" comes to the Grand Opera house, succeeding Ed Wynn's "Laugh Parade," with Mary Boland as its star and Irving Berlin as its composer—a song and dance entertainment in satirical vein which was much admired on Broadway last year.

So it would seem that Chicago's theatrical life has snapped out of its recent state of coma. Certainly it has been behaving since Jan. 1 as if a shot of adrenalin had been administered. But on the other hand:

With the departure of Miss Skinner the Harris theater sinks back into uncertain darkness. With the ending of the stay of "The Good Earth" the Erlanger theater turns to an elabo-

'Cavalcade,' Noel Coward's Epic Review, Makes a Great Talkie

Dramatic Critic Finds This Humanized Portrayal of English History of the 20th Century Is as Telling on the Screen as on the Stage.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK—[Special.]—I found the picture "Cavalcade" so magnificently thrilling it seems quite the most important theater news of this week. This is Hollywood's remaking of Noel Coward's epic review which ran the better part of last year in London and was so sentimentally satisfying to the Britishers that there is talk of knighting Master Coward in honor of its achieving.

Leaving the theater all aglow with the emotional fuss it kicks up in you, you are quite likely to insist that this is in very fact the greatest picture you have ever seen. Away from it long enough to cool off you are still pretty sure it is the greatest. Which, as it happens, does not mean much in my case, because I have seen so few great pictures.

But certainly for those of an Anglo-Saxon heritage it is the greatest theme for a picture with which they are acquainted. It takes the highlights of Britain's everyday history through the 20th century and presents them by way of the reactions they inspire in an English family, one of those fine families whose very decencies are thrilling these days.

There is an echo of the "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" in the photographic technique. A cavalcade of misty horsemen and ladies, of troops and carryalls, files across the scene during the entr'actes. Generations are spanned by a title. Great events are recorded with single scenes. The world war is pictured in four continuous sections, beginning with scenes of singing soldiers going to the front, singing soldiers marching through a smiling countryside and continuing with that march until all that was living is dead in a landscape potted with shell-holes and picked out in shattered walls. It is a masterpiece of thrilling incident in Frank Lloyd's direction.

Remembers the War.

Coward is bitter against war. He is still in his early thirties and war seared his youth. He sees now, at the end of this "cavalcade," men shouting in anger at peace conferences, and boys thrilling again at the roll of drums, and soldiers marching and singing and dying horribly.

He has taken his English family, that of the Robert Marryots, from 1899, when the father and the butler sailed away to the relief of Mafeking in the Boer war, through to the present. He has pointed up the death of Queen Victoria, in whose funeral cortége five kings rode. He has shown a touching bit of the Titanic disaster without any of its horrors, with the oldest Marryot boy on his honeymoon and his happy bride confessing that nothing, nothing can happen to them that can rob them now of their great joy of having lived.

He has injected bits of music hall life during recruiting days, and celebra-

MOVEMENT FOR TEMPLE OF MUSIC IS SPREADING OUT

By Edward Moore.

IT is quite evident that the movement to put up a permanent Temple of Music on the lake front has started something. At first it was the dream of Frederick Stock; out of his dream came the Friends of Music; their activities are already far beyond a local scope and are covering Chicagoland, the state of Illinois, and other states as well. Some of the items included here will show how the idea is spreading.

The Illinois Federation of Music Clubs as a body has thrown its support to the Chicago Friends of Music in the drive. The executive board of this statewide organization, meeting in its annual midseason session at the Woodford hotel in Danville under the presidency of Mrs. William S. Ridgley, voted unanimously to support and promote the drive for memberships in the Chicago Friends of Music. Thirty board members were present.

Mrs. Louis E. Yager of Oak Park, vice president of the federation, represents Mrs. Ridgley in the Chicago district. The board sees in the plans of the Chicago Friends of Music a distinct advantage to the music clubs from all parts of the state in providing a concert hall at which members will be able to listen to music during their sessions in Chicago or the visits of individual members to this city. It is the first time that southern Illinois organizations have actively enlisted in the promotion of a music project for Chicago.

Milwaukee Will Aid Project.

Milwaukee, too, is rallying to the support of the Temple of Music. Early last week the idea was presented to a prominent group in that city gathered at the home of Mrs. Eldred Stephenson. Frederick Stock and Mrs. Walter Borden addressed the meeting, which was organized by Mrs. Frank Willis Golde (Alma Peterson). Ernest Gramm was named temporary chair-

GOOD Morning!

(Looks as if the Chinese cycle has arrived.)

Overshadowing all else in this picture, adapted from the novel by the same name, is the superb work of Nils Asther as a certain sinister, powerful, and philosophical Chinese general. Not only does Mr. Asther's playing consistently hold the interest, but his makeup as well rivets attention and demands acclaim.

And so we start out with a pean of praise. It is to be regretted that pean cannot be followed by pean ad infinitum. But fact it is that few will know, figuratively speaking, what much of the shooting in this piece is about.

PASTORS CLEAVE OVER REPORT ON MISSIONS ABROAD

Gains of Federation Trend Called Vital Portent.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Renewed vitality in American Protestantism seems to be evidenced by two recent developments. The first relates to Protestantism's attitude toward foreign missions and the second is the rapid growth of the federation movement as illustrated in such agencies as the Chicago Church federation and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ. The latter is taking its first steps in what, in particular, the Congregationalists call "the new strategy."

The general problem of foreign missions was hurled into the forefront of Protestant thinking by the report of the laymen's foreign missions inquiry. The report, prepared largely by Prof. William E. Hocking of Harvard, under the title "Rethinking Missions," has been opened and reopened by nervous, expectant pastors. They found it to contain about what many of them expected. That was a demand for revision of methods and motives in the whole missionary field.

Pastors Disagree on Report.

Appreciating the wide recognition earned by the members of the laymen's committee, and realizing that the committee's investigations were conducted in the spirit of scholarly detachment, pastors and church leaders know they must reckon with the report in the future. But some show great antagonism to it, while others herald it as the dawn of a new day in missions.

This division of opinion concerning the report is predicted by some observers as the new Protestant cleavage which will supplant the older fundamentalist-modernist rift. The more liberal leaders of the Congregationalist, Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, and other denominations are beginning to array their attitude of favor for the report against Lutherans, Episcopalians, and more conservative elements throughout Protestantism, who more or less heatedly condemn it.

There is another group of pastors who are holding up final opinion on the report pending results of discussion and further study. Among these is the Rev. Theodore C. Hume, pastor of New England Congregational church, a native of China where his father was president of Yale in China. The Rev. Mr. Hume has announced that the report will be discussed tonight at New England church by the Rev. Dr. Alden Clark, widely known authority on oriental missions.

Discussed by Bishop Stewart.

While the Baptist minister's meeting of Chicago was giving the report virtually unqualified approval, several Lutheran groups scored it. Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Episcopal church, writing in the current issue of the Diocese, calls the report "the work of Protestant humanists," and adds that it "reflects definite hostility to what is broadly known as the teaching and practice of historical Christianity."

Bishop Stewart said the Christianity represented in the report is that of noble sentimentalism.

"My one criticism of the report," said Bishop Stewarts, is not of its technique, nor the tone which is soft sepia of urbanity. It is simply this: The point of view is clearly that of Protestant humanists. It does not represent the New Testament or Pauline or apostolic point of view. Church does not mean to these reporters the body of Christ. It means a sectarian preaching station."

Compiler to Speak Here.

However, Chicago representatives of both sides of the new controversy will have chances to quiz the compiler of the report, Prof. Hocking, when he comes here to deliver a series of addresses at the Chicago Theological seminary on Jan. 23 to 27. Prof. Hocking will be the center of interest in the second annual ministers' week at that seminary. The subject of his lectures, which will constitute the 1933 Alden-Tuthill series, will be "Missions in a Changing World." President Albert W. Palmer of the seminary has announced that opportunities for discussion will be given to persons attending the series.

JACOB M. LOEB.

After 22 years of service, Jacob M. Loeb, 1725 East 53d street, will retire from the presidency of the Jewish People's institute. Immediately preceding its annual meeting the board of directors at 7 o'clock tonight will hold a banquet for the outgoing president at the Standard club, 320 Plymouth court, in special recognition of his efforts.

Dr. Solomon Goldman will be the principal speaker. Mrs. Hannah G. Solomon and James David will give short talks and Miss Jane Addams has also been invited to speak. A short musical and dramatic program will be given by the music and drama departments of the institute. Nine new directors will be elected to fill expiring terms.

Mr. Loeb's work at the institute at 3500 Douglas boulevard, has been hailed by board members as an outstanding accomplishment in social service work and he is credited with developing the organization from "a mere shell to one of the largest community centers in the United States." He has been president 22 of the 25 years he has been associated with the institute.

OFFER MUSICAL SHOW OF NEAR EAST

These oriental beauties will bring the magic of old Damascus to the stage of St. Agnes auditorium, Archer avenue and Rockwell street, at 8 o'clock this evening and tomorrow evening when "What Is Love?" a musical drama of the near east, will be presented by the Sanctuary society under Michel Kadri's direction. Front row, Miss Helen Callahan, Anna Marie Beaudreau, Miss Imogene Gallagher, Miss Mary Ellen Mallon, and Miss Lillian Chausse. Standing, Miss Lillian Kilbride, Miss Mae Millette, Miss May Gallagher, Miss Lucille Frenette, Miss Edna Emmerick, and Miss Mary Loretta Mallon. Mrs. Rose Kelly is chairman of the affair.

SOUTH PARK CAGE TOURNEY TO OPEN NEXT WEDNESDAY

Women's Volley Ball Also to Start.

Initial activities of the south park indoor recreation schedule for 1933 will open Wednesday in the 18 playgrounds with the playing of the first games in the 85 pound basketball tournament for boys and the six women's volleyball leagues.

Round robin eliminations will be used in basketball for the first time, play being divided into four sections and the sectional winners meeting in the final round robin. All opening games will be at 4 o'clock Wednesday.

Hardin square boys will play at Mark White square and Armour will open its schedule at Fuller in the first section.

Second Section Schedule.

In the second section McKinley will be at Sherman, and Gage at Davis square. Cornell, the fifth team, draws a bye. Ogden will play at Tuley and Hamilton at Grand Crossing in the third section. Palmer draws a bye. The fourth section will have Russell at Bessemer and Calumet at Trumbull park.

The women's volleyball leagues are set up according to size, the shorter girls being given equal breaks with the taller girls in this way. The smaller group, the "E" league, will play its first games at 3 o'clock Wednesday. The "C" and "D" leagues will take the gym floors an hour later.

The other three groups, "A," "B," and married women's leagues, will open their schedules at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Seven Women On a Team.

The point basis used for rating the teams in the supremacy chart gives 50 for sportsmanship, 20 for reliability [being on time and having all team members on hand], and 30 for winning. Teams consist of seven women. Twenty minute halves will be played with a five minute intermission between halves.

Women and girls in all the parks now are busy getting ready for the women's gymnastic meet which will be spread over the second week of February. The dates are Feb. 6, 7, 9, and 10. The meet will be in two classifications, junior and senior, with 14 being the age division.

Pierce Looks for Zero Weather.

Ralph V. Pierce, athletic director, is looking for a patch of zero weather which will start on a Wednesday or Thursday and continue through a Saturday. If this can be found, Lake Calumet will be frozen over so that the ice boat races, that were scheduled for Jan. 7, can be held. Otherwise, he opined wistfully, the races "will be held next year, if we have ice."

Mr. Pierce's eyes gleamed Wednesday morning when the thermometer registered 20 degrees, reviving waning hope for the skating meet scheduled for yesterday in the Washington park lagoon.

Marder Memorial Club to Give Charity Party

A charity bridge party will be given at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Madison Park hotel, 1380 Hyde Park boulevard, by the Irene V. Marder Memorial club. All proceeds will go to the Hungry School Children's fund. Miss Sadie Silver, secretary, is on the committee in charge.

LAUNCH LITTLE THEATER MOVE FOR HYDE PARK

Neighborhood Club Guild Makes Debut.

A little theater movement for the Hyde Park community was launched last week at the Hyde Park Neighborhood club, 1364 East 56th street, with the first presentation by the club's newly organized theater guild. John Timen, a Russian with wide experience in the little theater field and formerly of the Moscow Art theater, is the director. He is assisted by Mrs. Timen, who instructs several youthful dance classes at the club.

The guild is starting out with the Quadrangle players and a few others from the University of Chicago as a nucleus. Later it is planned to work in the youngsters of the neighborhood club and any others who are interested.

Expect to Broaden Scope.

Hope is held out for interesting a large section of the community and broadening the scope of the club, whose 14 years have been devoted largely to providing recreation and educational activities for boys and girls. Plays by local authors are to be "given a break" if they have merit.

Plans call for a play a month, with the club benefitting from proceeds. Last week's opening was the occasion for an open house.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hayward, 5618 Kimbark avenue, are co-chairmen of the board of the club. Mrs. Donald Abbott is vice chairman, and Mrs. E. S. Fitch is head resident.

700 Youngsters Enrolled.

Since moving from upstairs store space about two years ago to quarters used by the Hyde Park Congregational church before its union with the Hyde Park Presbyterian church, the club has expanded its activities until now more than 700 boys and girls are enrolled in the various classes. The library now includes 3,000 books and periodicals.

Twelve volunteer instructors are furnished by the University of Chicago, Chicago Normal college, Kendall College of Physical Education, Y. M. C. A. college, and Meadville and Chicago Theological seminaries.

A mothers' club and a program for idle men as well as folk dancing in the evening are on the program in addition to domestic science, craft, music, and archery classes. An orchestra is being organized and a program of sports is conducted for the boys. There also is a kindergarten class.

SILVER JUBILEE TO BE MARKED BY RESTHAVEN UNIT

Resthaven No. 16, United Order of True Sisters, will have its silver anniversary luncheon and celebration tomorrow at the Standard club. The club of 465 women sponsors the Resthaven convalescent home for women and children in the old Marshall Field home at 1919 Prairie avenue, and expects to start its second quarter century by enlarging its work to furnish convalescent care for men and boys in the near future. Mrs. Herbert S. Pflaum, 5000 Cornell avenue, president, will be luncheon chairman. An amateur entertainment will be given after the luncheon.

Temple Israel Juniors to Install New Officers

New officers will be installed this afternoon by the Junior auxiliary of Temple Isaiah Israel, Hyde Park boulevard and Greenwood avenue. David Levy will succeed Leonard Levi as president. Other 1933 officers are: vice president, Miss Jane Eger; recording secretary, Miss Bernyce Surkin; corresponding secretary, Miss Jane Lippman; treasurer, Eugene I. Stein Jr. There will be a dance after the installation and business meeting.

FAMILY DINNER SURVIVES IN CHICAGO

Almost a lost art, these big family dinners? Not with the Gregory Shanahans, 6234 South Fairfield avenue, who are shown here in the center just behind the group of children in the foreground. Mrs. Shanahan had a few guests in to round out the party of 43 which includes five daughters, three sons and 20 grandchildren.

PAULIST CHOIR OLD TIMERS TO ATTEND JUBILEE

THE REV. DANIEL A. LORD.

Old St. Mary's church, 9th street and Wabash avenue, will be the scene of a reunion of former members of the Paulist choir next Sunday evening, Jan. 22. The Rev. Eugene F. O'Malley, C. S. P., director of the choir and himself a graduate from its ranks, has invited former choristers to the evening service to be held in connection with the diamond jubilee celebration of the Paulist order.

The Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S. J., will speak at the evening service and also will deliver the sermon at the solemn jubilee mass at 12 o'clock noon on the same day. The Rev. Charles L. O'Donnell, C. S. C., president of Notre Dame university, will be the celebrant of the mass. The choir will sing at both services.

Father O'Malley may meet old friends at the reunion of the choir. He was a member while a schoolboy on the north side. He organized the Gregorian Choiristers of St. Gregory's church, New York. From 1925 to 1928 he traveled over Europe, studying the methods of famous choirs. He returned to Chicago in 1928 and ever since has been director of his old choir at St. Mary's.

The Paulist choir dates back to 1904, when it was organized with a nucleus of 30 men and boys gathered by the brothers of De La Salle institute. From that small beginning it has grown to 100 voices, with always a waiting list of ambitious singers.

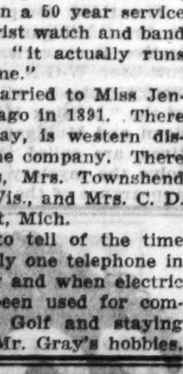
E. T. GRAY ROUNDS OUT 50 YEARS' WORK WITH PRE-REVOLUTION FIRM

Fifty years of continuous service with a company founded 22 years before the revolutionary war is the record of E. T. Gray of the Windermere East hotel which has been his home for 10 years. Born in Aurora, he came here in his youth and started as a lad of 12 running errands for Coffin, Devoe, and company. He completed his half century last Sunday and now is central district manager and a member of the board of directors for the firm, now Devoe, Reynolds and company, said to be one of four oldest concerns of the country.



E. T. GRAY. [Garrett (Oshkosh, Wis.) Photo.]

At a recent managers' convention, Mr. Gray was given a 50 year service award of a gold wrist watch and band of which he says, "it actually runs and keeps good time."

Mr. Gray was married to Miss Jennie Wilber of Chicago in 1891. There son, George P. Gray, is western district manager of the company. There are two daughters, Mrs. Townshend Hay of Oshkosh, Wis., and Mrs. C. D. Campbell of Detroit, Mich.

Mr. Gray likes to tell of the time when there was only one telephone in the entire company and when electric lights had never been used for commercial purposes. Golf and staying young are two of Mr. Gray's hobbies.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

OUR TOWNERS who visit the annual exhibit of Chicago artists at the Art institute should not overlook the wood carving, "Palm Service," exhibited by I. Marks of Harvey. Mr. Marks, who is 72 years old, has been painting, sculpturing, and carving in wood and ivory for more than 30 years in whatever spare time his jewelry business permitted. The work on exhibit depicts a scene in a synagogue.

Chicago may be wet, but not Hyde Park. At least, that is what Arthur B. Farwell of the Hyde Park Law and Order league was quoted as saying last week. Hyde Park prohibition, it seems, is a matter of contract between Hyde Park village and the city of Chicago and not governed primarily by the 18th amendment.

One of those husbandly-wifely interchanges: When Walter Blake, 632 East 90th place, publicly presented his wife with a gavel Monday evening on her installation as worthy matron of Utopia lodge, Order of the Eastern Star. Mrs. Blake promised to use it only in the lodge hall.

TONSILLECTOMIES likewise dimmed the celebrations of Liberia and Jennie Magnabasco, 11419 Watt avenue, who are back home starting the new year without tonsils after going through the ordeal of the operation together.

Lawrence A. Lindgren proved his right to a place among the champion radio venders by writing an essay telling how he sells radios and receiving a $100 check for it in a contest conducted by a radio concern. Mr. Lindgren puts his principles into practice in his own stores in the Woodlawn and south shore districts.

From now on, Our Towners, it's Lieut. Ginsburg, Lieut. Bundon, and Lieut. Tilley. The war department last week announced the appointment of Dr. Walter E. Bundon, 1526 East 53d street, as first lieutenant in the dental corps; Dr. Julius Ginsburg, 4749 Ingleside avenue, as first lieutenant in the medical corps, and Edward T. Tilley, 7958 Constance avenue, as second lieutenant in the field artillery.

GAY doings for the younger set around 71st street and South Chicago avenue from now on! The Oakwood Shamrocks have just been organized as an athletic and social club, with Richard Jones as their president.

If you have been over to the Merchandise Mart lately you may have noticed a model of the building, four and a half feet square, on exhibit in the lobby. That was made by Earl Garr, 4637B Lake Park avenue. He was recuperating from an illness, and to improve the shining hours he began work on the model.

The Engelwood Kiwanis club, which will shoot at a 100 per cent attendance for the third successive week at an interclub meeting Tuesday noon at the Engelwood Y. M. C. A., is sponsoring a bargain week beginning tomorrow in which six neighboring community business men's groups have joined.

This marks a high point in business men's coöperative ventures of the district, the sale area stretching south beyond 79th street from the Englewood hub at 63d and Halsted streets and west from Wentworth avenue to beyond Ashland avenue.

The interclub meeting is the first this year in the Illinois-eastern Iowa district, and George Washington Fleming of the Hyde Park club, district governor, is to be the speaker.

Host to Five Clubs.

Harvey, Hyde Park, Roseland, South Central and Woodlawn are the five south side clubs to which Englewood will be host. The get-together is to mark the celebration of Kiwanis' 18th anniversary week.

Joining in the Kiwanis sale are the Englewood Business Men's association and the Englewood Commercial and Civic association, covering the area around 63d and Halsted streets; 69th and Halsted Street Business Men's association; Tri-Parks Business Men's association, around 69th street and Wentworth avenue; Auburn Park Business Men's association, 79th and Halsted street territory; and West Englewood Business Men's association, area of 63d street and Ashland avenue.

More than 200 merchants are assured for the sale, according to Harry Himmel, new Kiwanis president. Merchants are required to certify their bargains with the club.

Cup for Best Display.

A cup is to be awarded to the merchant having the best window display. The bargain week has been planned by the Kiwanis business standards committee of which Ray Crist is chairman. Other members of the committee are Wendell Holmes and Cornelius S. Kelly, who is president of the Tri-Parks body. All expenses incidental to the contest are borne by the Kiwanis club. The sale is being publicized by trailers appearing on 10 south side neighborhood theater screens as well as through street and window decorations.

Presidents of the coöperating business men's groups: Auburn Park, M. A. Dwyer; West Englewood, Hugo Hertel; 69th and Halsted, Harvey Huggins; Engelwood, William G Donne; Englewood Commercial and Civic, Edward E. Wyatt; Tri-Parks, Mr. Kelly.

Chatham Young People to Open New Quarters

A short business meeting and dance at 3 o'clock this afternoon will mark the Chatham Young People's club's acquisition of new and larger headquarters at 8012 Cottage Grove avenue. David Coustan, 8236 Drexel avenue, is chairman of the afternoon.

W. Auburn Civic Council.

The West Auburn Civic Council of Improvement Associations will meet at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at Edward R. North's store, 1457 West 79th street. Henry W. Bonnema will preside.

REPEATS

MISS FLORENCE LASH.

Miss Florence Lash, 1444 East 54th street, for the second time will lead a wing of Tilden Technical High school's senior prom next Saturday evening at the Medinah Athletic club. Joseph Mooney, chairman of the party, also had her as his partner at the senior prom last June, when he was co-chairman of the affair.

WHO'S WHO ON SOUTH SIDE

A center of Auburn Park's community life is Edward R. North's shop at 1457 West 79th street. No fewer than three civic organizations frequently hold their meetings there, and one can find a congenial crowd there at almost any hour of day or night. The proprietor and host has at least a speaking acquaintance with most of Auburn Park, having lived there for more than 20 years. He is president of the North Auburn Highlands Improvement association, public policy chairman of the 79th Street and Ashland Avenue Business Men's association, and publicity chairman of the West Auburn Civic Council of Improvement Associations.

Mr. North was born near 53d and Wells street on March 12, 41 years ago, the third in a family of six sons and one daughter. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. George J. North, now reside at 8154 South Green street. He went to McClellan school, then entered the employ of Armour & Co. After opening his own retail meat market he transferred to the real estate and construction business, then, two years ago, transferred back to the meat business.

Golf and bridge are his favorite recreations and baseball and football his favorite spectator sports. He has motored all about the country on his vacations. He and Mrs. North and their daughter, Betty, 13 years old, a student at Longwood academy, reside at 7658 Bishop street.

Dr. Solomon B. Freehof to Discuss "Jewish Pope"

"The Jewish Pope: The Legend and the Fact" is the subject to be discussed by Dr. Solomon B. Freehof Wednesday evening at an open meeting of the Men's club of K. A. M. temple, 50th street and Drexel boulevard.

TILDEN SENIORS TO HOLD PROM SATURDAY NIGHT

Class Committees Work on Graduation.

Tilden Technical High school's graduating class will have a last fling next Saturday evening before getting down to the serious business of commencement, and most of the school's beaux are getting their best girls lined up to join the seniors in making it a gala evening.

The semi-annual senior prom, always the big social event of the winter, will be held Saturday evening at the Medinah Athletic club, which is by way of becoming Tilden's traditional prom dance floor.

The party will open at 9 o'clock with the traditional grand march. The blue wing will be led by Neno Cellini, co-chairman of the prom, and Miss Margaret Dugan. Miss Florence Lash, who led one wing of the prom last June, will lead the gold wing again with Joseph Mooney, co-chairman of the dance for the second time.

Prom Is a Sellout.

As usual, competition has been keen between the gold and the blue prom committee as to which could sell the most tickets. Reduced admission prices and high pressure salesmanship resulted in a complete sellout early last week, but the winning team will not be announced until a few days before the prom, when the loser must follow another old Tilden custom, presenting the winning group with a five pound box of candy.

Cellini's blue team includes William Peterson, Jack McIlvoy, Clair Hargis, Johnny Laing, Thomas Edwards, Nick Gonis, Edward Yarline, Larry Doyle, Marvin Haiman, Martin Zitz, George Du Casse and Fred Bonaker. The gold team, headed by Mooney, includes Henry Davia, Harry Yandel, Clarence Cassells, William Kerrigan, Bernard McDonough, Edmund Benben, Lawrence Goeckel, James Punks and Lucian Wisniewski. Earl M. Weiner sponsors the blue and Hance A. Williamson, dean of boys, the gold team.

Senior Class Committees.

Seinwerth Heads Class Day.

Harold Seinwerth heads the class day committee, which includes Fred Boneker, Victor Crickard, Nick Konis, Joseph Mooney and Frank Bickerton. Allen Jensen is chairman of the program committee, which includes Sheldon Brunner, Charles Hallman, Alex Mazwuchok and Albert Stack.

Tilden's championship checker team was fêted recently at a banquet at the school to which last year's team also was invited. Miss Dorothy Sass, assistant principal, and Milton Maymer, coach, spoke. After defeating Fenger, Tuley, Harrison and Roosevelt, the Tilden team tied Crane for the championship, Tilden's second consecutive victory in two years.

Edward Miller was elected captain to succeed John Shimkus who headed the victorious team. Others on the team were John Wallace, Edward Wildman, John Morgan, John Hellstrom, Victor Lagello, James Armstrong and George Gregor.

HOOVER AND PERSHING WIRE OPERATOR GETS PURPLE HEART AWARD

Harry E. Fisher, a member of South Shore post, No. 388, and active in American Legion work in his district, was recently awarded the Order of the Purple Heart by the war department. Mr. Fisher was wounded in the St. Mihiel drive while attempting to establish signal communications with his company of the 353d infantry.

HARRY E. FISHER.

After receiving his discharge from a hospital in France, Mr. Fisher was appointed chief operator at Gen. Pershing's headquarters in Chaumont. Later he was assigned as Food Administrator Hoover's personal telegrapher in Paris.

Episcopal Young People to Hold Winter Conference

The meeting is sponsored by Gamma Kappa Delta, city-wide young people's association. The group will hold its annual business meeting at St. James' Community house, 666 Rush street, on Jan. 31, when officers will be elected.

Parker February Class to Hold Dance Friday

3 RONDOLIERS, RADIO VETERANS, START 13TH YEAR

Trio Embarks on Tenth Air Season.

All-Star Radio Revue

Every major radio entertainer of Chicago is to take part in the Charity Radio Revue to be presented Monday evening, Jan. 23, at the Chicago stadium. All proceeds will go to the Emergency Relief organization. Tickets may be obtained at all stadium ticket agencies and at The Tribune public service offices.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

LEON BENDITZKY.

The old play "Benditzky to Lichtenfeldt to Buiseret," as Quin Ryan used to call it, is still going strong on W-G-N. In fact, the Rondoliers, as the trio of instrumentalists directed by Leon Lichtenfeld, cellist; Armand Buisseret, violinist, and Leon Benditzky, pianist, is called, were reminded that they were starting their thirteenth year of association last Friday, the 13th. Formerly associated with the Drake concert ensemble, they are also starting their tenth season on the air. Before W-G-N's time they broadcast through WDAP from the Drake. A trio of real broadcasting veterans, and we salute them.

Rudy Vallee is modest and generous. When he was awarded the gold cup as the most popular radio orchestra leader in a poll by a radio concern which drew 25 million votes he expressed his conviction that the award should have gone to Paul Whiteman. . . . Jack Denny, who has the same shoemaker as President Hoover, recently got a pair of the President's shoes by mistake. They did not fit Denny. . . . Octavus Roy Cohen is writing his first radio series; reported getting $1,000 per sketch. . . . Booth Tarkington is also writing for radio—and he'll be handsomely rewarded, too. His series is titled "Maud and Cousin Bill," and is heard five afternoons a week at 5 o'clock over WMAQ-NBC.

The air is full of whistling these winter nights. There's Bing Crosby, for example. And Morton Downey. Also Elmo Tanner, who sings with Ted Weems' nickel back orchestra. Tom McLaughlin goes for it, too, on his Irish songs. It's an old Gaelic custom, they say. Harry Mills, one of the four brothers, imitates a piccolo by whistling, and, finally, there's Tom Blanchard of "The Whistler and His Dog," on W-G-N.

Mildred Bailey, thanks to Indian ancestry, it's reported, has been deeded enough land in the northwest so that she will have an ample income, even if radio fans get tired of her voice. . . . The Boswell's will return to the air at 9 p. m. next Wednesday. . . . "S-oo-o-oo-oo," read the address on a letter. "So-oo-o-oo-oo" it was safely delivered by Uncle Sam to Ed Wynn. . . . Cliff Hall, Jack Pearl's "Sharlie," got that cognomen because the director of the show couldn't remember his first name. Others in the cast did likewise, and thereafter his parts were written into the scripts as "Charlie."

"Dick Daring—a Boy of Today," by Frank Dahm, author of "Little Orphan Annie" of the air, which celebrated its third anniversary recently, makes its debut at 5:25 tomorrow on WENR. "There are no nightmares, no blood spilled, no revolver shots in the dark," says Frank. . . . Georgie Price, long featured over W-G-N, is appearing at the Palace theater. . . Arthur Tracy, the Street Singer, also heard on THE TRIBUNE station, is appearing at the Chicago theater.

Here is a call for help. American Legion posts of the seventh and eighth districts have made arrangements for a radio installation in the new fifty bed tubercular ward at Great Lakes hospital. Head phones of the type you once used are needed for each bed. The Legionaires would appreciate having these sets may be sent to Charles Levinson, room 827, at 222 West Adams street, Chicago.

Fred Allen, W-G-N and CBS comedian, received a letter from Galena, Ill., the other day, and here it is: "Dear Mr. Allen: Have frequently heard you refer on your program to Joe Miler's jokes. Will you ask Joe if he is the Joe Miller I used to play with when a small boy. This Joe Miller ran away from home when he was eight years old to become a banjo player. I never heard from him again." Mr. Allen regretfully informed his admirer that he didn't think it was Joe Miller from Galena. In fact, among comedians Joe Miller is a colloquialism—a stale joke is a "Joe Miller."

W-G-N Minstrel Men Put S. R. O. Sign Out Early

W-G-N's minstrel show with Hank Moeller, Hal Gilles and the other minstrel boys are drawing capacity houses. About fifty spectators are admitted to the studio where the minstrel show is broadcast from 9:45 to 10:15 p. m. each Monday night and as Interlocutor Moeller says the S. R. O. sign is posted a half hour before every show.

Tom M'Laughlin to Sing 'One Alone' on Tuesday

Tommy McLaughlin, romantic baritone, will sing the stirring "One Alone" from the Romberg operetta, "The Desert Song," during the "Threads of Happiness" program over W-G-N and Columbia at 8:15, Tuesday, in which he is featured with Andre Kostelanetz's orchestra and David Ross, poetry reader.

SCALLAWAGS TO MAKE BOW

"THE ROMANTIC BACHELOR" NOW HEARD ON W-G-N

"The Romantic Bachelor," which had its première as a Columbia program feature on Jan. 4, is now heard over a coast to coast network of 65 stations, including W-G-N, at 8:15 every Wednesday night.

The programs are a blend of interwoven script and romantic music, during which "The Romantic Bachelor" reminisces about his affairs of the heart with interludes of song to the accompaniment of Mark Warnow's orchestra. "The Romantic Bachelor" is a well known young baritone of both radio and the concert stage.

HEREDITY TO BE TOPIC TONIGHT OF ANGELO PATRI

"Heredity" will be discussed by Angelo Patri, counselor on methods of child training, over the W-G-N and Columbia at 6:45 tonight. Mr. Patri will point out that although leanings and tendencies may be inherited, heredity alone will not result in full development of children's faculties.

JUDGE HAAS TO OPEN LEGAL INFORMATION PROGRAM ON W-G-N

JUDGE JOHN H. HAAS.

The program of "Legal Information for the Layman," inaugurated by W-G-N last year, will again be presented once a week starting at 4:30 next Saturday. The program is presented with the coöperation of Chicago-Kent College of Law. Authorities on various legal questions will be invited to speak. Judge John F. Haas will speak on "Apartment Leases" Saturday afternoon. Judge Haas is an associate judge of the Municipal court. He is also a professor of law at Chicago-Kent college and a member of the board of trustees of Lake Forest university.

TOM, DICK, HARRY TO BE HEARD ON MORNING HOURS

A new harmony program for housewives will be presented on W-G-N at 11:15 each Tuesday and Friday morning by the Harmony Trio, Tom, Dick, and Harry, and their accompanist, Carl Hoefle, and a string trio. This is the first appearance of this great trio of singers on a morning program in several months.

Tom, Dick, and Harry, who have been broadcasting at 6:30 p. m. nightly on W-G-N, will be heard at 6:45 p. m. starting tomorrow.

'WHAT WORSHIP MEANS TO ME' IS MIDDAY TOPIC

The theme for the midday service this week is "What Worship Means to Me." The speakers for the week are: Monday, The Very Rev. George G. Moore; Tuesday, The Rev. E. Cynolwyn Pugh; Wednesday, Rabbi Charles Shulman; Thursday, the Rev. Orrin W. Auman; Friday, the Rev. Father Philip F. Mahoney; Saturday, the Rev. Dr. Charles W. Gilkey.

UNCLE QUIN WILL STAR CHILDREN IN NEW FEATURE

Davy Dreamer, Wishbone in Debut Tomorrow.

"Uncle Quin—and Davy Dreamer—and Wishbone," starting at six o'clock tomorrow night on W-G-N! It's a new kind of thrilling, amusing and imaginative children's feature, starring the funny paper man and his gang of scalliwags every evening except Sunday.

Uncle Quin, of W-G-N, and Uncle Bob, of KYW, are the two genuine bedtime story veterans of the radio in Chicago. In the spring of 1924, nine years ago, Uncle Quin first told children's stories when he was a member of the staff of WLS. That year he came to W-G-N and inaugurated the most popular children's features on the air—the reading of the Sunday funny paper. Also in that year he created "Uncle Quin's Punch and Judy Show," with his playful collection of talkative animals.

Now Uncle Quin comes forth with a new program starring several children. It will contain nothing to terrify children or incite nightmares. It will thrill them and educate them, because its scenes are laid in every part of the world, in all chapters of history and will include famous characters from story books.

The leading rôle, Davy Dreamer, will be played by Donald Weeks. The funny character of Wishbone, the little colored boy, will be played by James Mitchell. Many months were consumed in auditions to find the boys to play these parts, especially young Mitchell, who is a real colored lad. After the program gets under way, still another child will be chosen—a little girl to play the part of Geraldine. Meantime, little Jean McDonald is playing the part of Goldilocks.

The Land of Make Believe.

The adventures of Davy Dreamer and Wishbone take the form of the day dream that every boy and girl indulges in. These youngsters picture the heroics they would have participated in if they had lived in other times, or if they lived in other parts of the globe today. Some days their imagined experiences are dramatic exploits laid in modern times.

In addition to the juvenile characters participating, there is a dog named Tiny Tim, and a parrot. Prizes will be given to listeners.

Davy Dreamer and Wishbone will be heard assisting Uncle Quin in reading THE TRIBUNE funnies this morning at 11:45.

ERROR ON BRIDGE HOUR PROMPTS RUSH OF CALLS

Some idea of the popularity of the "Bridge Club of the Air" program broadcast over W-G-N by E. M. Lagron can be gathered by the story related yesterday by the director, Mr. Lagron. On his broadcast last Sunday, Mr. Lagron was describing the cards in each hand of a bridge game. He stated that the jack of spades was held both in the north and east hands, having named the jack twice instead of the jack and nine of spades. Four minutes after the error over the air was made, the operator at the Drake Hotel studio had received 38 calls and operators at THE TRIBUNE reported a flood of calls checking his statement.

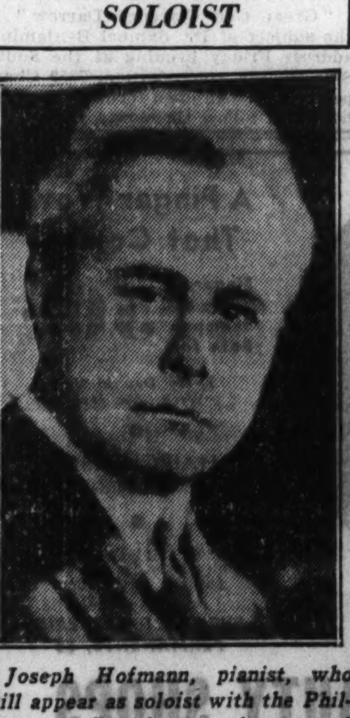
ELSON TO VISIT BALL CLUBS AT TRAINING CAMPS

Bob Elson, W-G-N's baseball announcer, plans to visit both of the training camps of the Sox and Cubs baseball teams again this spring. Bob will go to the coast with one of the teams, and after spending a short time with that club turn to the training camp of the other Chicago squad. Last spring Elson went to Texas with the White Sox and gathered first hand data about the players which aided him considerably in his baseball broadcasts during the summer.

Jack Smith to Revive Berlin Melody Tomorrow

Whispering Jack Smith will sing a former Irving Berlin hit as a solo when he offers "Blue Skies" during his program with Arnold Johnson's orchestra and the Hummingbirds over W-G-N and Columbia at 7 p. m. tomorrow. The Hummingbirds will be featured in their version of "By the Waters of Minnetonka," and trio and baritone will join in the current tune, "If I Only Had a Five Cent Piece."

SOLOIST



Joseph Hofmann, pianist, who will appear as soloist with the Philharmonic Symphony orchestra at 2 o'clock today over W-G-N and Columbia.

FILM STAR ON AIR

Joan Blondell, cinema comedienne, who will be presented over W-G-N at 6:00 tonight with Arthur Tracy and Harry Rose.

Neighborhood Theaters

If you want to give the kids a treat [and probably yourself] you won't go wrong by taking them to see "Orphan Annie" which is at the Piccadilly the first part of the week. The popular TRIBUNE comic strip character by Harold Gray has been on the air for some time and now comes to life on the screen in the person of Mitzi Green. Sandy, a smart dog, and Daddy Warbucks are there, too. And there's an added attraction, Mickey, whom Annie takes under her wing. Betcha a million you go for Buster Phelps in this kid rôle!

* *

Spencer Tracy as Cop.

Spencer Tracy doesn't miss as a cop, and that's one big reason "Me and My Gal" is worth trotting over to the Avalon to see. Joan Bennett, his big moment, is in a new kind of rôle for her—a fresh, gum-chewing cashier of a wharf lunchroom. Tracy is promoted from pier patrolman, but he finds his way to Joan, and how!

* *

"Madame Butterfly" on Screen.

"Madame Butterfly," Puccini opera first sung in 1904, is in its talking picture version at the Tivoli. The part of the poor, little outcast geisha of the Orient is played by Sylvia Sidney. The lieutenant for whose white-man God she gives up hers is played by Cary Grant. You probably know the story—sad little Cho-Cho-San waits for him to return and when he does it is with a white wife. Charlie Ruggles, good as usual, is the lieutenant's friend. The opera goes rather unsung this trip, but there's some fine photography.

Film Conquers Slump.

Let no man say the picture of depression conquering, "The Conquerors," is not going the rounds. It is at the Maryland and Jeffery the first part of the week and at the Grove Thursday and Friday. Richard Dix and Ann Harding do fine work as a couple who have been weathering panics, et al, from 1873 until now. Edna May Oliver and Guy Kibbe are invaluable comic aids.

* *

Jabs at Racketeers.

Maybe "Rackety Rax" doesn't sound like so much, but be assured that it packs a bunch of laughs, including the ending, and is a different kind of thing. Adapted from Joel Sayre's satire, it takes jabs at racketeers and football much as "Once in a Life Time" took shots at Hollywood. Victor McLaglen is featured. Others in the cast are Greta Nissen, Nell O'Day, and Stanley Fields.

Tabernacle Choir to Sing Melody by Own Organist

A composition by their own organist, Edward P. Kimball, entitled "The Wintry Days Descending," will be featured by the Salt Lake tabernacle choir during the broadcast from 11 to 11:30 a. m. today over W-G-N. Other selections by the choir, under the direction of Anthony C. Lund, will be the famous "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," the "Song of the Redeemed," and Mendelssohn's reverent hymn, "Behold God, the Lord, Passed By."

Ruth Etting to Sing Unrequited Love Songs

The enchanting Ruth Etting, singing "Goodbye to Love," and Leonard Hayton's orchestra, playing a rhythmic arrangement of the "Kashmiri Song," will feature the broadcast at 8 p. m. tomorrow over W-G-N. Ruth will devote her entire recital to lyrics of unrequited love. Tuesday night the same series presents Tom Howard and his lively company.

Russel Nelson to Sing Two Special Programs

Russel Nelson, W-G-N tenor, has prepared two special programs for the coming week. At 4:30 on Thursday he will sing Victor Herbert selections and at 4 o'clock Saturday a group of Irish ballads. Mr. Nelson will be heard in recital Tuesday at the Oak Park Woman's club and Saturday night he will take the rôle of Nanki Poo in a presentation of "The Mikado" at the Central Y. M. C. A.

Rube Appleberry to Trade Blows with Shanty Hogan

Rube Appleberry, that brilliant sports star of the W-G-N athletic sketch, "Big Leaguers and Bushers," reaches one of the high spots of his career as a boxer this week when he trades punches with Shanty Hogan.

W-G-N HAS HOST OF REAL QUALITY PROGRAMS TODAY

Typical Weekday Shows Features of Merit.

Despite a widespread lament that radio fare nowadays consists largely of jazz music, crooners, and juvenile skits, there is plenty of evidence to the contrary. 'RUGGED CROSS' IS FOUND MOST POPULAR HYMN

The Pilgrim, a wandering minstrel, will make his debut on the "Grand Old Hymns" program this week over W-G-N. Robert Ball, who is heard on this hour three times a week, will portray this new character. Mr. Ball has compiled a list of the most popular hymns during the year and finds that "The Old Rugged Cross" leads by a large majority. Other hymns in order of the number of requests are "Abide with Me," "In the Garden," "Lead, Kindly Light," "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," and "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer."

MARY MEADE TO GIVE TALKS ON FOOD BARGAINS

A new service program has been added to the long list of W-G-N features. Each Saturday morning from 9:45 to 10 a. m. Miss Mary Meade, cookery editor of THE TRIBUNE, will present a talk to be known as "Food Bargains." This feature should be very helpful to the housewives of the city for it is to give much information about foods and the various bargains of the season.

Virginia Lerae to Sing on Opera Hour Wednesday

Virginia Lerae, young Chicago soprano, whose phenomenal range of voice has won the acclaim of Chicago critics, will be heard as guest soloist on Allan Grant's "Opera Miniature" program at 1 o'clock Wednesday. The opera to be presented will be "Cavalleria Rusticana" and Miss Lerae will sing the "Voi la Sapete" aria. Edward Smith acts as narrator.

Missing Mayor Mystery Up to Demon Detectives

JOSEF HOFMANN SOLOIST TODAY WITH SYMPHONY

Beethoven Concerto to Be Presented.

Josef Hofmann, renowned concert pianist and general director of the Curtis Institute of Music, will be heard over W-G-N and Columbia as soloist with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra in its broadcast from 2 to 4 o'clock this afternoon. With Bruno Walter conducting the orchestra in the accompanying passages, Hofmann will play the last and most ambitious of Beethoven's five piano concerti, the B flat major. Hofmann's last appearance before a Columbia microphone was as soloist with Stokowski and the Philadelphia orchestra this last November.

Soloist to Play Prelude.

The B flat major Concerto which Hofmann will perform during the broadcast has been termed the "Emperor Concerto" in recognition of its high rank among the compositions of its class.

Before the orchestra begins the usual introduction, the soloist is heard in a delightful prelude, in spirit akin to a fantasy. The chief themes are announced in the orchestral introduction, and the soloist enters again to perform a series of intricate variations on the original motives. Gay and swiftly moving throughout, the composition finds Beethoven in one of his brightest moods.

Bruckner Work to be Given.

The second and concluding number on the presentation will be the infrequently performed Fifth Symphony in B flat major, by Bruckner.

Forsans on "Melody Hour."

Modern music and the tunes popular in past seasons will be featured by Bob Forsans on his "Melody Hour" program with the W-G-N orchestra directed by Delos Owen Wednesday from 9:45 to 10 p. m.

Grace Church Dinner.

The Ladies' society of Grace Evangelical church, 60th street and Albany avenue, will hold a birthday dinner Thursday evening. A program will follow with music by the kitchen band of the Morrill Parent-Teacher association.

ENGLEWOOD Y. M. TRIMS BUDGET, BUT NOT SERVICE

The annual meeting of the Englewood Y. M. C. A. board of directors and officers will be held Tuesday evening at the "Y," 66th street and Union avenue. Dr. E. C. Jenkins, president of the Y. M. C. A. college, will be the principal speaker. Annual reports will be made, the new board and officers installed, and the 1933 budget adopted.

The budget, cut in two last year, will be cut still further, but the only money raising to be attempted in the community will be for the boys' division and work being carried on for idle men. Despite the budget slash, service and activities were maintained at practically the same volume in 1932 and will continue the same this year, said James F. McFarland, executive secretary.

Service for Idle.

A major report will be on the service for the idle, said Mr. McFarland, who will recommend that it be continued. There are three main points in the program: privileges for former members not now working, a morning program for any in the community out of work, and a special room service for idle men. About 60 are living in the building under the latter arrangement, while more than 250 are taking advantage of the morning program between 9 o'clock and noon when the gym is turned over to the idle.

K. Ray Ballantine was reëlected chairman and Edward H. Dougherty renamed vice chairman in the mail ballot taken last month to save calling together the membership for a regular election. George Fisher was chosen secretary.

New Members of Board.

New members of the board of directors are David Donnan, J. E. Glen. Hermann Kitzleman, Dr. H. R. Reynolds, Dr. Robert L. Van Dellen, and Raymond E. Nelson.

Those reëlected to the board: H. W. Baumgartner, Raymond S. Blunt, Dr. James Graybeal, Harry S. Himmel, Howard Kingsbery, Henry Kloese, Butler Laughlin, Dr. A. R. E. Wyant, Ald. Walter W. Morris [18th], and Dr. Arthur H. Volkman.

F A "BLACK SHEEP" BUT MARY'S BROTHER

THE proverbial "black sheep" in Mary Smith's family visited his sister at infrequent intervals. One day a longer time than usual had elapsed since the modern vagabond had put in an appearance. Mary worried, as a woman—and a sister—will. She grew more uneasy when her brother's favorite haunts were barren of information concerning his whereabouts.

Unexpectedly, a neighbor reported seeing the brother doing janitor work at a South Side police station in payment for a place to sleep. But this clue was to give more anxious moments when Mary later learned the man answering her brother's description, but using a fictitious name, had been taken to the County Hospital.

She turned for help to the Chicago Tribune Public Service Office. Telephone calls brought new information—vague but distressing. With a Tribune representative, she hurried to the hospital, where her fears were realized. Her aid had come too late.

The part we played in helping Mary Smith was small, but we were happy to have her confidence and to be able to assist. Though thousands of calls are made on us, none of them become routine. Some are tragic, some humorous, some are dryly statistical and require studious research. Our only aim is to be helpful and to give that aid to Chicago Tribune readers which cannot be rendered in the columns of a newspaper.

Disturbing Episode.

Moreover, the closing of the Garrick theater by the demands of the musicians' union that five men should be employed where none were wanted, has had a depressing effect upon those who are praying for a theatrical renaissance in Chicago. True, the incident merely tossed "The Family Upstairs" into the lap of the Cort theater, which seems to be immune to musicians, and thus reopened one playhouse while closing another. Nevertheless, it was a disturbing affair, apparently nipping in the bud a new management and accomplishing nothing but loss of employment and ill feeling all around.

Incidentally, whichever side was right, 1,000 playgoers, assembled in expectation of an evening's amusement, were subjected to the acute annoyance of dismissal. In such matters union leaders would do well to pause for a few hours' contemplation of the old capitalist—a Vanderbilt, I think—who is always cited as a horrible economic example because of his alleged utterance: "The public be damned!" Men whose trades are associated with the entertainment of the public will find it excellent policy to give the customers courteous treatment whenever they decide to lock horns with their employers.

Comedies Are Scarce.

The new management of the Blackstone theater has made an excellent start and deserves encouragement in its ambition to keep that pleasant playhouse as a bright spot on the map of the Rialto. It began well with "Springtime for Henry," a merry affair which deserves more attention that it received, and the current booking, "The Play's the Thing," with Guy Bates Post as successor to the late Holbrook Blinn, is also worth seeing.

In both cases the tradition of the Blackstone has been maintained. Comedies of wit and manners are scarce for the time being, and most of the shows that are being sent into Chicago this season are song-and-dance affairs. If you are in search of the best play in town, and not in a mood for operettas or musical comedies, the Blackstone has the call this week.

The only other nonmusical show in sight at the moment is "The Family Upstairs," moved from the Garrick to the Cort and doing well in its new abode—so much so that Leonard Doyle, its actor-manager, is contemplating other productions here. This piece comes under the heading of bourgeois or home-folks comedy; it deals in frank bread-and-butter humor and charactertization, which is the tradition of the Cort.

Mr. Doyle, who may be identified as the man who acts the bashful comic swain in this story of the tribulations of a street car conductor's family, wants to stage Maxwell Anderson's "Saturday's Children" for special performances that will not conflict with the schedule of "The Family Upstairs." He is also scouting for unborn manuscripts. He is a new impresario in the big league and has broken into the picture after managerial exploits in Australia and New Zealand.

"Land of Smiles," an operetta recently staged in the east by the Shuberts, is headed toward Chicago, and may be expected to arrive Feb. 5. Charles Hackett, well known in the grand opera sector, has the leading rôle in this piece, which is now being viewed with favor by Philadelphia audiences.

Civic Honors

ROBERT LORAINE the English actor who has been playing with Katharine Cornell in "Lucrece," has been invited by Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore to read Alfred Noyes' "Ode to Victory" at the special Lincoln's birthday concert of the Baltimore Symphony orchestra in the Lyric theater in that city on Feb. 12. This orchestra is the only one in the United States supported by a municipality.

Following Loraine's recitation the orchestra will play Ernest Schelling's "Victory Ball," which was inspired by Alfred Noyes' ode. The composer will be a guest of honor on this occasion.

Mr. Loraine has had a career which for its range probably is unequaled among present day actors. He has acted Shakespeare's Othello, Henry V., Petruchio and Benedick. He has been seen in eighteenth century comedy in the characters of Bob Acres in "The Rivals," young Marlowe in "She Stoops to Conquer," and Charles Surface in 'She Stoops to Conquer." He played D'Artagnan in "The Three Musketeers," Harry and Simon Blake in J. M. Barrie's "Mary Rose," Bluntschli in Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man," and the title rôles of Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac," Somerset Maugham's "Smith," and Strindberg's "The Father." His greatest success was as John Tanner in Shaw's "Man and Superman."

His last appearance in Chicago was in "The Devil Passes," a year ago.

"Cat and Fiddle" Heroine

BETTINA HALL

This gifted singing actress carries the love story of "The Cat and the Fiddle," at the Apollo theater, and is scoring the greatest hit of her brilliant career in operetta. She started in Winthrop Ames' Gilbert and Sullivan revivals, and then joined the American Opera company. Last year she was in "Three Little Girls."

Berlin's Musical, Civic Operetta, New in Chicago

IRVING BERLIN'S latest musical show, "Face the Music," starring Mary Boland and with a large company, comes to the Grand Opera house tonight. This frolic satirizes city politics and government much after the manner of "Of Thee I Sing." George Kaufman, librettist of the latter, was stage director for the new Berlin show.

"Face the Music" is the first score that Irving Berlin has written in five years. Its song hits include "Let's Have Another Cup of Coffee," "Soft Lights and Sweet Music" and "Castles in Spain."

With the announcement comes word of a reduction in box office prices. The scale will be the lowest for big musical shows fresh from New York since the war.

"Robin Hood," famous comic opera of the late 1890's, written by Reginald De Koven and Harry B. Smith, will appear at the Civic Opera house tonight to mark the debut of the Chicago Operetta company, organized by David Erwin Russell. This will be a stock company offering the standard classics of the light operatic repertory at popular prices, with guest stars and visiting players of national reputation in the leading rôles. The bill will be changed every week.

The cast for "Robin Hood," which has not been sung in Chicago for more than ten years, will include Lorna Doone Jackson, formerly of the Chicago Opera company, in the contralto rôle; Charlotte Lansing, attractive prima donna who has figured in the long Chicago runs of "The Desert Song" and "Marching By"; Greek Evans, a baritone of opera and concert experience; James Liddy, Forrest Huff, Joan Arthur, George Sweet, Charles Gallagher, Milton Burns and Sarah Andradra.

The chorus will be of grand opera size; the orchestra will be of symphonic dimensions.

Mr. Russell comes to Chicago to launch this venture after twelve years of experience with the Municipal Opera company of St. Louis.

Maurice Browne's Luck.

Maurice Browne's American representative announces that the manager who produced "Journey's End" in London among other activities has withdrawn from the management of London West End theaters. He will devote his time to writing and working in the little theaters.

Stage Ancestor

A BACKGROUND of forty-five years' experience on the stage is the boast of Laura Clarion, who plays "the little lady" in "Show Boat." She has been a teacher of diction to the younger generation of actors for many years, and was one of the first to realize the demand for such instruction among the movie actors to whom the "talkies" opened up a new field.

Miss Clarion made her stage debut in 1887 at Daly's theater, New York. The next season she won the ingénue rôle in a company starring Helena Modjeska. She toured the country later as the star of "Caprice" and then began a long career of leading rôles.

She retired for a number of years and returned to the stage in "The Seven Sisters," with Lauretta Taylor. Later, she appeared as Pat Rooney's mother in the vaudeville act in which he and his wife played practically every city and town in the country.

Some Party!

The American Can company has selected "Show Boat," at the Auditorium, for a theater party of 3,500 to be given Thursday evening, Jan. 26. The audience will include executives, representatives and friends of the company, plus wives and relatives.

B'way Prepares for Elmer Rice's 'We, the People'

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—[Special.] —Four new plays and one revival form the list of first nights for the coming week on the Broadway stage. The most important item appears to be "We, the People," in which Elmer Rice has attempted to dramatize the economic depression. Here are the announcements:

"Pigeons and People"—Opens Monday night at the Sam H. Harris theater. After a prolonged absence George M. Cohan will return to Broadway in this new play, a farce [by Mr. Cohan] described as "a comic state of mind in continuous action." The last two words mean that there is just one act, and mean, furthermore, that the author-actor will be on the stage practically all the time. Others in the cast are Walter Gilbert, Paul McGrath, Edward F. Nannery, and Olive Reeves-Smith.

"Pardon My English"—Opens Friday night at the Majestic theater. This is a musical show with book by Herbert Fields and John McGowan and music and lyrics by the Gershwin brothers. Jack Pearl is among those whose English must be pardoned and due to his radio activities there will be no performances Thursday night. Besides Mr. Pearl, Lyda Roberti, George Givot, Barbara Newberry, Carl Randall, and Roberta Robinson are in the cast.

"Big Night"—Opens Tuesday night at Maxine Elliott theater. A play by Dawn Powell, which is to be the second production of the Group Theater this season. It was once called "The Party." Among its players are J. Edward Bromberg, Stella Adler, Eunice Stoddard, Roman Bohnen, Phoebe Brand, and Lewis Leverett.

"As Husbands Go"—Opens Thursday night at the Forrest theater. The sixth revival this year under the ægis of Messrs. Wee and Leventhal is the play by Rachel Crothers, last acted in days of 1931. Among those taking part on the present occasion are Sue Keller, Joe King, Margerie Lytell, Leslie Dennison, and Alice Frost.

"We, the People"—Opens next Saturday night at the Empire theater. Elmer Rice's most recent contribution to the stage—a drama dealing with the present sad state of the business cycle. It contains 21 scenes and 54 actors participate. Mr. Rice is his own manager. The cast includes Eleanor Phelps, Ralph Theadore, Blaine Cordner, Pierre Watkin, and William Ingersoll.

MATRIMONY AT REHEARSALS

GUTHRIE McCLINTOCK has staged all the plays in which his wife, Katharine Cornell, has acted since "The Green Hat." A sidelight on their rehearsal method is furnished by Sidney Skolsky in the New York Daily News:

"They forget, in the heat of rehearsals, that they are husband and wife. He will suddenly jump up and say: 'Miss Cornell, I'd like to see you on the side a minute please.'

"McClintic allows nobody to attend his rehearsals. Recently there was a dress rehearsal. Miss Cornell asked McClintic if an old friend of hers who couldn't get to the opening could come to the rehearsal. He said so. And the great Katharine Cornell, producer of the play, star of the play, told her friend over the telephone that she was sorry, but she couldn't get her to the rehearsal."

McClintic says that rehearsals are hard labor. If any one not directly connected with the play is present, actors become self-conscious.

Movement for Music Temple Spreading Out

By Edward Moore.

man of the Milwaukee committee, and a drive for memberships began immediately.

Those present were Mrs. William J. Pigott, state chairman of music; Mrs. John F. Brooks, First district; Mrs. Fred K. White, Second district; Mrs. J. F. Groves, Third district; Mrs. Lyle C. La Point, Sixth district; Mrs. H. C. Johnson, Ninth district; Mrs. Louise E. Burr, Chicago Women's club, and Mrs. J. C. Sieger, Gage Park Women's club.

Music chairmen of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, meeting at the headquarters for club activities of the Chicago Friends of Music, added their coöperation to the efforts of the music clubs in behalf of the Temple of Music Wednesday. They will solicit memberships in Chicago and in all the clubs of the state.

Meanwhile, reports from the headquarters of the Chicago Friends of Music in the Monroe building indicate the drive is making splendid progress. The coöperation of newspapers, clubs, and business and professional organizations has brought the plans for the Temple of Music before millions not only in the Chicago area but throughout the country.

Music Trades Co-operate.

The music trades hopped on the band wagon Wednesday evening at the annual banquet of the Piano and Organ club at the Auditorium hotel, at which Frederick Stock and Dr. Albert were guests of honor. These two gentlemen who are so vitally interested in the success of the plan spoke at length, with the happy result of enlisting the trade representatives in the drive.

Business men's organizations which affiliated themselves with the drive during the week included the Economic club, the Executives' club, the Commercial club, the Rotary, the Kiwanis, and the Lions clubs. Chauncey McCormick, co-chairman of the Chicago Friends of Fusic, and Russell Tyson entertained the executives of these organizations and other business men interested in the project at a luncheon at the University club Thursday. Those present included Lucius Teter, Frank S. Weakley, A. W. Merrifield, Harold A. Swift, F. H. Scott, George C. Hager, George L. Treadwell, Frank D. De Money, C. Normann Dodd, and Robert M. Fulton of the organizations listed, and George W. Rossetter, president of the Association of Commerce, Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern university; Charles S. Peterson, and Dr. Allan Albert of the Century of Progress, and Frederick Stock.

A Picturesque Pianist.

Vladimir de Pachmann died eight days ago in Rome, and with his passing the race of picturesque personalities among musicians has become practically extinct. Nowadays it is sometimes difficult at first sight to tell a musician from a college professor or a well groomed business man, but not in De Pachmann's day. He and his fellows believed in dressing and acting the part.

It was De Pachmann whom the late James Gibbon Huneker used to call the Chopinzee, an epithet not entirely insulting, since it was based on the player's wizardries with Chopin's music no less than his grimaces and cavortings about the stage while he was playing it. In a more polite manner he is thus described in one of the musical dictionaries: "His fame is due chiefly to his playing of Chopin's music, which is transfigured under his fingers by his exceptional temperament and unbridled individuality."

That there was plenty of both can hardly be denied, and it is probably because both existed to such a degree that he was immensely popular. Those who used to crowd his recital performances will remember his habit of coming on the stage, surveying the piano bench from several angles, and moving it a hair's breadth or so before venturing to seat himself upon it, then turning to his audience and commenting in a jumble of four or five languages on the music and more particularly on his own performance.

I once heard him say just before one of the Chopin Etudes: "The only time I ever heard this played well was once, by Rubinstein—and then not perfectly. I will now play it."

* *

Conceit Well Justified.

Truly, he had a good opinion of himself, but it was rather well justified. Those who knew him personally claimed it was pure stage management, deliberately put on for its own effect, and that in Europe, where such antics are not approved, he played straight through without a word or a grimace, letting his performance speak for itself. But in America his fans would reach out to touch the hem of his coat as he went by.

In his playing he was a fellow of infinite delicacy. No one ever jingled the keys so caressingly. As a matter of fact, he up to the last maintained superb control for just such delicate effects. Not that he played as other pianists play, or always as Chopin wrote in matters of expression. I once heard him, to the great rage of several other pianists sitting near by, completely reverse Chopin's directions through a whole composition, playing softly during the forte passages and loud where Chopin had written pianissimo, and yet work out a rather logical performance. But when he was not up to such tricks he did some angelic things.

If he had lived until July 27 of this year he would have been 85 years old. It has been several years since last he appeared in America, but apparently he had no idea of abandoning the keyboard. Even this winter he was quoted as planning another trip which should take him to London and New York, and perhaps further. It would probably have been Chopin again. He played other things, but Chopin was his favorite and his specialty.

Byzantine Music.

In a program at St. Luke's church, 714 South Western avenue, tonight and another at Orchestra hall Tuesday night, the Byzantine ensemble under the direction of Marion Schroeder Booras will give public demonstrations of what it has been doing on the radio, and semi-privately for several weeks past a presentation of ancient Greek and medieval Byzantine music. The choir will be accompanied by Spiro Stamos, announced as the modern Orpheus, on the sanduri, an instrument of 140 strings and called the linear descendant of Orpheus' lyre.

Byzantine liturgical music, of which there is a vast amount in the archives, is little known to the western world, but it would seem to be the source out of which developed the Ambrosian and Gregorian chants of the Roman church. A number of masterpieces will be sung by the ensemble, among them the "Cherubicon," dating from the fifth century A. D., which has words by St. John Christotom. About 100 Cherubicons are used in the Byzantine church, all based upon this sacred lyric.

Several "Troparia" will be sung, a type of song used in the Byzantine church only once a year on the occasions that they commemorate. Also included will be the "Axion Estin," which is the "Ave Maria" of the peoples of the Near East. Its lyric was composed by St. Basil, one of the early fathers of the Christian church. A series of "Antiphona" will take a prominent place on the program. These compositions are the ones that would seem to have opened the vista to St. Gregory for the chants that immortalized his name in the liturgy of the western church, and a marked resemblance exists between the two forms of music.

The Byzantine ensemble was founded by Nick John Matsoukas of Chicago, and is dedicated to the ideal of bringing Greek and Byzantine melodies to the attention of western hearers. After its Orchestra hall appearance it will make a tour about the country, returning to Chicago in time to make appearances at A Century of Progress Exposition.

Music Notes.

Some 3,000 young singers representing the glee clubs of eleven Chicago high schools will appear in their eighth annual competition festival at Orchestra hall Wednesday night under the direction of Dr. J. Lewis Browne, director of music of the Chicago public schools. Among the schools to be represented will be Austin, Bowen, Calumet, Lake View, Lane, Marshall, McKinley, Morgan Park, Parker, Roosevelt, and Schurz, and they will be divided into five classes, girls' glee clubs, large and small, boys' glee clubs, large and small, and mixed choruses of 100 to 350 members.

Each organization will sing a required number and one of its own choice. Trophies will be presented to the winning groups, a trophy won three different times to become the property of its school. The event will be open to the public.

The Chicago Light Opera company of forty-two members will present "The Mikado" in a benefit performance under the direction of Carl Craven at Mayfair Junior High school on Friday evening. Ruth Dennen, the Yum-Yum of the cast, has been a member of the Harold Teen team on W-G-N, and was runner-up in the west side contest of the Chicagoland Music Festival last summer.

Anna Burmeister, soprano, will sing Rogers' "The Lord Is My Shepherd," at the Fourth Presbyterian church vespers this afternoon. The anthems will be Mendelssohn's "Cast Thy Burden on the Lord" and Bairstow's "Save Us, O Lord." The postlude recital by Barrett Spach will be made up of works by Byrd, Couperin, Purcell, and Shaw.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra is taking a trip to Columbus and Pittsburgh this week, but will be back in time for its regular Thursday and Friday concerts at Orchestra hall. No soloist is announced for this pair, but there will be a new work, the third symphony by Szostakowicz, otherwise known as the "May Day." Other works will be Haydn's "Oxford" symphony, the introduction to the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," and Elgar's Variations on an Original Theme. On the following week Serge Prokofieff will appear in the triple rôle of pianist, composer, and conductor.

Musical headliners outside of the orchestra announced for Orchestra hall during the month of February will include José Iturbi, pianist, Feb. 5; Uday Shan-Kar and his company of Hindu dancers and musicians, Feb. 11; John McCormack, Feb. 12, and Vladimir Horowitz, Feb. 19.

Margaret Gent, contralto, will appear with the Woman's Symphony orchestra at the Drake hotel at 5 o'clock this afternoon, singing Hindemith's song cycle, "Die Junge Magd," for contralto voice, flute, clarinet, and string quartet. She gave the first American performance of this work last April at the Goodman theater under the direction of Rudolph Ganz. Margaret Sweeney, the other soloist of the program, will play Ravel's Introduction and Allegro for harp. The orchestra under the direction of Ebba Sundstrom will play Franck's Symphony and a movement from Albeniz's "Catalonia."

Philip Warner, young pianist and composer of Chicago, is the winner of the $100 first prize in the annual composition contest sponsored by Sinfonia, national musical fraternity. The winning work, a chaconne for flute and piano, was played at the Sinfonia annual banquet in Washington last week.

Johann Strauss' operetta, "The Gypsy Baron," will be sung in German at the Auditorium tonight. Among the cast will be Lucie Westen and Irene Pavloska, former members of the Civic Opera company; Max Bratt and Angelo Lippich. A large chorus and orchestra will be under the direction of Arthur Koch.

Three Star Revue.

Lupe Valez, Jimmy Durante, and Hope Williams will be starred in "Strike Me Pink," a new musical show by Lew Brown and Ray Henderson which will go into rehearsal Jan. 16. The show embodies part of the "Forward March" revue which was tried out earlier in the season. Supporting the three stars will be Hal Leroy, Eddie Carr, Nan Blackstone, Carolyn Nolte, and others.

Literary Hopes of Hollywood Finding Outlet

Film Stars Turn Author and Leave Their Ghost Writers Without Jobs.

HOLLYWOOD.—Junior Fairbanks said the other day he expects to have a book of his poems published. Eric Linden recently completed an autobiography. Alexander Kirkland is negotiating for the sale of his novel.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS JR.

Movie stars these days aren't content with owning swimming pools, knowing which end of the yacht is the stern, or how to keep an airplane from ground-looping. They must also, it seems, be authors. They feel that writing, once you get into it, is a mighty nice by-product.

A list of the players who are invading the literary ranks gets longer every day. Charlie Chaplin, when he bursts forth with a 50,000 word description of his trip around the world, will be an addition.

* *

Top-notcher Rogers.

He joins such persons as Eddie Cantor, Groucho Marx, Chic Sale, Will Rogers, Elissa Landi and Roland Young, who have earned considerable by writing on the side.

Rogers, the top-notcher, is said to receive about $5,000 a week for the words he writes. Miss Landi has had three novels published; Eddie Cantor, aided by Dave Freedman, a writer, has been in national magazines and his name appears on two short books. Roland Young authored a volume of rhymes called "Not For Children."

Jimmy Durante writes short sketches for magazines and Maurice Chevalier's name has been affixed to articles. So have those of Marie Dressler and Mary Pickford and Conrad Nagel and Gary Cooper and Miriam Hopkins.

Before she left for England, Ann Dvorak let it be known that she had written some poetry she hoped to see printed in book form. And her husband, Leslie Fenton, also is a writer, having paid for an European vacation two years ago by penning articles for English papers.

* *

Stars Own "Ghosts."

Norman Foster, who has written two plays, recently signed an actor-director contract. Ralph Graves writes senarios for more pictures than he appears in; he also has one of those "triple threat" agreements.

Pity the poor ghost writer!

It used to be the ghost who got the money, the star being satisfied with the publicity resulting from an article or a book under his by-line.

Now, in addition to dispensing with the specter scribe, they're even doing their own bargaining. Some stars may obtain a little assistance on the editing, but otherwise they do the work themselves.

Jane Cowl's Plans.

Jane Cowl is interested in a play called "Hervey House." Its action takes place in an English ducal house and carries the characters over a period of 23 years, from 1891 to 1914.

Maestro Kern Sings Praise of Irving Berlin

JEROME KERN, composer of "The Cat and the Fiddle" and "Show Boat," now rated as the dean of American composers of light music, thinks highly of Irving Berlin, composer of "Face the Music," etc. Here's part of an article he has written in praise of his colleague:

"At a dinner in London I was asked what were the chief characteristics of the American nation. I replied that the average United States citizen was perfectly epitomized in Irving Berlin's music. Of course, I enlarged upon the notion and went on to explain that both the typical Yankee and the Berlin tunes had humor, originality, pace, and popularity; both were wide awake and both sometimes a little loud, but what might unsympathetically be mistaken for brass was really gold.

"Since then columns have been written about Berlin and his music. Learned expressions have been hurled at the head of modest, shy, little Irving, to his utter bewilderment. And all the time this high falutin' bombardment has been going on Berlin has entrenched himself in a shellproof, impregnable position.

"Berlin, like Wagner, molds and blends and ornaments his words and music at one and the same time, each being the outgrowth of the other. He is not bothered with the seats of the Olympians, but he is concerned with the lore, the hearts, and the dancing feet of human folk.

"The comparison between the craft of Wagner and Berlin is not a heedless one, and in anticipation of indignant protests I now go further and say that, to my mind, there are phrases in Berlin's music as noble and mighty as any clause in the works of the masters, from Beethoven and Wagner down."

Vaudeville Acts

The Palace theater offers the following list of vaudeville entertainers on its program of entertainment this week:

Georgie Price—One of Gus Edwards' most successful protégés, who has been singing and jesting to radio audiences of late.

The Kikutas—Japanese athletes.

Hollywood to Put on Its Own Beauty Contest

Prizes, 75, Will Be Chance to Appear in Cantor's Musical Production.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Hollywood, famous for being the goal for beauty contest winners, is putting on its own beauty contest, a mammoth affair in which every girl in the United States from the ages of sixteen to twenty-one is invited to compete.

VIRGINIA BRUCE.

The prizes, seventy-five of them, will be the chance to join a hand picked group of girls to be used in Eddie Cantor's new musical production for Samuel Goldwyn. Added to this is the assurance that fares to and from Hollywood will be provided to the winners and a large chance that the rôle with Cantor will be the start of a career.

"I advise any girl interested to try to determine for herself if she is of a definite type of beauty such as is exemplified in 'Palmy Days,' 'Whoopee,' and 'The Kid from Spain,'" says Goldwyn. "I particularly want striking brunette types, though of course there will be red heads and blondes. I hope, too, to have girls from every big city and every state—sort of an all-American beauty show."

Girls are advised to send photographs with their physical measurements and—this is interesting—their educational background as well. Nowadays it seems that it isn't enough to be beautiful—there must be some intelligence and culture as well.

First Step to Career.

There is some promise for the girls that are winners, if one can judge from the past record of Sam Goldwyn, who has proved himself a picker of both stars and beauties for the screen. Part of this is because Goldwyn, following his usual methods, which are always intensive, combed through seven thousand candidates to pick the seventy-five girls needed for "The Kid from Spain." Nearly all of them have got contracts here or there in shows, night clubs, or films.

BARBARA WEEKS.

Most notable perhaps is Virginia Bruce, now Mrs. John Gilbert, who was first picked for "Whoopee" and then taken to New York under contract to Florenz Ziegfeld for "Smiles" and "America's Sweetheart." This brought her the M-G-M contract and her husband.

Barbara [Bobby] Weeks, a dancer in "Whoopee," was placed under a contract by Goldwyn, which contract is still in force, and, by her work in Columbia pictures, to which she was loaned, she earned herself the envied honor of being a Wampas baby star.

Ruth Eddings, a show girl in two Goldwyn productions, is now doing well as an entertainer in a New York night club.

Claire Dodd from "Whoopee" went to New York with Ziegfeld for his new show and was later signed to a long term contract with Paramount, where she now works.

Betty Grable, dancer and hit player for Goldwyn, was signed later by R-K-O and played the lead with Wheeler and Woolsey in "Hold 'Em Jail."

* *

Played with Barrymore.

Marian Marsh, who played two leads with John Barrymore, one being in "Svengali," got her start as a Goldwyn beauty in "Whoopee," under the name of Marilyn Morgan.

MARIAN MARSH.

Nancy Lyon, recently known as the fiancée of Harry Bannister, former husband of Ann Harding, and daughter of a California state senator, played as a show girl and is also at the Paradise club in New York.

Toby Wing, Ann Hovey, Margaret Lamarr, Jeane Shattuck, Patt Farr, Loretta Andrews, Edna Callahan, Renée Whitney, and Donna Mae Roberts are all at Warners-First National.

Grace Poggi, signed at Agua Caliente by Goldwyn because of her rhumba dancing, worked for one minute on the screen in "The Kid from Spain." On this showing she will be the leading lady in Cantor's next musical film for Goldwyn in May.

Paulette Goddard, the rumored fiancée of Charles Chaplin, the mysterious lady of the diamonds, foreign cars and chinchilla furs, who turned out to be a young and wealthy North Carolina divorcée, also worked in the recent Goldwyn picture with Cantor. She also did leads at Hal Roach's.

In Comedy at the Cort

EILEEN O'DA

"The Family Upstairs," which has moved from the Garrick to the Cort theater, gives this juvenile actress an opportunity for her Chicago debut. In spite of her youth, however, she has had a lively career to date. She has acted in seven plays and eleven motion picture productions. Little sister roles are her specialty.

Nils Asther Is High Light of Chinese Story

By Mae Tinee.

problem seems to be presented regarding the respective viewpoints of foreign missionaries and the, so to speak, heathen Chinee.

An American girl, Megan Davis, comes to China to wed her missionary fiancé, Dr. Robert Strike. Both are wide-eyed, devout; dedicated to the cause of making the yellow man believe in the white man's God.

* *

Chinese General Is Villain.

Megan attracts the attention of the all powerful Gen. Yen, in whose castle she is finally cast up by the billows of conflict and the onrushing tide of the general's desire. From then on it is a match of wits, beliefs, and philosophies, with the general's disloyal concubine as a sort of shuttle.

The final reel reveals the American girl's resistance broken down and her standards changed, while Gen. Yen, vanquished in battle, deserted by all save the fair Megan and an American renegade who has been his financial adviser, calmly drinks a bitter brew which wafts him—whither . . .?

"Funny fellow, Yen," says the renegade to the girl, as they sail away from those parts. "Believes death's only a change. Perhaps he's right here—the waves—the breeze in your hair . . ."

The girl, lost in thought, makes no reply. You wish to heaven she would open her mouth and do a bit of explaining. But she doesn't.

* *

No Love for Her Part.

I suppose the picture is atmospheric, but never having been in China—how can I say? Of one thing I'm as sure as if she'd told me, and that is that Barbara Stanwyck had no love for her rôle. She's beautiful to see and just like a parrot to listen to. She recites her lines docilely, but with absolutely no verve or conviction. The very same thing may be said of Toshia Mori as the general's mistress.

Walter Connolly gives one of his bang-up performances as the renegade, and other rôles are satisfactorily enough played. Photography is fine; sets likewise. I guess the director did the best he could.

But Nils Asther is the salt on this egg—and it isn't salt enough.

SAYS ROUBEN MAMOULIAN, director: "The stage can never regain its place in the entertainment world until the screen finds its own sphere and becomes completely self-reliant. . . . The screen believes it must have the technique of the stage. . . . The result is Hollywood now has a majority of the important theatrical figures. The stage is left with only a minority of its former talent and so is in a bad way. . . . I find that most of the playwrights are writing directly with the screen in mind. . . . But the day is coming when the screen will have its own mode, with its own actors, writers, and experts who have not been drafted from the stage. Then both entertainment mediums will thrive in their separate fields." . . . RALPH BELLAMY has been engaged by Columbia for the leading male rôle in "Beneath the Sea." . . . BEBE DANIELS' next starring picture for Warner Brothers will be "Just a Pal." . . . KATHERINE HEPBURN intends to go in for flying in the springtime. . . . ELISSA LANDI has been engaged to play the leading feminine rôle in "Warrior's Husband" for Fox. . . . PAT O'BRIEN has never smoked a cigaret in his life. He likes cigars that are big and black. . . . RICHARD ARLEN, who is, you know, the mayor of Toluca Lake, is rebuilding his house there by his own labor. . . . PAULETTE GODDARD apparently will not marry CHARLES CHAPLIN at the moment. She has taken up dancing lessons and is planning a six months' sojourn in Europe. . . . Says Photoplay: "Norma Talmadge turned down $100,000 for a second vaudeville tour throughout the country. And the reason?—She refuses to dress and undress nineteen times a day, 133 times a week, or 570 times a month. She just feels no money is worth that many changes. Pulling her 'changes' over her head—

See you tomorrow.

HISTORIETTE

HERBERT MARSHALL, the English stage and screen actor who has made such a hit with movie fans, was born in London on a May 23. He was educated at St. Mary's college in Harlow, England. After graduating he was for some time an articled clerk in a firm of chartered accountants in London. When 21 years old he became interested in the theater, and not so long after made his first stage appearance as a servant in "The Adventures of Lady Ursula." For the next two years he played a succession of parts in other productions. Then Cyril Maude hired him to portray Ernest Heron in "Grumpy," and with Maude, Marshall toured the United States and Canada.

HERBERT MARSHALL.

In 1925 he came to New York to play the rôle of Geoffrey Allen in "These Charming People," and after that was continually on the legitimate stage either overseas or in New York. His first experience in talking films was with Jeanne Eagles in "The Letter." He played with Claudette Colbert in "Secrets of a Secretary," and you have seen him recently and successively in "The Blonde Venus," "Trouble in Paradise," and "Evenings for Sale."

Mr. Marshall is married to Edna Best and he and his wife are inseparable companions.

Miss Bankhead, who has not appeared on the American stage in a decade, acquired the rights to the play, which is the work of Edward W. Roberts and Frank Morgan Cavett, after Arthur Hopkins had relinquished the option. Mr. Hopkins had planned to have Hope Williams in the central rôle.

By Burns Mantle.

tion days, after a victory, with dancing in the streets. And homely little scenes of home life above and below stairs. Being a clever playwright, he has never lost touch with his characters nor the story they relate.

* *

An Abbey Theater Production.

The cast, too, is a perfect choice. Diana Wynyard came over to play Mrs. Marryot, and her characterization is a superbly realized study. Clive Brooks plays the husband. Ursula Jeans, also an English actress of standing, is an aunt, and there are fine short parts made finer by Herbert Mundin, Beryl Mercer and Una O'Connor. All of whom you screen followers probably recall.

Next in interest is a Lenox Robinson drama called "The Big House," which the Abbey theater players gave for the first time in New York, though it may have been seen in other parts of the land before this. The Abbey players have made a habit frequently of playing around New York rather than in it.

"The Big House" dates back to 1926, when it was first done in Dublin. With its telling Mr. Robinson writes into the record a brief and sketchy history of that distressful after war period of readjustment that afflicted his revolution ridden country. "The Big House" is symbolical, in a way, of the landed aristocracy and its cultural influence in the smaller Irish communities. Ballydonal house, in the vicinity of Cork, is where the St. Leger Alcocks and the Alcocks who came before them have lived for generations. But the old house, like the influence of its owners, has retreated wing by wing and room by room until finally it is mined by revolutionaries and blown up as a protest against the particular brand of loyalty for which the Alcocks stand.

Bell Tolls for Victory.

It is such a story of the landed gentry of Ireland as Paul Green wrote of the disintegrating southern aristocracy of America in "The House of Connelly." And it stems also from the Chekoff "Cherry Orchard" in so far as it follows the dissipating fortunes of an aristocratic family caught between the upper and nether millstones of economic and social change and ground almost out of existence.

When the armistice was signed in 1918 the big bell in the big yard of the big house was set pealing for the first time in 20 years and all the tenantry and the gentry roundabout were thrilled. But the day also brought word that a second Alcock son had died of his wounds, and there was tragedy, too, in the ringing of the bell.

In 1921, wealth and prestige shrinking, the Alcocks were victims of a Black and Tan raid bent on teaching he villagers, through Ballydonal ouse, that soldiers could not be killed n ambush in that vicinity without the eople suffering reprisals.

In 1923 the revolutionaries burst nto the big house and ordered its people into the yard. Then they blew up the old house and moved on. So at the play's end we have the Alcocks, mother, father and daughter, hovering near what is left of the summer house in the garden, their home gone, their hopes blasted, their future uncertain.

Conscious of Her Class.

The English born mother would return to the homeland. The Irish proud father is bewildered and beaten. Only the daughter is ready to carry on. And carry on she will. Her class is as important to Ireland as any, she says, and more important than most. She will come back and start again to build from the ashes of Ballydonal house, and one day there may be an Ireland greater than the Cosgraves, or the De Valeras, or even the Alcocks for her to look up to.

It is a garrulous play. Mr. Robinson, in the best of political play traditions, must stop occasionally to lecture his countrymen or justify himself. His main protagonist is the girl, Kate, and she an eloquent pleader for understanding and the hopes of youth. But the father, looking much like a young Bernard Shaw when his beard was sandy, has a good deal to say that is interesting. The admirable Eileen Crowe and Barry Fitzgerald play the parts. It is a play for the Irish mostly, but it has a human grip as well.

"Good-by Again" Amuses.

There is an amusing comedy that I have missed up till now. It is called "Good-by Again" and is farcically concerned with the effort of a literary lion to shake himself loose from a slightly demented admirer who feels that she has been a major influence in his literary life. Silly play, but intelligently silly, which is all any one should demand of farcical comedies.

The story swirls around Kenneth Bixby's adventure the time he was in Cleveland on a lecture tour. There he was stopping at the Statler hotel with his amanuensis, Anne Rogers, when the former affair, Julia Wilson, now married, burst in to reclaim him.

Kenneth tries to put Julia off, which nly makes Julia cling the closer. 'his leads to one complication after nother until finally Julia's husband is et for a divorce, Kenneth's secretary s about to desert him, and everything s terribly mixed up. The ending is leasant. Kenneth, Anne and the lecture tour go on.

An inside story almost as funny as hat of the play is being told herebouts. It seems the producer, the ame Arthur Beckhard who did "Another Language," tried to get the tatler hotel people to furnish the oom that is the single scene in the lay.

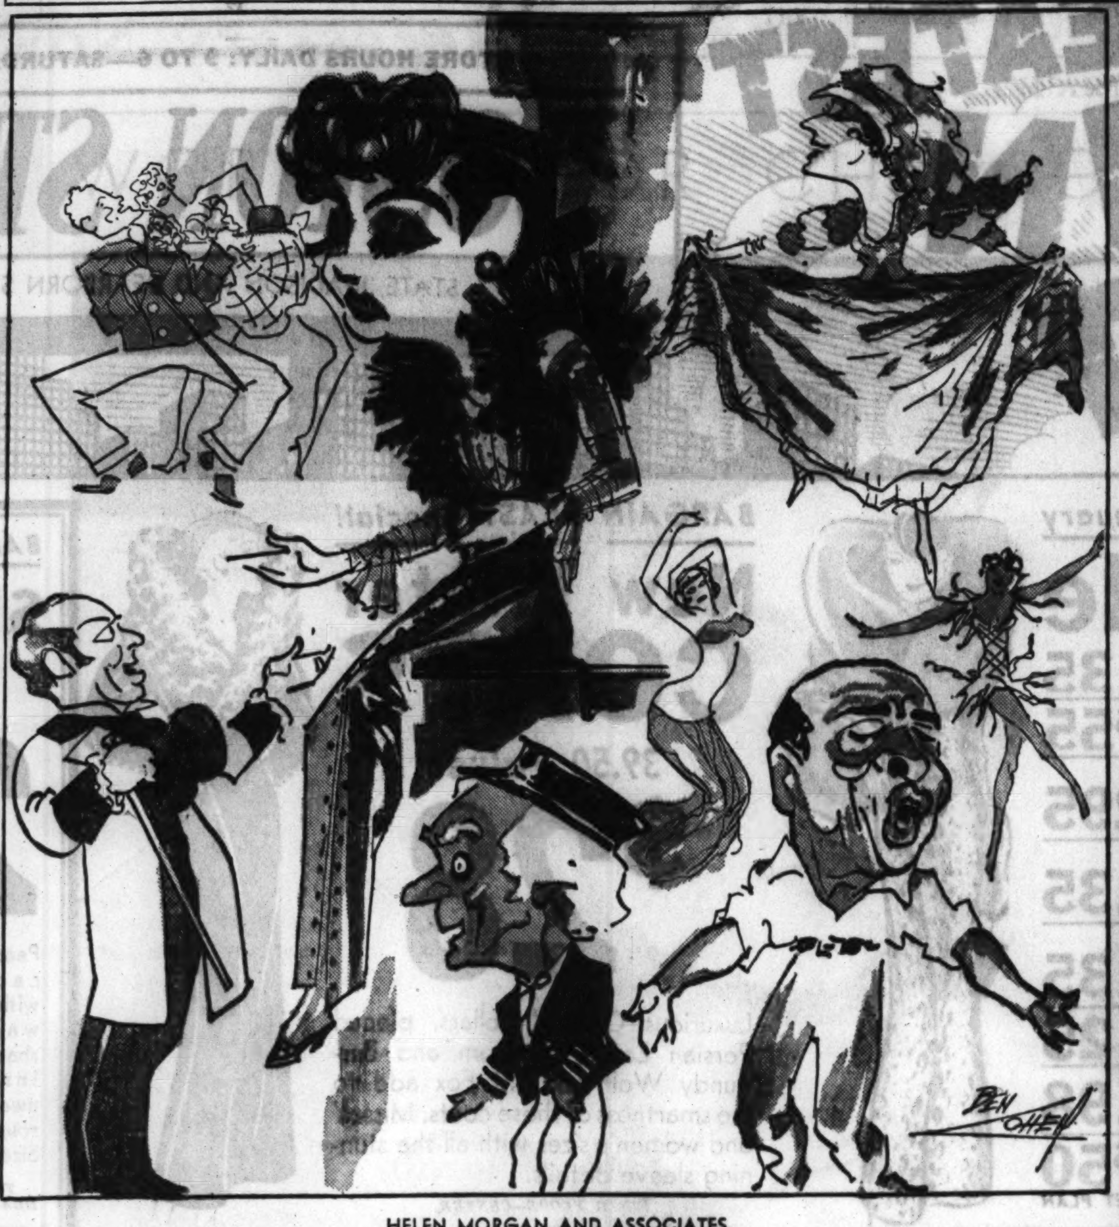
The hotel folk said they would have o read the script first, and after reading the script they said they couldn't o it because there was a situation in the play in which a violation of the aw was condoned.

"O," said Mr. Beckhard, "you mean he lecturer and his secretary occupy he same room?"

"O, no," said the hotel man, "we mean the scene in which a bellboy supplies the secretary with a bottle of liquor."

So the liquor scene was rewritten to absolve the hotel and the hotel folk completely furnished the room in which the violation of a couple of other laws goes merrily on.

Crew of "Show Boat" Revival



HELEN MORGAN AND ASSOCIATES.
[Sketch by Ben Cohen.]

Helen Morgan, star of the revival of Ziegfeld's "Show Boat" production, now at the Auditorium theater, is depicted here in a characteristic attitude—perched on a piano and sadly singing a lament about a recreant lover named "Bill." Others in the sketch, beginning upper left and glancing down and around to upper right, are: Harland Dixon and Peggy Cornell; Paul Keast as the gambler; William Kent as Cap'n Andy; Robert Raines as the "Old Man River" singer, and Margaret Adams as Magnolia.

SOMETHING new in stage technique, adapted from the movies, is to be found in "The Cat and the Fiddle," now at the Apollo theater. This feature is involved in the smoothness of the unfolding story and the celerity with which the production runs, with pauses that are hardly more noticeable than the fade-in and fade-out of the cinema.

Fifty men swarm over the stage and clamber through the "fly galleries" in the intermissions between the sixteen big scenes of "The Cat and the Fiddle." Battens and set pieces flit up to the lofty gridiron, while others are lowered into place on the stage floor to bring about the transformation of scene in a few seconds. So "The Cat and the Fiddle" presents the paradox of having more stagehands in its crew than actors in its cast, which numbers thirty-five. The production requires three 70 foot baggage cars for transportation.

One of the charms of this operetta is its perfection of movement. It slides from one scene to another with the fluency of the cinema. There are no halts to permit a chorus to be dragged on the stage; in fact, there is no chorus. There is no break in the story to allow the composer to wedge in one of his choice numbers. Fortunately for Jerome Kern's music it is in the air all the time, floating up in a piano duet, resolving into two or three part song, climaxing in an ensemble, identifying itself with the plot with such skill that the music itself becomes the plot.

The device of using characters who are musicians was employed in René Clair's "Sous les Toits de Paris," where the chief actor was a song writer who hawked his wares on the streets of Paris, and in several American films the same idea has been used.

Moreover, in this show the kinship with the cinema does not rest solely on its music story idea. The resemblances extend to the staging and to the representation of such ideas as might commonly be supposed to lie outside the physical limits of stage production.

There is, for example, an inescapable touch of the cinema in a fantastic ballet of two dimensional figures which dance before a cardboard orchestra, all moving in the precise and synchronized rhythm of the animated cartoons. The ballet blurs out the forlorn figure of Victor Florescu, who a moment before has received news that the girl he loves has been unfaithful to him, and its antic measures can be taken for a representation of his disturbed state of mind. The transition of mood is definitely in the cinema manner.

Sanskrit Drama

A SANSKRIT play, Bhasa's "Svapnavasavadatta," lost to the world for fifteen centuries until recently discovered in a library of India, was recently given its first production in modern times by the Vassar College Experimental theater at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. The play was this year's contribution to the historical sequence which has been part of the Vassar program for several years and which has included a fourteenth century liturgical drama, a Japanese Noh play, and Euripides "Hippolytus."

Like its predecessors, "Svapnavasavadatta" ["The Dream of Vasavadatta"] was staged and costumed by Vassar students. Vassar faculty and students were of the cast, in which President Henry Noble MacCracken had a leading rôle. Traditional Indian music was played on ancient native instruments by Hindu musicians.

Actress of Promise.

Torch Singer

LILLIAN SHADE.

This attractive entertainer sings the mournful emotional ditties that are called "torch songs" on the vaudeville program at the Palace theater this week.

ROMANCE GETS HARD KNOCKS IN HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(AP)—The announced separation of diminutive Janet Gaynor, wistful star of many screen romances, from her husband, Lydell Peck, was just another blow at romance in Hollywood from a period that has knocked the screenland Cupid dizzy.

The Gaynor-Peck estrangement over clashing temperaments did not come as the surprise that other recent separations brought, their romance having been rumored on a rocky road before since their marriage in 1929, but it capped a glittering climax.

Zazu Pitts, in filing suit against Tom Gallery, started a train of separations that rattled through nearly forty filmland homes.

Biggest surprises have included the divorce announcements of Ann Harding and Harry Bannister, and later of Maurice Chevalier and Yvonne Valee.

Mary Boland

MARY BOLAND, who leads the cast of the musical comedy "Face the Music," at the Grand Opera house, was born in Detroit and made her stage debut at the age of 16 as leading woman in "The Social Highwayman." Then she went with the Pike Stock company in Nashville, Tenn. Since that apprenticeship she has never played anything but leading rôles.

She got her start on Broadway by trying out with hundreds of others for any part in Robert Edeson's play, "Strongheart." Edeson was so impressed with her that, in spite of her lack of experience he not only engaged but featured her. The play proved to be his greatest success, and Mary Boland's beauty and ability became known not only in this country but in London.

While in London Augustus Thomas saw Miss Boland and signed her to appear in his play, "The Ranger." For six years she was leading woman for John Drew, appearing with him in "Jack Straw," "Inconstant George," "Smith," "The Single Man," "The Perplexed Husband," and "The Tyranny of Tears."

At the time of the war she was leading woman for Leo Ditrichstein. Since then the best known of the many plays in which she has starred are "Cradle Snatchers," "Women Go On Forever," "Meet the Wife," and "The Vinegar Tree."

Life Story of Cap'n Andy in "Show Boat"

WILLIAM KENT, who plays Cap'n Andy in Ziegfeld's "Show Boat," now at the Auditorium, is a veteran of the musical comedy stage. His father, in St. Paul, hoped to groom him for a commercial career, but young Kent would have none of it. At the age of fourteen he was already a song-and-dance man, taking parts in little minstrel shows in the smaller Minnesota towns.

Then he worked his way to the Mississippi river and cajoled Capt. Downey McFee, a show boat owner, to let him appear as a juggler, whereupon he wormed himself into small rôles as a general utility actor. In this manner he spent two seasons on Capt. Downey's show boat.

Next, New York City beckoned to him. William Kent and Harry Williams, well known song writer of the day, had been friends, and Harry had promised to send for William as soon as he could get him some work on Broadway. Harry Williams made good his promise and secured for him an engagement with Al H. Woods in "Chinatown Charlie." To return the favor, he helped Harry Williams write the song hit, "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree."

Subsequently, Kent served the late Charles Frohman in "Miss Hook of Holland." Then, for two years, he had comedy parts in St. Louis with the Park Opera company, where Col. Henry W. Savage had tried out Mitzi's vehicle, "Head Over Heels." Savage saw him there and engaged him for his production "Have a Heart."

Next, he was Nora Bayes' leading comedian under Harry Frazee's management, and scored a hit also as the butler in "Battling Butler." For Arthur Hammerstein he played in "Rose Marie." He entered in succession the cast of "The Song and the Flame" and "Somebody's Sweetheart," and the play took him to London, where he stayed fourteen months.

Football is William Kent's favorite sport next to riding horses on his farm in Galesburg, Ill. He plays the violin, trombone and piano, and is also a song writer. For use in the Ziegfeld "Follies" of 1907 by the team of Tempest and Sunshine he wrote "They All Look Alike to Mary," and for Anna Held a song entitled "Turn Those Eyes Away."

Italian Puppets

A THEATRICAL novelty from Italy, called the "greatest marionette show on earth," is appearing in New York in a repertory of variety entertainment, vaudeville, ballets, parodies, circus acts and comic opera.

The members of the company, called the "Teatro dei Piccoli" [Piccoli means "little"] have enjoyed eighteen years of success. Their activity includes three successive seasons in Paris at the Salle Pleyel and the Theatre des Champs Elysees; runs in Naples, Genoa, Milan, Turin, and Rome; and tours through Central Europe, South and Central America, Mexico, Scandinavia, and the near east.

Twenty-eight manipulators, technicians and singers control the pose, gestures and dialogue of the puppets. The costumes number 1,000; the stage settings, 300.

The "Teatro dei Piccoli," whose presiding genius is Vittorio Podrecca, has been praised by Toscanini, Musolini, Eleanora Duse, Mollinari, Maxmillian Harden, Hilaire Belloc, Serafin, Respighi, Paul Hindemith, Hugo von Hofmannstahl, and other European personages. They arrived from Rome, their headquarters and the ancestral home of the marionette art, with eight tons of "properties," including the dolls, many of which stand nearly five feet high.

Hollywood's New Boy.

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters to the Voice of the Fan should be written on one side of the paper only. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope, PLEASE!

In Favor of Joe Brown.

Dear Miss Tinée: Reviewing Joe Brown's pictures, you lapse into the bad habit of repeating a sentence referring to "Sea Lion Sounds."

There is this to be said in his favor. His studio has spent less on his pictures and earned more than on any that they produce. His last cost one-fourth of Cantor's picture and will do about as much. His story cost is always low. "The Poor Nut," Elliott Nugent's story, was done as a silent. It was dug out of the vat dialogue, rights obtained, and resulted in a pretty fair picture.

His next picture is to be the Lardner-Cohan play, "Elmer the Great," previously made by Paramount with Oakie and much used by all stock companies now. Apparently the story cost of this will be in keeping with the times.

Brown has made the name part a stage classic for Henry Duffy's coast companies during the last three years. One scene with pathos which Brown does most effectively reminds me of the quiet acting of David Warfield, a truly great actor—if you ever saw him you know this.

I have seen Brown do this scene at least ten times and his work is a treat to any one admiring good acting. It is finished and effective. Should Le Roy follow the play and catch this scene as Brown played it upon the stage you will see some mighty good acting.

Sincerely yours,
GORDON LAUGHEAD.

Editor's Note: Interesting!

Could Learn from Mickey.

Dear Miss Tinée: I went to see "A Farewell to Arms." Now I know why everybody likes American girls. Catherine's perpetual smile and continual "Darling," "Darling" reminded me more of an escaped lunatic, but I suppose it was just a swell portrayal of an English society girl, and Mr. Hemingway's Catherine WAS one of England's grand old aristocracy, wasn't she?

How these English live by letters of credit is just one more of their fancy ladylike accomplishments, and how this dear, dear Catherine would despise the ladies of the front.

Maybe this is just my humble opinion, but I prefer American girls any day. Mickey could have given dear Catherine some points in original acting.

PLEASE print this as I've never had anything printed.

ROBERT RICHARDSON,
4637 Lake Park avenue,
Chicago.

And a happy New Year to you, Miss Tinée.

Editor's note—You'd better see that picture again. The same to you!

Likes Dolores Del Rio.

Dear Miss Tinée: As a whole, I think you did very well in your choice of "bests" for 1932. However, I was very much disappointed [almost disgusted], not to find Dolores Del Rio among the few who made successful comebacks.

In "The Bird of Paradise" she impressed me as having done the best work of her career. As the native girl, Luana, her beauty, innocence, and simplicity combined to make her the most lovable creature I have ever seen on the screen.

Surely you did not mean to let such a performance go unmerited. I don't remember having read your review of the "Bird of Paradise" and would like to know what you thought of it. I think that the picture was perfectly and beautifully done and the music simply grand. What think you?

Your's most respectfully,
LEE.
[A Del Rio fan thru and thru.]

Editor's Note: An oversight. It was a successful comeback. Thanks for calling my attention to the matter. Come again.

* *

Only a Flash in the Pan.

My dear Miss Tinée: May I say in reply to Florence Marles that the use of many disparaging adjectives does not constitute a laudable argument nor a constructive criticism. What this unobliging lady did was tell us whom she liked and whom she did not like. Those actors whom she disapproved of she glossly maligned; those whom she liked she praised.

The tone of the letter is such that she undoubtedly is addressing, not you, but the public at large. It is because of this fact that I am writing an answer.

By writing such a letter the Miss or Mrs. Marles proves nothing except her own lack of intelligence. Like some of the recent political speeches, it has no real gist and therefore is ineffectual. It is only a flash in the pan.

By Cousin Eve.

MRS. WALLER BORDEN and John Alden Carpenter announced their engagement to marry last Tuesday, earlier than they had intended: Both are vitally interested in the drive for a permanent organization of the Friends of Music. Mrs. Borden organized a new group in Milwaukee on Monday. Their marriage is imminent, and they hope to go abroad for the wedding journey, but that like other plans is yet to be determined.

They are both very happy and so are all their friends. It is an ideal marriage from every point of view. They both have the same interests, many of the same friends, and they have known each other since childhood. Charming, warmhearted, and a delightful companion, Mrs. Borden is fair to look upon, full of enthusiasm, kind.

John Carpenter, besides being a musician, a composer of international note, is a leading citizen of Chicago and a member of an honored family.

Lecture on Astronomy Holds Audience Enthralled.

The best time last week? Definitely it was listening to Dr. Edwin Frost, distinguished astronomer of the Yerkes observatory. He was speaking in the ballroom of the Woman's Athletic club before a capacity audience on the universe we live in. One was amazed to see so many sitting tense in the dark. The stars, after all, are a nebulous subject. But handled by a master this matter became so entrancing that one hardly breathed for fear of missing a word.

The Dantesque features of Dr. Frost, dimly visible in the light from the screen; his clear voice, his matter of fact unfolding of scientific deductions, theories, were more thrilling than any novel. We may not want to hitch our wagon to a star, but it is hitched there notwithstanding. Indeed, we are made of the same stuff stars are made of—carbon, calcium, hydrogen, etc., and not "sugar and spice, and all that's nice." But to be made of star dust is something. At random I seized on ideas new to me—the sun, too, causes tides; the rings of Saturn, so neat, so nice, are made of billions of moons; the picture of formidable Saturn, strange, cold planet one million miles from our sun. Venus, our nearest neighbor, might harbor human life, but Mars, looking like a sliced golf ball, is doubtful. Think of the Martian night at 100 degrees below zero!

This Science Makes Light of Thousands of Years.

There were pictures of sun spots, of a gorgeous solar eruption, black and red, three hundred thousand miles in extent. Magnetic forces between sun and earth and moon are tangible ties stronger and more enduring than if built in the steel mills. And Dr. Frost here explained that a solid bar of tempered steel is mostly holes, holes between atoms. Corona is the charming name for the sun's aura,

WORKING FOR CHICAGO'S PROPOSED TEMPLE OF MUSIC

Miss Marjorie Sawyer Goodman, the debutante daughter of Mrs. James M. Hopkins of Chicago and Lake Forest, is lending her assistance to the Chicago Friends of Music, Inc., and to the junior committee in charge of the reception for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt is to come in Chicago Jan. 21 to lecture that evening on "Politics and Young People," at Orchestra hall, under the auspices of the Illinois League of Women Voters.

Miss Jane Boyce, who, after having lived in Paris for several years, returned to Chicago this fall to be presented to society here by her mother, Mrs. Livingston Fairbank of Paris, is one of the ardent workers for the Chicago Friends of Music, Inc., the organization which is raising a fund of $100,000 to erect a permanent Temple of Music on Chicago's lake front. Like the other young women pictured on this page, Miss Boyce carries subscription pledges for the Friends of Music wherever she goes.

EIDE NORENA GIVES LUNCHEON FOR CHALIAPIN

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Now that the outburst of holiday festivities has somewhat subsided, Paris is resuming the dullest winter socially the capital has seen in many years. The only interesting affair last week was a luncheon given for that internationally illustrious singer, Feodor Chaliapin, and his wife.

The hostess was Mme. Eide Norena, whom we mentioned in last Sunday's letter. She took this occasion to say good-by to some sixteen friends and luncheon guests before sailing for America about Jan. 20 to make her debut in a Metropolitan opera rôle as Mimi in "La Boheme."

Chaliapin kept the party in roars of laughter with one story after another, told with his inimitable mimicry and countless vivid touches. The occidental language which Chaliapin uses most familiarly is Italian, and his wife, watching over his welfare meticuously, as becomes the helpmate of a genius, occasionally helps by interpreting.

The Chaliapin household has ten chilren. One son was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and became an American citizen, and another is a British subject. The present Mme. Chaliapin is his second spouse and they have just returned from the United States.

When Mme. Norena proposed that Chaliapin be given an extra glass of fine old

Miss Jeanine Wingfield, another campaigner for the Chicago Friends of Music, Inc., and also a member of the reception committee for Mrs. Roosevelt, has been a popular figure in the debutante set since she and her mother, Mrs. Murdoch Wingfield, moved to Chicago from California.

Sunny, Warm Arizona Days Lure Visitors to Phoenix

Chicagoans and Other Middle Westerners Find Much to Entertain Them with Riding, Swimming, Motoring in the Mountains, Tennis and Polo.

PHOENIX, Ariz.—[Special.]—With a continued succession of lazy, warm days, and the sun hot enough to give one a thoroughly good and becoming coat of tan, Phoenix and the neighboring winter resorts are fast filling up with persons seeking warmth and sunshine. Fine weather, however, is not the only claim to fame that these popular resorts have, for there is plenty in the way of sports to attract visitors who want to keep busy—golfing, tennis, riding, polo, swimming, dancing, outdoor chess and horseshoe pitching and, of course, plenty of contract.

Almost every morning finds Miss Kathleen Bagley trying her skill on the eighteen hole championship golf course. Miss Bagley is here for the season with her mother, Mrs. Joseph J. Bagley.

The Misses Noel and Florence Cremin, who are here with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Cremin, are also ardent golfers. Mrs. Marie Vose is out riding every morning over the many adjacent trails. She is usually accompanied by Mrs. Farley Hopkins, who, with Mr. Hopkins and their small daughter, has gone in for citrus farming on their delightful ranch.

Deering Davis stopped off recently for a few days of riding. Some of the guests have gone western completely and are spending most of their days practicing calf roping and tying, which requires considerable skill and patience—on the part of the calf as well as the man. The most enthusiastic devotees of this sport are Charles R. Walgreen and J. W. Dort. Of course Jimmie Minotto is always the leader in this sort of thing and Mrs. Minotto an enthusiastic spectator.

Visitors Arrive by Plane.

George F. Harding, Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Chase, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Harrigan, and Miss Jessie Katz recently flew out for their annual visit to the desert and took many delightful motor trips to the various places of historical interest in the valley. Mrs. John W. Gary and her mother, Mrs. Thomas R. Lyon, can usually be found at the pool. Miss Nora Carney, who has returned for the season, is another devotee of the pool. Mr. and Mrs. John E. Kehoe were out for the holidays, but have returned to Chicago.

Recently Philip K. Wrigley, accompanied by his attorney, Paul W. Harper, stopped for a few days. Mrs. William Wrigley has arrived from Pasadena and has opened her home, La Colina Solana (Hill in the Sun). Miss Mary Lou Anderson is occupying her attractive Spanish home and is busy playing hostess to the Chicago colony.

A little further on, entirely surrounded by desert, with Camelback mountain looming in the background, is the residential playground known as Arcadia, a regular Chicago settlement pioneered by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clements and Mr. and Mrs. Loomis Bowes. The homes are mostly of adobe brick in either the Mexican or Spanish style of architecture. Perhaps the loveliest of all is the Jarvis Hunt home with its collection of Spanish antiques. Next door neighbors are the Burridge D. Butlers of Hinsdale, who arrived just before the holidays for the winter.

Across from the Butlers the Harold Hines are ensconced for the winter, while part way up the mountain live the William Grunows and the F.

Light that made a charming picture of the Pleiades started 325 years ago and traveling 11 million miles a minute reached us after telescope, photography, plates, and all had been invented. Taken as it looked before Galileo was born, astronomers have to be patient men to get results. Next a picture of the milky way where a small coin would cover a view of 15 million stars, and there are 40 billion luminous stars in that dazzling celestial boulevard.

The lecturer pointed out a mild little star, plodding at the rate of 100,000 miles a day. He's been traveling for 100,000,000 light years, and if he keeps on will probably get somewhere. Then came suns, two or three million times as large as our orb of day, and only 30,000 light years away. Like a swarm of bees they were, and all operating under the same natural law.

Delightful galaxies of stars flashed on the screen. The exquisite spiral of Andromeda, only 900,000 light years away. Rushing wildly towards us and whirling rapidly is this gorgeous galaxy. Will it envelop and forever wipe out our depressions and our booms? Or will it slither away, a majestic sweep of brilliant stars, ten thousand million times greater than our own poor little galaxy, modestly rotating round a sun that is not so hot any more?

Sitting at luncheon later, rather shaken by this superb lecture and the pictures shown, I was staggered to hear a friend say that she did not agree with Dr. Frost about "light years." Fancy having an opinion on light years! Women are so strong minded these days.

Illinois' First Men Were Called Negroids.

Right in the same mood with this story of the stars was another of last week by Prof. Fay Cooper Cole of the University of Chicago. An anthropologist is Dr. Cole. And his was a narrative of early day men of Illinois and earlier cultures, as he called them. Of times anywhere from two thousand to five thousand years since. Before the Indian there walked on our flat prairies and the rich soil along the Illinois river a race of men with long, narrow skulls, negroids.

Dr. Cole made his adventures in central Illinois as thrilling as any in Arabia or Abyssinia. With class students of the university he encamped in central Illinois on a beautiful farm belonging to Joy Morton. Here among the handsomest of mounds, and with Mr. Morton's patronage, skeletons were discovered so old that they fell to dust and ashes in the sunlight. A process was found to save the frail bones, and with them were unearthed strings of river pearls, copper weapons, bears' teeth, pipes, and various implements of stone and clay. Near the Illinois river came up the skeleton of a gigantic musk ox, an animal of the Arctic whose hulk was left when the glaciers receded that marked the ice age.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Isabelle Ingram, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ingram of Oak Park, Ill., to Don W. Heppes, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Heppes of La Grange, Ill. Miss Ingram is a graduate of Miss Choate's school of Boston and of Northwestern university and is a member of Delta Gamma sorority. Mr. Heppes is a graduate of Northwestern and is a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schwartz of Winnetka, Ill., of the engagement of their daughter, Betty Helen, to Paul S. Brown of Wilmette. Miss Schwartz is a graduate of Northwestern university, where she was an Alpha Phi. Mr. Brown attended the University of Illinois.

Joy Morton's "little farm" has 7,000 acres, and had formerly a wide piece of water called Lake Constance, now drained. Here quantities of wild duck were to be found in season, and wild rice. Now corn grows on the rich acreage and many cattle graze in the meadows. And the Indian mounds which lie on high ground near the bungalow are being sliced up like so much cake.

Charming Party for Three Brides.

The eggnog season is now definitely over, and it will be a twelve month, praise be, before we hear "Holy Night, Silent Night" again. One of the New Year's receptions that impressed me greatly was that held at the Fortnightly by Mrs. Henry H. Porter. Going a little early with Mrs. Byron Harvey and sitting behind some palms, we saw the first arrivals in an interesting pageant. Mrs. Porter, herself, in mauve satin, had received a table full of orchids which stood beside her; on the other side an unparalleled display of brides—the three Porter men, Henry, Prentice, and John, having all leaped into matrimony practically at once.

First in line came Miss Mary Porter, then Miss Mary Prentice, then the three charming brides. From our vantage point we saw the earliest guest, a lady nearly 100 years old. In smart costume, with fresh color and much grace she passed down the line, she who was born when Queen Victoria was a bride. And Napoleon had not been gone long. After her a noted lawyer, a great civic leader of more than four score, alert, full of gayety and wit. Then a flock of McCormicks.

One of the brides, Mrs. Prentice Porter, stepped into our retreat, a darling. Slim and smart in a new black velvet frock from Paris, buttoned down the front and touched at throat and wrist with a froth of lace, we admired her first matronly shopping chez Lanvin.

After a while we emerged from our coign of vantage, and there was the ballroom already rather full and some of the people dancing. One or two buffets were spread. And there, behold! the lady who had almost rounded out a century, sitting eating an ice with a ring of cavaliers in attendance. She has within the year produced an excellent book, "Full Harvest." Who among the other ultra-moderns can do as much?

Romantic Story of Love at First Sight.

Another line on New Year's, a new man in town. The Ballard Moores were lunching Ralph Hill of the state department, Washington, who was staying with them. One of those men who have been on diplomatic billets in Paris and Rome and who know "everybody, everywhere," he is an interesting bachelor who gives very distinguished parties in his small house at Georgetown way.

Mrs. Richard Crane's informal tea Sunday afternoon in the family residence, 1550 Lake Shore drive, assembled close friends and a few relations. It was the moment for announcing the engagement of Florence, only daughter of the house, and William Robinson of New York, or Robbie, as they call him.

Very great surprise for everybody and much happiness. Mrs. Crane Chadbourne, an aunt, and Mrs. Cornelius Crane, a young sister-in-law, and members of the Higinbotham family arrived from various points for the occasion. Miss Crane stood with her mother at the tea, and as they came in guests were told that Florence was engaged to the tall, dark haired young man who stood at her elbow.

This might be called a romantic marriage if ever there was one. A young man who circumnavigates the globe in a thirty foot sailboat. En route he stops at Tahiti, meets and becomes a friend of Cornelius Crane, who is exploring the South seas in a schooner yacht. William Robinson goes on his way eventually, here and there, and the other place in the antipodes.

Arrives at the paradisacal island of Bali, loves it. Last summer he came home, turned up at Ipswich to see his seafaring pal, Cornelius V. Crane. Here this modern adventurous young Lohengrin, sailing the oceans of the world in a boat little bigger than a swan, meets for the first time the dream maiden, the tall, blonde sister of his friend. Love at first sight.

Florence Crane is what one might call a poetical girl. Like all the Cranes, she says not so very much. She is charming looking, graceful, thoughtful. She has traveled a great deal, but usually in a certain orbit from Chicago to Jekyll island, to Europe, to Ipswich, where stands the twice built Crane Georgian house, erstwhile Italian. But she loves travel.

Wedding Will Take Place in the Spring.

The marriage will take place in Chicago in the spring and the honeymoon spent in a yacht now being built to encircle the whole of North America. The bride will leave her Lohengrin in Alaska and return to her family until the dauntless explorer emerges from the north.

"Robbie" is the author of a book now in its fifth edition, "Ten Thousand Leagues Over the Sea." He lectures, too.

When Miss Crane was in New York early in December she went with her fiancé for a house party chez Amelia Earhart Putnam. Everybody there was an explorer or an adventurous soul of definite achievement; had done something and was about to do something else. Never a dull moment with flying people—they are always up to something, what?

The Crane house in the Lake Shore drive is one of the most notable in Chicago. Built in Gothic English manner, it would be almost monastic in its simplicity were it not for the glories of sixteenth century Persian carpets and ancient furniture, assembled from old castles, to be looked at respectfully rather than to be sat upon. There was a time when visitors sat heartily upon these needlepoint relics, but ominous creaks and education have preserved these pieces, which are of great historical interest.

Zuloaga painted Florence Crane. He made her a tall, slim figure in white, but did not quite seize her subtle type. Cecil Clark Davis has done a portrait of her to the waist, quite charming.

Mrs. Healy Hostess at Large Luncheon.

One of the large luncheons of the week was Mrs. Paul Healy's at the Woman's Athletic club. Home recently from Paris, Mrs. Healy, who is pretty, smart, and popular in tout Paris, was on the point of moving her household goods abroad, presumably to Paree, when the French reneged. At this same luncheon where there were, I think, eighteen, there was much furor and clamor to have a five thousand dollar visa tax put on American passports, but only from those women who do not go abroad. The globe trotters were very still; in fact, silent.

The luncheon was arranged in that amusing room where the carpet is spotted like a tiger skin and the walls are black, white, and silver; the mirrors engraved with swans. Mrs. Renselaer Cox was there in a good looking French frock bought here—bright blue, thick crêpe with lace collar, cuffs, silver belt, knitted blue tiny cap. Mrs. Scott Durand in flame crêpe; Mrs. Baur with a wee red velvet beret. Mrs. Frank Mulford, Miss Sarah Walker, Mrs. Dudley Rutter, Mrs. Robert F. Hall, Mrs. Phelps Hoyt, and Mrs. Wallace Owen were of this festivity, and a few stayed on for bridge in the long sunny gallery up under the Georgian roof.

It was only a short time ago that Mrs. Patrick Valentine at luncheon said pensively, "What is that queer thing everybody is talking about?" A big man sitting near enlightened us. The word is technocracy. Ah ha, a lecture on the subject, evening of Jan. 25 at Orchestra hall! Howard Scott, founder of the plan, will explain it to all comers and try to make "the world safe for technocracy." The thought of it intrigues.

Also, at Orchestra hall, on Jan. 21, the reception for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, first lady elect, grows hourly in éclat. Consular men are taking out their pretty medals and sashes, and the ladies in charge, namely, Mrs. William Hibbard, Mrs. Strawn, Mrs. Dempster, Mrs. A. A. Carpenter, Mrs. Traylor, Miss Rozet, and Mrs. Charles Dewey, are thinking about the stage set. How shall it be? Shall Mrs. Roosevelt lecture from the center, with the consular corps parted in the middle, according "to protocol," or shall she stand at one side facing this local league of nations and their ladies? But God forbid we should have protocol in Chicago—we've been so happy without it.

There is just a chance Mrs. Roosevelt might stay over [liking us so well] for a grand gala luncheon. Otherwise, all contacts with this tall and brilliant New York woman with the charming voice will be had in the foyer of Orchestra hall after her lecture or at the Dunham supper following.

Goodwins Entertain for Crosleys' Successors.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence N. Goodwin of Lake Forest are leaving soon for Washington. A vanguard of loyal Democrats is sweeping down on the nation's capital, where a new scheme of things is in the making. As a farewell the Goodwins gave a large lunch at the Arts club in honor of the recently arrived commander at Great Lakes, Admiral and Mrs. Wat T. Cluverius. It was an interesting and an amusing luncheon.

The guests of honor are worthy successors to Admiral and Mrs. Walter Crosley, who, in the natural order of promotions in the United States navy, proceeded to leave us last July. Such a rage of popularity surrounded the Crosleys that hardly anybody in Chicago's social pie gave any kind of party without asking them.

On meeting Admiral and Mrs. Cluverius, I saw that another such furor awaited them. Very good looking, terribly nice, full of social experience, charm, what not. The admiral has silvery hair, a rosy sea-weathered face, a merry laugh, and a slim boyish figure. As a raconteur he is a perfect table neighbor. I heard that long ago. The ladies draw lots to see who goes in with him.

His rather unusual name was intriguing and I asked him where he got it. But that is another story, long and compliqué.

Other comparative newcomers at this same party were Mr. and Mrs. McClure Kelley, also of Washington, who have settled with their young family in that quaint town, Geneva. Tall and slender, Mrs. Kelley is by way of being an Italian beauty, midnight hair and eyes, delicately traced features, a starlike face, creamy skin. She was Theodora Catalani, a daughter of Giuseppe Catalani, second counsellor of the Italian embassy at Washington. Her mother was Susan Dimock, a daughter of Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, a social leader of Washington, whose big old house on Massachusetts avenue is always alive with guests and parties.

The other guests at luncheon were Consul General and Mrs. Bernays of Great Britain, Consul General Castruccio of Italy, and his cousin, John Castruccio of San Francisco, Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rinaker, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Hayden B. Harris, Mrs. Rufus Dawes, Donald McClure, and others.

Friends of Music Meet After the Symphony.

After this luncheon I dashed down and heard the grandest concert of the season from Mrs. Waller Borden's box, which was not only overflowing but for once au complet. There was a Chicago Friends of Music meeting set for later in the foyer, and that was as busy a place and as important a gathering as any of the winter. In the box were Mrs. Robert Dunham, a new recruit; Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. George Langhorne, Mrs. Adlai Stevenson, and some charming Poles, one of whom was Buoynowski, a conductor of opera in Warsaw.

Mrs. Borden conducted the meeting in the foyer, calling on various people to speak. I was there only a few moments, but seated near were John Alden Carpenter, Barney Goodspeed, Dr. Stock, Arthur Aldis, Mrs. Charles Dewey, Mrs. Frank Hibbard, Mrs. Silas Strawn, Mrs. Edward F. Carry, Mrs. Jacob Baur and a hundred more. On our way uptown there was an amusing tea at the Arts club; so we stopped in to see Claude Monet's works as shown in the Isabel Wilde collection.

There had not been a tea at the Arts club in many weeks, and it seemed as if the 800 members were all present and all speaking at once. A boiler factory, in fact. I saw only two of Monet's works, a rugged old bridge and some sour looking French apples. But so thick was the jam that to find one's way about was a job in itself.

The new president, Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, was looking very charming in black velvet, and Mrs. Potter Palmer in a small cap, one half of which was red. Mrs. Palmer had a luncheon Monday for Mrs. A. West Movius of Boston. The mother of Mrs. Potter Palmer III. is a vivacious woman, full of life and breeziness of Boston. She will stay on for some time with her daughter, Rose, who is so beautiful that everybody who meets her is bowled over with the beautiful regularity of her features and the pure delicacy of her blond coloring.

Mrs. Palmer had a large luncheon in December to introduce her daughter-in-law to her more intimate friends.

Brewster Home Open to Public View.

On Jan. 20, 21, and 22 Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster are turning 2704 Lake avenue, their town house, into an art gallery. They have one of the finest collections in America of modern French paintings, also bronzes, drawings, prints.

These are being shown by invitation and at a small tariff for the benefit of the Public School Art society, of which Mrs. Brewster is president. The house itself is delightful and a worthy setting for works of Manet, Renoir, Matisse, Picasso, Van Gogh, Cezanne, Gauguin, Whistler, and many others. The showing is from 11 to 6, and one intends going if it takes a limb. The chances to see such a collection are few.

Rain Checks for White House Receptions May Be Necessary Now

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—A prominent clubwoman in the middle west recently received a note from the military aid to President Hoover, telling her that the Hoovers would be happy to have her at one of the formal White House receptions and giving her a choice of three dates. She might attend the reception in honor of the senate, Jan. 24; the reception in honor of the house members, Feb. 2, or the reception in honor of the "various departments," some time the middle of February—I forget the exact date.

This lady wrote to a friend in Washington, asking which party would be the most interesting. The friend replied at once, and with considerable conviction—"take the first one—to the senate—by all means." The letter went on to explain that these parties are frequently arranged—or at least they seem to be arranged—according to the law of diminishing returns, with the most glittering parties at the beginning.

The clubwoman, following the advice, dispatched a note post haste to the aid, accepting for the evening of Jan. 24.

No sooner had she got the note in the mails than President Hoover proclaimed a thirty-day period of mourning over the death of Calvin Coolidge. That cancels the White House receptions for Jan. 24 and Feb. 2. Whether the lady who chose the senate reception will be given a rain check is one of the minor problems of my mind just now.

- While official mourning is only for official Washington, so many social circles at the capital cut into the circle of officialdom that a blue pencil has been run through most of the social calendar for the next thirty days.

The diplomats have canceled any parties they had planned in honor of United States officials. Their interdiplomatic parties will, of course, be given.

Likewise the residential set will go on giving parties, but will not invite any officials as guests. Nor will the names of government officials remain in the patron list for concerts and charity entertainments.

- Washington, with a new leisure on its hands, is busy nevertheless with plans for March 4. Mrs. John Allan Dougherty has been appointed chairman of the inaugural ball. This ball, contrary to the general impression, is not an official event at all. It is a charity dance, given the night of inauguration. Many of the new officials attend. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has announced that she will be there. The incoming President will not be.

The inaugural ball went off the calendar as an official event when Woodrow Wilson took office. The first Mrs. Wilson vetoed it because she didn't want "people doing all those awful dances when Woodrow is inaugurated." In its place a charity dance was given. It proved so popular the custom has been continued.

- The first inaugural ball was held on the first Saturday in March, 1809. A blithe woman in a buff colored gown and a twisted turban of velvet (Dolly Madison, of course) walked into Long's hotel (on the site of the present library of congress) as the band began to play.

Just 400 were at the party. It began at 7 o'clock. About 10 o'clock the chairman asked President Madison if he'd stay for supper. He said he'd be delighted to. Then he turned to a neighbor, whispered wearily:

"But I'd much rather go to bed."

- There was a big turnout for Andrew Jackson's inaugural ball. But the crowd didn't come so much to see a new President as to get a glimpse of Peggy O'Neill, the buxom daughter of an innkeeper. Her marriage a few days before to Gen. Henry Eaton had tossed a bomb into official society.

- The Franklin Pierces, who had seen their son killed in a railroad wreck on the way to the inauguration, had small desire for any entertainment.

- It was a great day for statistics when James Buchanan took the oath of office in 1857. Some 15,000 guests gathered at the National hotel for the ball. They consumed $3,000 worth of wine. The tower of cake was four feet high and there were at least 400 gallons of oysters. The dance lasted until 4 in the morning and maybe that didn't cause gossip!

- Abraham Lincoln and "a short lady at his side in blue and white checkered silk" held their inaugural reception at the old Willard hotel. The dancers tripped across the floor of the "white muslin palace" on Judiciary square, so named from the yards of muslin festooning the walls.

- At Grant's second inauguration the weather was so cold that 2,500 canaries, imported for the festivities, froze to death in the ballroom. The arrangements, which cost $60,000, had neglected the item of heat. The champagne froze solid. There were no taxis to take one home through the blizzard. So hundreds of guests wrapped themselves in furs and sat down on the dance floor to spend a chilly night.

- Mrs. Rutherford B. (Lemonade Lucy) Hayes put her foot down on dancing. Instead of a ball, there was a torchlight procession.

- The Democrats were so tickled when Cleveland took the oath of office in 1885 that they spread themselves on the party. The tickets were $5 apiece. But the decorations were so gorgeous that hundreds of frugal folk who couldn't afford the five went the next night and paid a dollar just to look around at the trimmings and to hear the band play.

- Again the Democrats came in, and the first Mrs. Wilson, as we have told you, was reluctant to have a modern dance made a part of the ceremonies, so a nonofficial dance, for charity, was substituted.

- And the next time the Democrats came in—well, Mrs. Dougherty says the inaugural ball, while not official, will be very gay and glittering.

Winter Season on at Camden

CAMDEN, S. C.—[Special.]—The opening of the Kirkwood here was the signal for the beginning of the season. The Camden Hunt, of which Mrs. Martha Partridge is M. F. H., is to hold drags on Tuesdays and Fridays. Among the Chicago visitors here are Mr. and Mrs. James R. Walker and Miss L. K. Lindstedt.

Others here include Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Bonsal, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Danforth, Dr. and Mrs. Daniel Fiske Jones and Mrs. William H. Good.

Resthaven to Celebrate 20th Anniversary

Has Offered a Low Priced Convalescent Home to 7,000 Girls and Women.

By Roberta Nangle.

MEMBERS of the 22 auxiliaries of the Resthaven Home for Convalescents will meet tomorrow at the Standard club at a luncheon party which will be a belated celebration of the twentieth year of the home. Resthaven really reached its twentieth birthday last September, but tomorrow's meeting will be an official observance of its entry into its twenty-first year of existence.

Since it was founded in 1912 the members of the board of Resthaven have recorded the care of more than 7,000 women and girls, some of whom were thought by their doctors to have no chance whatever of being nursed back to normal health.

The majority of the cases which would have been hopeless without the opportunity for proper convalescent care at Resthaven left the home entirely cured and capable of useful occupations. There is no time limit to the stay of any of the Resthaven patients, the average stay during its 20 years of existence ranging from two weeks to two years.

Medical Facilities.

The home maintains a medical staff, medical supervisor, two attending physicians, a dentist, and several leading physicians who attend on call. The services of the entire staff are free to patients, the doctors donating their services to the home. A superintendent, aided by an assistant and trained nurse, is in constant attendance. Laboratory tests are given at the home, thus saving the patients a trip to a clinic or dispensary.

Patients come to Resthaven from all of the Chicago hospitals. They are persons who cannot afford to remain in hospitals during the necessary period of convalescence. The rate per capita per day at the home is the lowest of any home in the United States. It has never exceeded $2.08, while hospital care per day, according to the last report, is $6.88. The cost last year of maintaining Resthaven was $51,792.35.

Founded in 1912.

Sarah Greenebaum lodge, No. 16, of the United Order of True Sisters, now Resthaven lodge, No. 16, founded Resthaven in 1912, after investigating hospital conditions and finding urgent need of a home where women and girls unable to return to their positions or home duties after dismissal from hospitals might be given convalescent care. The first home, with a capacity of nine beds, was at Madison avenue [now Dorchester] and 55th street. These small quarters were soon outgrown and the home moved twice before acquiring its present quarters at 1919 Prairie avenue, with the facility of caring for 82 patients.

Miss Lily Seltzer is co-chairman with Miss Delphine Friedman of a premiere talking picture showing and dance to be given next Sunday at the Congress to benefit charities of the David M. Grodsky Junior Aid.

There is no place in the state of Illinois for convalescent men or boys, and the board of Resthaven hopes to open a small number of beds for their care in the near future.

Resthaven is supported entirely by contributions obtained from its friends through the members of its 22 auxiliaries. It is indorsed by the Association of Commerce and recognized and used continuously by the Jewish Charities of Chicago. Mrs. Ralph J. Sherman has been chairman of the board of Resthaven for 18 years.

Schnackenberg, chairman of the subcommittee of the Illinois commission on taxation and expenditures, and E. O. Miss Alice Roullier, one of our best known and inspiring speakers on etchings and prints, will be the guest of the art committee of the art and literature department on Wednesday at 11. Her talk will be illustrated by a small but most select and rare group of etchings and prints, such as Rembrandt, Durer, etc.

First Glimpse of Annual Show by Artists of Chicago and Vicinity

Modernists Outnumber Conservatives on Prize Awarding Jury of Exhibition

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE most important event of last week was the opening of the exhibition of works by artists of Chicago and vicinity at the Art institute. A hasty preview without a catalog does not make the best preliminary to a considered discussion of the show, so this week we shall limit ourselves to the list of prize awards and whatever chance comment strikes us as worth utterance as we go leisurely along.

The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and purchase prize of $750 was awarded by the Art institute committee on paintings and sculpture (I understand) to Francis Chapin, who acted as one of the modern jurors for the exhibit for "Pink House," rather a hit-and-miss, unsubstantial piece of painting.

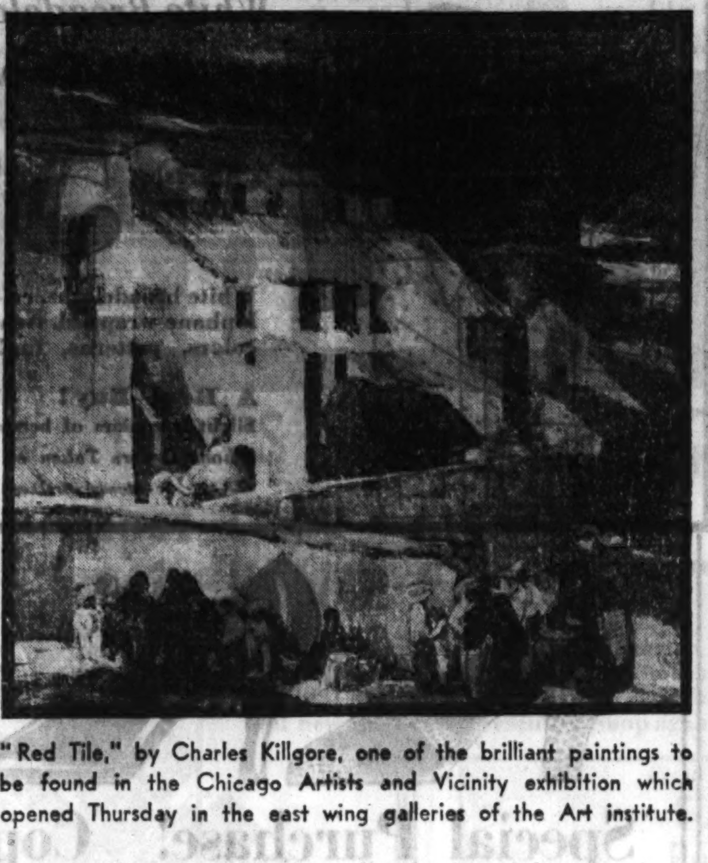
The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan prize of $500 was awarded by the combined juries which selected the show, that combination of juries in which the conservative element was outnumbered two to one, to "Long Haired Cactus," by Laura Van Pappelendam.

The interpolation might be made here that, with the exception of the Municipal Art league prize of $100 for portraiture, which was awarded to Karl A. Buehr for his "Portrait of Arthur Cummings Jr.," by a Municipal Art league jury of award, all the following prizes were given by the combined jury of nine members in which the modern element predominated to such an extent as to make an unbalanced jury and one which in its actions was unfair to the conservative painter.

Jean Crawford Adams Wins Prize of $300.

The Mr. and Mrs. Jule F. Brower prize of $300 was given to Jean Crawford Adams for "Winter with Flowers." The William Randolph Hearst prize of $300 was awarded to Olga Chassaing for "Portrait." The William and Bertha Clusmann prize of $200 was awarded to Jan Fabian for "Crucifixion." One might do well to pause here and consider that Mr. Clusmann, the donor of this prize, was a serious, sober, and conservative man, and, as it was remarked last week, if he knows where his prize is going each year it is enough to make him turn in his grave. The present award is another affliction for him to bear.

The Joseph N. Eisendrath prize of $200 was awarded to Boris Gilbertson for "Philosopher." The Harry A. Frank prize of $150 was given to Constantine Pougialis for "Two Girls." The Clyde M. Carr prize of $100 for a meritorious work in landscape was awarded to Aaron Bohrod for "Street." The Chicago Woman's Aid prize of $100 was awarded to Rifka Angel for "Circus Scene." The Robert Rice Jenkins Memorial prize of $50 was given to Robert Joy Wolff for "Portrait of a Young Girl."



"Red Tile," by Charles Killgore, one of the brilliant paintings to be found in the Chicago Artists and Vicinity exhibition which opened Thursday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute.

From the list on my table there are apparently two awards yet to be made. The one is the gold medal of the Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors and the other the Municipal Art league purchase prize of $200.

The sculpture in this year's exhibit is the weakest and worst we have had in years. Seemingly, if one must pass a jury today, one must fashion something long drawn-out and thin or fat and chubby, with Chinese bulk and impassivity of feature. The full size nude of a child (is it boy or girl?), a most repulsive negation of sex haunts it, is the outstanding atrocity in this division of the show. The present decadence of art has been rarely more aptly illustrated than in the Chicago sculpture and in the prize award pictures.

Where have our standards gone and where may be found a clear judgment of values? How it is possible for those who stand for the negligible and careless work today that passes by the name of "modern" to tie these feeble efforts to the great names of Giotto, Ingres, Delacroix, El Greco, Corot, and the others is beyond the comprehension of ordinary intelligence. Yet they do, these moderns, claim spiritual brotherhood with the lustrous names of the past, and if their claim is questioned throw the questioner into the outer limbo of those who cannot understand.

There are, however, in the current exhibit many fine paintings in which sane taste will revel. These will be brought forward by name in next week's story.

Pair of Interesting Shows at Arts Club.

The Arts club offers an interesting pair of exhibitions during January. Early landscapes by Claude Monet hang in one gallery and examples of early American folk painting from the Isabel Carleton Wilde collection hang in the other. The Monet landscapes are colorful and possess historic interest, as the painter is undoubtedly a figure of note in the art of the last hundred years. I would be willing to wager, however, that if the Monet paintings hung without the glamour of his name attached to them and landscapes by our Chicago painter, John F. Stacey, hung alongside, nine out of ten persons would find greater beauty and more finished work and an equal radiance of color in Mr. Stacey's landscapes.

This was brought home forcibly last week when from the Monet show, carrying with me the memory of those rose-piled rocks and hills and stacks, I went and by chance saw a canvas of Mr. Stacey's painted in the same part of France where Monet had painted. Why there is blindness to the worth of men living in our own day and city is another puzzle yet to be unraveled.

The early American pictures are quaint and curious and oddly attractive. They are limited, of course, but fascinating. It is a pity that they can be so easily copied and followed. Without a doubt we shall shortly be deluged (already there have been many) with a flood of 1933 primitives, the output of the venturesome modern, and told (if a voice is raised against them) to look at their naïve freshness, etc., etc.

News of Chicago Art and Artists.

G. A. Micheli, a young Chicago painter, is showing a group of interesting studies of Chicago by night and day in the Allerton House gallery. The "Sunday" and "Skyline at Sunset" are particularly lovely. The "Water Carnival" is animated and colorful.

A group of paintings by Louis Icart may be seen in the O'Brien gallery, 673 North Michigan avenue. They are startlingly large and white with points of effective color at strategic intervals. "Les Visions Blanches," visions in white, is a true descriptive title, as these girl portraits are spectacularly visionary, gracious, and romantic.

The Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue, opened on Wednesday an exhibition of paintings and sculpture by the Oak Park group, which includes Charles W. Dahlgreen, Edward T. Grigware, Holger W. Jensen, Carl R. Krafft, John T. Nolf, Oscar D. Soellner, John A. Spelman, Emory P. Seidel, James Topping, and Ellsworth Young.

"The Ten," Chicago modernists, including Frances Foy, Jean Crawford Adams, Charles Biesel, V. M. S. Hannell, Flora Schofield to replace George Josimovich, Frances Strain, Emil Armin, Fred Biesel, Emile Grumieaux, and Gustaf Dalstrom, are holding their annual exhibit in the Marshall Field gallery. It is a hard show, much like that of last year. One wishes for a bit of mellow craft and a little less decision in their views upon the abstract. Charles Biesel's boat adrift in the gray seas is a relief, and so are the delicate portraits by Frances Foy.

Another Chicago artist to have had work accepted in the current Corcoran gallery show in Washington, D. C., is François R. E. Noga, who has frequently exhibited at the Chicago Art institute.

Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, 2704 Lake View avenue, is opening her beautiful house with its interesting collection of paintings to the public on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, Jan. 20, 21, and 22, from 11 to 6 o'clock, charging an admission fee of $1.50. The money is for the benefit of the Chicago Public School Art society, which is badly in need of support. This is an opportunity which should not be lost, both to help the work of the society and to see one of the loveliest houses in Chicago.

Titled English Folk Flock to Gotham Shores

Three British Peers and Several Noblewomen Are Visiting in America.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Not even the fact that Gothamites no longer are blessed with the superfluity of wealth that was once theirs can interfere with the entente cordiale that exists between New York and London.

It was, we recall, the late Mrs. F. Saxham E. Drury, born Mabel Gerry, who first began to give London society the idea that New York's best set was a "bit of all right."

Mabel had every one flocking to her Mayfair home, and soon had London's best and New York's worthiest beaming on each other. So much so that visits back and forth became the thing, with London looking towards Palm Beach in the winter rather than Switzerland and the Mediterranean.

New York society may not be able to entertain visiting English folk as extravagantly as in days of yore, but that fact does not seem to keep the titled ones from coming over. At present the town is full of British noblemen and women, not to mention quite a few European personages. No less than three English peers are in our midst, and all three are bachelors. Strangely, though, there doesn't seem to be any indication that the trio are in search of the once lengendary American heiress.

* *

Earl Visits Noel Coward.

The earl of Amherst, noted as Jeffery Holmesdale, once a Gotham news man, is back in the midst of the social intelligentsia, the guest of his pal, Noel Coward, in the latter's Sutton place apartment. Amherst is keen on Coward's newest dramatic venture, with Lynne Fontaine and Alfred Lunt, and followed the company on its pre-New York showings in Cleveland. Jeffery knows New York better than most of its inhabitants and pries into the furthermost corners with the avidity of a fiction detective poking about Limehouse.

Another earl in our midst is the young man bearing one of the most famous names in English history—Warwick. From all accounts the earl of Warwick has come to these shores to forget his sad romance with Margaret Whigman, the most publicized girl in English society, who broke her engagement to the descendant of the "kingmaker" to marry Charles Sweeny, the young New York golfer who resides permanently in London. The wedding is set for Feb. 22.

However, from what I have seen of Lord Warwick about town, he hides his broken heart very nicely and seems to enjoy the parties he attends, and even has time to admire other ladies. He was certainly attentive to Clare Booth Brokaw—but then, who can blame him?

* *

Title Goes Back to 1606.

The third of the bachelor noblemen bears even a higher title than the other two. He is the marquess of Lothian, whose title dates back to 1606, owns Newbattle abbey near Dalkeith, and is undersecretary for India in the MacDonald cabinet. Lothian arrived recently on the Aquitania and has not yet had much time to get about New York.

So, with two earls and a marquess in our midst it is only proper that there should be a duke, and there is one here, the duke of Sutherland, who is staying with Willie Rhinelander Stewart in the latter's Park avenue home. Certainly the upper reaches of the British nobility are well represented in town.

There is also at present in our midst a Lady Dudley, widow of the earl of Dudley, but certainly more easily recalled as the Gertie Miller of the London Gaiety some twenty years ago. Lady Dudley has been twice widowed since she married the late Lionel Monckton before becoming the countess of Dudley. Incidentally Mayfair gossip has it that when the viscount and Thelma Morgan Furness are divorced, the shipping magnate will ask Lady Dudley to become his viscountess.

* *

Will Get a Divorce.

It is certain that Thelma Furness wants her divorce and is going to get it, with great gobs of alimony. And that will make Thelma happy. The Morgans have never had too much money. When Thelma married "Junior" Converse, the black visaged "Junior" was always strapped, and after she divorced him he was more so. His last wife, in applying for freedom without alimony, insisted she did so because there wasn't any chance of getting alimony. Junior hadn't any money.

Even Sister Gloria, in marrying Reggie Vanderbilt and being widowed, discovered she had not too much of worldly goods. The trust fund is for her daughter, Gloria, but Reggie left little to his widow.

With both Thelma and Gloria on their own, New York and London expect that a perfect salon will come out of the sisters' reunion. Both are lovely, well liked, and with money will bring about an international set that will lead in London, Paris, and Gotham.

When Chicago Was Young

Mid-Victorian Days in the Mid-Continent

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, October 27, 1881.

DEAR JULIA: The art exhibition held in connection with the annual exposition on our lake front here has just closed, and I am feeling quite lost, for I did enjoy going in to view the lovely paintings which have been shown there. Chicago is really becoming quite an art center and there were many fine things in the exhibit this year.

I like the work of Augustus St. Gaudens so much. Then we liked Thomas Moran's "Cliffs of Green River," which sold to some Chicagoan—I don't know who bought it — for a thousand dollars. F. Hopkinson Smith's painting, "Matanzas," had many admirers, and Will and I were among them. I am hoping to have a Hopkinson Smith picture for Christmas, for I noticed that Will drew me out on the subject of my preference. He is the most transparent old dear possible. I pretended not to see what he was about, but I am almost sure I know what he intends to buy for me. He couldn't please me better.

Bruce Crane's "On a Quiet River" was another picture we liked. H. E. C. Peterson, the painter who did Martha's portrait, is again in Chicago, painting away busily, for he has many commissions. He asked me to call at the studio and see some of his work recently finished and I want to do so. He tells me he is to go soon to South Hadley, Mass., where he has much work waiting for him. He is even more appreciated in the east than here, I think. I feel proud we have an example of his work.

Do you hear a great deal of talk about antique furniture in New York? Some young ladies calling on Martha yesterday were full of chat about it. They had spent the summer abroad, a good deal of the time in England, and they said London society people are crazy over anything that is old—medieval, especially. No matter how ugly the shape, how poor the design, how rough the finish, it is desirable if it is old. There are catchwords, according to these girls, which every one who wishes to be thought cultivated takes up. "Botticellian," "Elizabethan," "Peruginian" are some of these I recall.

I imagine they hardly know themselves what they mean. Rather silly and affected, it all seems to me. Will quotes from the new Gilbert and Sullivan opera, "Patience," which has been playing here this week:

"If you're anxious for to shine in the aesthetic line, as a man of culture rare,
You must get up all the germs of the transcendental terms, and plant them everywhere.
You must lie upon the daisies and discourse in novel phrases of your complicated state of mind,
The meaning doesn't matter, if it's only idle chatter of a transcendental kind.
And every one will say,
As you walk your mystic way,
'If this young man expresses himself in terms too deep for ME,
What a very singularly deep young man this deep young man must be!'"

And,

"Though the Philistines may jostle, you will rank as an apostle in the high aesthetic band,
If you walk down Piccadilly with a poppy or a lily in your medieval hand."

Well, we're not likely to have such "deep young men" here in Chicago, for they are all too busy for the "aesthetic craze," but I imagine the young ladies will enjoy toying with it. Another craze which is sweeping over the city—happily a little more sensible than that of the lily and poppy—is the bicycle. We have had these here, but I have noted a great increase in the number lately, and Martha had a letter from an eastern friend yesterday telling of a brother of hers who had just made a record breaking trip on his wheel. He rode from Boston to Bangor, Me., in four days last week. The first day he made 56 miles (from Boston to Portsmouth); the second, about the same, 52 miles (to Portland); the third, to Augusta, 55 miles, and the last day, to Bangor, in trying to reach his destination he went 74 miles.

I don't think it is good to strain one's strength in that way. I think he might have gone on the train, which would have taken him much more quickly. But these young people are always trying to make records.

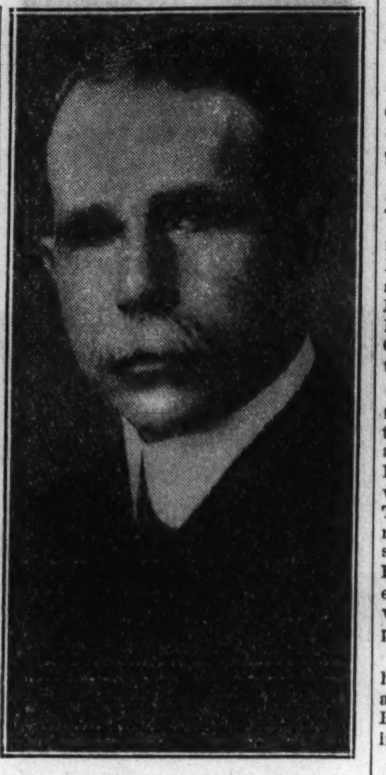
I must tell you of a funny mistake a lecturer in our church made last night as he recited the story of his vacation out in the Rocky mountains. He used a magic lantern and the talk was really very good. As we were gazing on a picture portraying a precipitous trail in the Rockies, the lecturer said, quite without realizing how it sounded to us: "The roads up this mountain are too steep and rocky for even a donkey to ascend, so I did not attempt to climb them."

Martha stuffed her handkerchief into her mouth in an attempt to stifle her mirth, and a little ripple ran around the room, which I hope the poor young lecturer did not hear.

Joseph Jefferson, the great character actor, has been here the last week and we have attended the theater twice, something we don't often do, but we wanted to see him as Rip Van Winkle and also as Bob Acres. I have seen him before, but he always delights me.

They say he is fond of painting and that when the theatrical scenery is taken out of the baggage car where it is carried he sets up his easel there in the empty car and paints away to his heart's content. One would think his own art would be quite enough to satisfy him, but he says this is a rest to him.

Martha wants me to tell you of the wedding of her friend, Miss Carrie Hutchinson, daughter of Charles Hutchinson, of the firm of Sweet, Dempster & Co., which took place last night at the Hutchinson residence, 3011 Prairie avenue. Martha adores the lovely bride, and young Mr. Ryerson is such a fine fellow, it seems an ideal marriage.



Martin A. Ryerson, mentioned in today's "When Chicago Was Young," was one of Chicitizens. The Ryerson galleries of the Art institute contain many remarkable works of art which the Ryersons collected.

They were married on the groom's twenty-fifth birthday. He is a Harvard man of the class of '78 and has studied abroad. They say he has with all his business talent a great deal of artistic taste, and that he has collected some fine paintings.

They are to stay at the Grand Pacific hotel for a time, I believe. We called there yesterday on our young friends, the Frederick Greeleys, who held their first "at home." It is quite a popular place for those who want to wait a bit before deciding on their future home.

I think I have told you all our news,

"And so to bed."

Lovingly, your old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Footnotes.

"Patience," from which Will quoted in the letter of today, was produced first at the Opera Comique, London, April 23, 1881. It soon found its way to America and delighted Gilbert and Sullivan addicts, who were still humming tunes from "Pinafore."

Mr. and Mrs. Martin A. Ryerson, whose marriage Martha records in today's letter, have been among the most generous friends of the Art institute of Chicago. With the late Charles L. Hutchinson (not related to Mrs. Ryerson's family, but a congenial friend) he helped to make the institute the great art museum it now is. At the time of his death, Aug. 11, 1932, Mr. Ryerson was honorary president of the Art institute. He was president of the board of trustees of the University of Chicago almost from its beginning until 1922, when he retired.

Village Yesterdays.

"I don't know how it is, but every year about the time when nature begins to tint the trees and bushes with brown and gold and red, and a gray-blue haze hangs over hallow and hill and you can hear the breeze whispering in the corn rows I am seized with an impulse to desert the asphalt streets and brick walls of the city for my native Ohio. Somehow, I can never forget its smiling hills and green meadows.

"Now I am recalling my trips into 'Old Stony Lonesome,' near the quaint and ancient village of Somerset, in Perry county, in company with companions of my youth, most of whom have passed over the great divide. 'Stony Lonesome,' so named by us boys, was a particularly fascinating place. It was a dark, gloomy, stony lane extending into an almost deserted section of country, for a distance of perhaps three miles, and was rarely invaded except by those in quest of adventure. For this reason it abounded in wild creatures, nuts of all kinds, persimmons, berries of every variety, and wild grapes.

"About midway of its length stood a deserted cabin, adjoining which was a remnant of a once magnificent orchard, which still afforded us delicious fruit of almost every variety. The days spent here by those who were so fortunate must have been cherished by them throughout life.

"And the buttermilk out at Aunt Mary's, near Brownsville, in Licking county! I am a barefoot boy, sitting on the flagstone that leads down to

The old spring house in the cool, green gloom
Of the willow trees and the cooler room,
Where the swinging shelves and the crocks were kept
Where the cream in a golden languor slept.

"And I am drinking buttermilk from a gourd! O, such buttermilk! With flakes of sweet, yellow butter as big as a dime floating on top. The production of such deliciousness is now a lost art. C. W. MAINS."

MISS GERRIE ROSENTHAL.

Outdoor School for Boys.

On the eastern slope of Camelback mountain is the Judson School for Boys, a typical western out of door school. Craig Long, son of Mrs. H. E. Long, and Charles Carmichael, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Carmichael of Glen Ellyn, are among the boys attending school there.

In Phoenix itself numerous Chicago families are making their home for the winter. Miss Beverley Bartlett is attending Westlake School for Girls in Los Angeles and spent the holidays with her mother. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fleming, with Mrs. Fleming's mother, are leaving for Chicago after spending the holidays here. Both the Flemings and Mrs. Lynch are inveterate riders and recently entertained with a moonlight ride and desert picnic.

Among others spending the winter here are Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Larson and their small daughter, Mrs. George Edward Meyer, and Mrs. M. B. Dickinson.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gillespie (Catherine Thorne) are now living in Phoenix and are taking an active part in the social life of the community.

A short ride through citrus groves and beautiful desert country takes visitors to the little city of Chandler, twenty-three miles from Phoenix. Golf on a sporty course is a favorite pastime with midwesterners there.

Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, and Mrs. Lowden for the last nine seasons have occupied the same bungalow. They will arrive in Chandler within three weeks to take up their 1933 residence.

Judge Kenesaw Landis, czar of big league baseball, spent his first winter here in 1932 and he is expected to arrive for the remainder of the season about Jan. 20. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Landis.

Recent arrivals from Illinois are Mr. and Mrs. Ira C. Darling of Kenilworth and Mr. and Mrs. John Levis of Chicago.

EIDE NORENA HAS LUNCHEON FOR CHALIAPIN

Napoleon brandy, the singer's wife signaled the hostess that he had had enough and that a few more sips would keep him telling stories all afternoon.

Chaliapin says that when he makes love as a baritone on the stage he is "unmoved," but he observed in irresistible broken English, "When I meet pretty ladies in a dark corridor I feel tenor."

Chaliapin, after clamoring for more brandy, which he did not get, said one sip of famous cognac made him feel like a knight of Kansas City and then he warbled part of a ditty which contains chiefly a string of names of southern and western American towns and ran through "Tulsa, Houston, Chattanooga and Colorado Springs" with a mock heroic air that produced fresh uproars of laughter.

Sings in New Talkie.

He is keen to see what sort of reception his singing in the part talking film, "Don Quixote," will have when given in Paris for the first time, in February. He sings four songs in the picture and said he found the film work very interesting. He is leaving next week for an extended concert tour, including the Riviera, Egypt and Palestine.

Several Americans were luncheon guests at this party for Chaliapin, among them Livingston Fairbank of Chicago.

Mrs. Dorr Bradley is among the Chicagoans in Paris. She is making an annual visit of several months, stopping at the Hotel Berkeley. She was the guest of honor at a tea given the other day by Mrs. Owen Aldis, who is postponing her trip to Chicago until later in the winter.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

Saves $2. So Easy! No Cooking!

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in more homes than any other cough remedy, because it gives more prompt, positive relief. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Syrup is easily made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

Instantly you feel its penetrating effect. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm, clears the air passages, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief in severe coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, used for generations for its healing effect on throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Series of Club Openings Mark Florida Week

Beach and Oasis, Two Favorite Meeting Places of Southern Visitors.

PALM BEACH, Fla.—[Special.]—Palm Beach has enjoyed a series of "openings," including that of the restaurant at the Seminole Golf club, the opening of Whitehall, palatial home of the late Henry M. Flagler, which so many Chicago folk now make their home in winter and where the biweekly dinner dances are features enjoyed by Palm Beach society on Wednesdays and Saturdays. The exclusive Oasis club, rendezvous of men bridge enthusiasts and providing living quarters for many bachelors and unattached men, also opened for the season, and on Wednesday the historic Beach club threw open its doors, the restaurant there opening on Friday evening.

Mrs. N. Marshall Seeburg of Chicago arrived to visit her mother-in-law, Mrs. Julius Seeburg of Chicago, at her home on Australian avenue, where Justis and Noel M. Seeburg are also members of the house party. Mrs. Robert F. Zeddis with her children, Robert Jr., Michael, and Ann, also are visitors there from Chicago. They have joined the Sea Spray Bath club.

Mrs. Charles Herendeen of Chicago was hostess at a luncheon and bridge for a group of eight women friends at her Clarke avenue villa on Friday. Gladioli and snapdragons were effective table decorations.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Butler expect to remain in Chicago this winter, according to present plans, having decided not to open their villa on Bethesda lane.

Relatives Visit Tevanders.

Arriving on Jan. 16 to visit Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Nelson Tevander of Chicago at their new villa are their daughter, Mrs. Preston Rowles, and their granddaughter, Miss Ann Rowles of Chicago. Miss Althea Tevander, after spending the New Year's holiday here with them, has returned to the Briarcliff school at Briarcliff Manor, N. Y. The Tevanders are planning to give a house warming soon.

Mrs. Francis S. North of Lake Forest has arrived in Palm Beach to visit Mr. and Mrs. John Cary Spring at Wewoka cottage on the North Ocean boulevard. Another guest at this home is the concert pianist, Clara Rabinovitch.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Bode of Chicago, who motored to Palm Beach last week to attend a reception at the home of Mayor John Shepard Jr., have now taken a villa at 324 Brazilian avenue, arriving with their daughter, Pauline Bode. Miss Bode has lately been very ill and it is for this reason that they have taken a house instead of going to The Breakers, where they have spent several winters in the past. Last winter they were in California. They are members here of the Everglades club, Bath and Tennis club, and the Old Guard society of Palm Beach Golfers.

Dr. C. F. Bassett of Chicago is a late arrival at the Ocean View hotel in Palm Beach. J. N. Mills and Ira J. Morse are other Chicagoans there. Also, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coon of Western Springs and A. H. Carnes of Chicago.

J. Stewart Renwick of Chicago is the guest at Villa Marietta of Mrs. C. H. Randle and her son, Hanson F. Randle of Chicago. Mr. Renwick on a fishing cruise in the gulf stream with Mr. Randle caught what is said to be the largest sailfish caught in Palm Beach this season. It measured 8 feet 2 inches and weighed 78 pounds, giving him a hard tussle before it was landed. Mr. Randle, vice president of the Sailfish club of Florida, took Mr. Renwick out on the Naomi II. with Capt. Frank Fasy.

* *

Entertains at Luncheon.

Mrs. C. H. Randle entertained at a luncheon at the Everglades club for a group of friends on Wednesday. She also has given two dinners this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald M. Henry of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Shepard of Elgin, who are spending some time at Coral Gables, drove to Palm Beach on Wednesday, spending the morning at the Poinciana-Breakers beach and enjoying the bathing in the surf.

Mrs. Walter Scott Leeds and her daughter, Miss Margaret Kohl of Chicago, have joined the Sea Spray Bath club, going up daily for a dip in surf or pool.

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Emery and Miss Jane Emery of Chicago have arrived, opening their villa on Sea Spray avenue for the season. Miss Jane Emery has joined the Sea Spray Bath club.

Mrs. Helen Krakaur and her daughter, Miss Joan Krakaur of Chicago, have also arrived, taking an apartment at Brazilian court for the season.

Wedded

MRS. O. G. ZEMANN.

The marriage of Miss Gladyce Sallows of the De Witt hotel and Mr. O. G. Zemann of 7555 Barton avenue took place on Dec. 24. Mr. Zemann served as aide-de-camp in the world war to Gen. C. E. Boardman.

SOUTH SEA NATIVES TELL FANCIFUL TALE OF AMY JOHNSON'S FLIGHT

To Them She Is a Recalcitrant Daughter Seeking Forgiveness.

By Ann Whittingham.

LONDON.—[Special.]—Not always does a legend come down to us from antiquity. Here is one, very modern, even though it was born amid primitive conditions. It is about Amy Johnson and concerns her crossing to Australia.

Before finally reaching her destination, Amy Johnson was forced to land on one of the Dutch islands in the South Seas, where a missionary-priest was able to give her some help. He afterwards sent an account of the episode to a daily paper published in Java and explained how the story had developed among the natives. As years go on something even better may develop. It runs somewhat as follows:

In a far away kingdom lived a husband and his wife; they were immensely rich and they had one daughter. They forced her to study under the most learned men, so that she became very learned; but when she came home she did not understand well household affairs, and for this her mother scolded her.

Finally she became very angry herself and she ran away. Then she went to a skillful plumber, and the two together made a machine with fire inside of it, and it was to fly in the air. In this she circled above her village and finally landed there to the great astonishment of the people. Her parents, though still angry, were proud of her and her father promised forgiveness if she could fly across the sea and come back safely.

And so she had to fly across the sea and she came to the natives' own island. By which time the fire inside her machine had gone out and she had to put in new fire. And now she still has to fly across the sea, and if she succeeds and comes home again, her father will forgive her and will give her much money, and will build her a house with a roof of corrugated iron.

Could any romantic people weave a tale further from the facts?

Two Stradivari for Sale.

It is not often we have the opportunity of buying two Stradivari, but late in January two of these incomparable instruments are to reach the sales room. The J. W. Nicholson collection of violins, violas, and violoncellos is to be disposed of in Puttick and Simpson rooms in Leicester square.

One Stradivarius was formerly the property of Miss B. Elphinstone and bears the label dated 1714. Since the pedigree of a Stradivarius is as much a matter of science as any old master, it is sold under the guarantee of noted violin experts, Messrs. Hart & Sons and Mr. G. A. Chanot.

The other instrument was formerly bought by Señor Carlos Relvas, a native of Lisbon, at a sale in Paris in 1873, and his son sold it to the present owners, the violin experts, Messrs. Hill & Sons. It later entered the collection of the late John Saunders, whose widow sold it to Mr. Nicholson. It is the only Stradivarius known to have been owned in Portugal.

Other notable instruments to be included in the sale are a violoncello by Giovanni Grancino, 1716, and violins by Amati, G. Ruggeri, D. Montagnana, and C. F. Landolphus.

Historic Horseshoes.

When the Cottesmore hunt met at Oakham recently, a number of the peers of the realm found themselves quite unexpectedly, under a penalty. It was disconcerting even if it was not serious.

Queen Elizabeth started the trouble. She made a decree, centuries past, that every royal personage or peer of her kingdom who visted Oakham for the first time must give a horseshoe to the collection in Oakham's historic old castle. And for centuries the custom has been carried out.

There you will find horseshoes given by Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra, King Edward V., the duke of Connaught, Princess Mary, countess of Harewood, the prince of Wales and all his brothers, Sir John French [the earl of Ypres], and Lord Lonsdale. A shoe from the earl of Cavan's charger which served him in the great war is in the collection, and there is one seven feet high in bronze given by the Prince Regent afterwards King George IV.

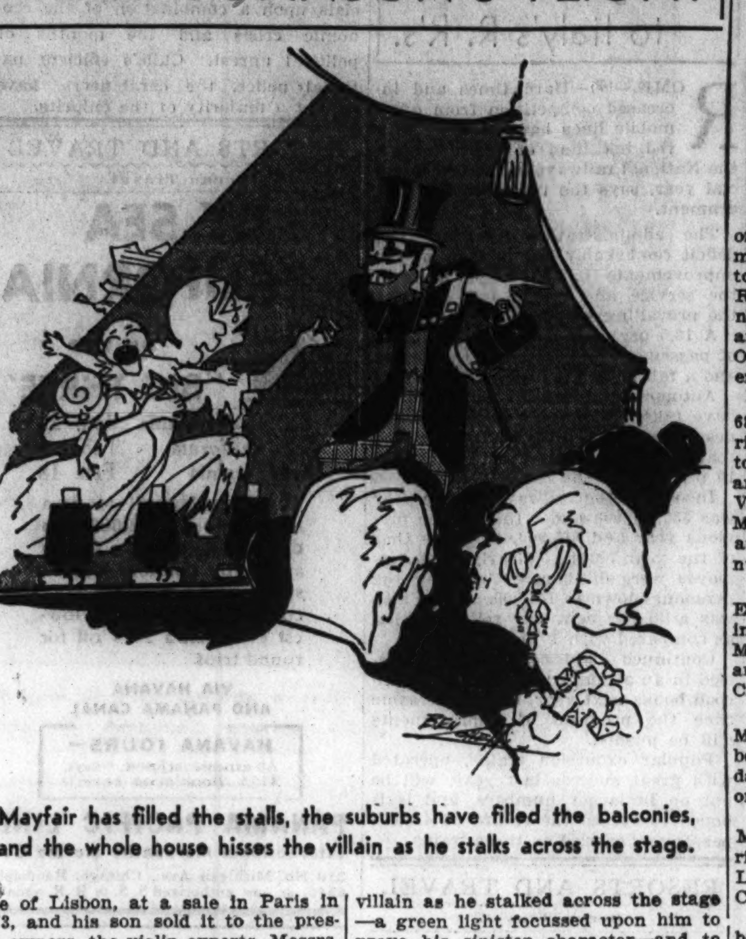
A Villian, Green Lighted.

Society in London is reveling in the melodrama afforded by the current production at the Ambassadors theater of Dion Boucicault's blood and thunder thriller of the 1860's, "The Streets of London."

Mayfair has filled the stalls, the suburbs have filled the balconies, and the whole house has combined to hiss the villain as he stalked across the stage —a green light focussed upon him to prove his sinister character—and to cheer the hero noisily. Three hundred thrills have made the audience weep with laughter.

Gideon Bloodgood, the heartless banker, plotting to rob an honest old salt of his money he has saved for his family; a lady of gentle birth, starving with her children in an attic numbered 19½; a flaming tenement in Drury Lane; three little waifs singing in the snow in Covent Garden; virtue triumphant in the end, after a most complicated plot, with villainy chastened and forgiven. It is a grand show and apparently just what the town needed in this year of grace!

The pantomimes have had their season. They are as beloved of the English as their national heroes, and in the last few years they have improved enough to be a fairly palatable theatrical diet. Stars now appear as the principal boys and enough money is spent on the productions to give the chorus girls silk stockings. But stockings silk or stockings cotton, the English public can't be kept away from a pantomime.



Mayfair has filled the stalls, the suburbs have filled the balconies, and the whole house hisses the villain as he stalks across the stage.

Brazil to Have Divorces.

RIO DE JANEIRO.—(AP)—Divorce in Brazil is probable after the new constitution has been framed, says Oswaldo Aranha, minister of the treasury. He put an anti-divorce plank in the platform of the new republican liberal party, but explained he would not oppose legislation if it can be based on organic law.

Art of 200 B. C. Is Discovered in Lahore Forest

LAHORE, India.—While exploring in Kurukshetra forest, near Lahore, Dr. Sita Ram, curator of the Lahore museum, stumbled upon a number of ancient mounds.

They contained a large number of sculptures, terra cotta statues and other pieces of ancient art. Dr. Ram believes these date back to 200 B. C. Until the coming of the present expedition Kurukshetra forest had not been visited by man for many centuries.

THE TWINS BLURT IT OUT . . . by J. C. Ellis—

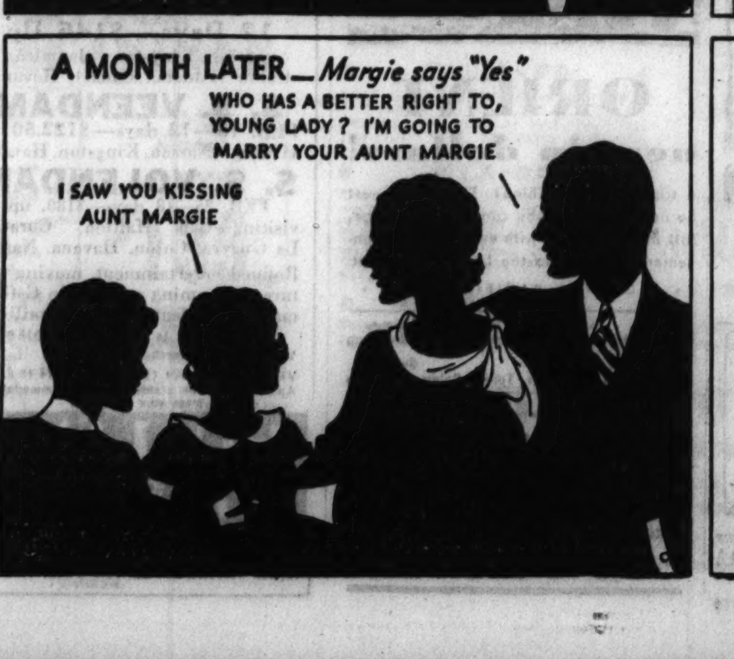
AND, BOBBY, HE'S BRINGING HER CANDY
NEXT DAY
GOING TO TAKE HIM, MARGIE ?
OH, GRACE, I DON'T KNOW. I LIKE EVERYTHING ABOUT HIM... EXCEPT ONE BAD FAULT... A HINT OF "B.O."
WHAT'S "B.O." ?
NEXT TIME HE CALLED
HELLO, TWINS. YOUR AUNT MARGIE IN ? WHY, WHAT'S THE MATTER, BETTY ? YOU LOOK WORRIED
WHAT'S "B.O." ? AUNT MARGIE SAYS YOU HAVE IT
YES, AND SHE DOESN'T LIKE IT
THE KIDS SPILT THE BEANS, ALL RIGHT. BUT THEY GAVE ME A TIP I NEEDED BADLY. LIFEBUOY'S THE GRANDEST TOILET SOAP EVER. BOY, WHAT LATHER! NOT A CHANCE FOR "B.O." NOW



A MONTH LATER—Margie says "Yes"
WHO HAS A BETTER RIGHT TO, YOUNG LADY ? I'M GOING TO MARRY YOUR AUNT MARGIE
I SAW YOU KISSING AUNT MARGIE

Don't fool yourself about "B.O."
(body odor)

A HINT of "B.O." (body odor) is enough to ruin your chances. Yet even on cold days, pores give off a quart of odor-causing waste. Over-heated rooms increase the danger of offending. Play safe—bathe regularly with Lifebuoy. Its pleasant, quickly-vanishing, hygienic scent tells you, "Here is no ordinary toilet soap!" Lifebuoy gives extra protection. Its creamy, searching lather purifies and deodorizes pores—stops "B.O."

Watch skin clear and freshen!

How your complexion responds to Lifebuoy's bland, pore-purifying lather! Loses its dull, cloudy look—glows with new, radiant health.

Try Lifebuoy Free

If you never have tried Lifebuoy, send a clipping of this offer with your name and address to Lever Brothers Co., Dept. L 21, Cambridge, Mass. Two full-sized cakes will be sent you without cost.

Former Kaiser's Relative Holds Job as Waiter

Young Russian Ekes Out a Living in Luxembourg with Other Exiles.

PARIS.—[U. P.]—Penniless, hungry, jobless, Alexander Zoubkoff, one time brother-in-law of the former Kaiser Wilhelm, is anxious to quit the tiny refuge of Luxembourg, where he went when German and French police told him he was an undesirable. Bearing only a Nansen passport, which the league of nations accorded to Russian and other homeless exiles, he must be invited by a foreign government before he can go abroad.

Zoubkoff has in mind the publication of his memoirs and a series of conferences embroidering the romance of his many love affairs, but has insisted that neither the story nor the talks will mention the name of his former royal spouse, the kaiser's sister, Princess Victoria.

* *

Vagaries of Fortune.

The young Russian, who is 31, but who appears aged far beyond his years, has known the vagaries of fortune. When he first came to Luxembourg, he lived in a castle along the Moselle; piece by piece, his property was lost and in recent months he has kept himself from starving by working as a waiter, or dishwasher, in Luxembourg restaurants, as a sandwich man in the public parks, or as a chauffeur of taxicabs.

Today he is jobless, penniless, and looks hungry. His eyes, which won for him many romantic conquests, are as bright as ever, but they stare from a pale and thin face.

* *

Nothing from Wilhelm.

The ex-kaiser will do nothing for his brother-in-law. Zoubkoff tried several times to get word to the kaiser in Holland of his situation and wrote many letters, all of which were unanswered. The ex-kaiser let it be known that he never had approved of the marriage, and that if his sister had made a mistake he, Wilhelm, could not be expected to pay for it.

His own family, while not wealthy, is in fair circumstances and his mother is understood to have promised to pay his hotel bills regularly, so long as he stays in Luxembourg. There were stories in the newspapers that Zoubkoff had gone over Europe on travels and to make speeches, but that is proven wrong by the police records, which show that, except for occasional short trips over the border, he never has left Luxembourg.

Metal Replaces Hair in Pole's Bow for Violin

LONDON.—(AP)—Bronislaw Huberman, Polish violinist, had a new invention to show Great Britain when he arrived here for concerts.

It is a bow with strands of aluminum instead of horse hair.

"Since the revolution in Russia," he explained, "we have had no hair from horse tails, so I invented this."

He added that the aluminum strands, in some respect, give a better tone.

Paradox: Japan Imitates, but It Never Changes

JAPAN is the empire of paradox. And that fact might explain the interest it always holds for the world traveler.

But Japan, always the perfect host, does not stop short with offering the visitor a cocktail of surprises. That is only an earnest of the more substantial refreshment yet to come. And it is these things Japanese that win affection.

Much has been written about the rapidity with which Japan has adopted western ways, electric railways, paved highways, modern hotels, and department stores. Even the great motor liners that bear visitors to its shores have been written about in detail. The fact, too, that all this westernism has come to Japan in a little over a half century has been told. And it's all true. Maybe we are flattered that these orientals have copied so much of us, but if we think that imitation has been at all lavish, or even more than superficial, we do not know Japan. Japan fundamentally is immutable. It never changes.

It is true that what we call its civilization dates from Perry's opening of its ports to world commerce. But Japan was a highly civilized nation long before the Puritan fathers landed at Plymouth, and it is the unchanging fundamentals of that civilization that charm the traveler today.

Strictly speaking, Japan does not imitate at all. It appropriates what it thinks good, and then proceeds to improve and adapt to its liking.

In its large cities Japan has its rows of "modern" shops, but everywhere one sees the artistic oriental touch, in the arrangement of goods, in the dainty Japanese packaging, even in the courtesy of the store's personnel. It would seem that some super sales manager had schooled them in some such slogan as, "Let's sell, but sell so that the selling will be a ceremony."

Wales' Personal Air Fleet Grows to Four Planes

LONDON.—(AP)—A twin seat cabin airplane, with an open cockpit for the pilot, has been delivered to the prince of Wales.

It replaces a faster but less commodious plane, which he sold after having used it for two years.

The new ship, together with an air liner which has been ordered, will give the prince four planes and make his one of the biggest private aircraft fleets in the country.

Turks Flee Mud Storm.

GIRESON, Turkey.—(AP)—Turkish peasants fled to the mosques here when, following months of drought, mud fell for twelve minutes upon the town.

Emil Ludwig Sees Europe on Brink of Another War

BRUSSELLS.—"Europe is on the eve of another war," Emil Ludwig, famous German biographer, declared when he passed through Belgium recently.

"There is war danger ahead of us," Ludwig warned, "unless some sudden change comes over the present situation. I do not say this as a prophet, but simply to arouse those who do not see how close the war danger is to us."

Ludwig, who recently acquired Swiss citizenship because of the many personal attacks waged upon him in German public life, feels that the days of the Republicans in Germany are well nigh counted.

"There are a few generous idealists left in Germany," he said, "but they have no longer any influence. The German Republicans are discouraged and pessimistic. We have lost the battle. I have no longer the courage to fight and I am withdrawing to my Swiss retreat. Let a younger and more enthusiastic generation continue our efforts."

A pan-Europe, along the lines drawn up by Count Coudenhova-Calergi of Vienna, is Ludwig's ultimate picture of Europe. Contrary to Count Coudenhova-Calergi, however, he would like the United States of Europe to include Russia, even bolshevist Russia.

"The Europe of the future," he said, "will consist of a great number of small nations, a great many small, cultural units will make up one big political federation."

Asked when this United States of Europe might come about, Ludwig refused to "prophesy."

"I have the impression that the European federation will come about only when everybody will work for peace in his own small circle. Else, we'll have another war. Unfortunately it isn't true that all the peoples that went into the world war, desire nothing but peace today."

Auto Competition Brings Deficit to Italy's R. R's.

ROME.—(AP)—Hard times and increased competition from automobile lines have resulted in a red ink item of $9,900,000 for the National railways in the last financial year, says the report to the government.

The administration considers the deficit remarkably low in view of the improvements that have been made in the service and taking into account the prevailing economic situation.

A 13.5 per cent drop in the number of passengers was noted in the report and a fall of 17 per cent in freight.

Automobile lines are estimated to have taken $20,000,000 worth of business from the railways. It is figured that in freight alone their business is 10 per cent of the railroad total.

Income of the railways for the year was $32,600,000 under that of the previous year and $65,900,000 below that of the year before. Nearly 6,000 employés were discharged, bringing the personnel down to 144,900. There also was a 15 per cent pay roll reduction as compared with 1929-'30.

Continued rigid economy is promised in an attempt to balance the railroad books next year, but at the same time the program of improvements will be pushed.

Popular excursion trains, operated with great success last year, will be put on in larger numbers, and it is hoped to exceed the record of 418,000 passengers carried on these trains.

Chile Fights Crime Wave.

SANTIAGO, Chile.—(AP)—An outbreak of crime, chiefly burglaries and highway robberies, is blamed by officials upon a combination of the economic crisis and the months of political unrest. Chile's efficient national police, the carabineers, have caught a majority of the culprits.

Greater Tokio World's Third Largest City

Increase in Its Boundaries Give It Rank Next to London and New York.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—By suddenly increasing its city limits Tokio has joined New York and London in the exclusive group that comprises the three largest cities in the world. When this achievement was celebrated in the Japanese capital in October some enthusiastic citizens even claimed second place for Tokio. The new greater Tokio, with a population a little in excess of 5,000,000, however, falls into third place. London and New York are both credited with more than 6,900,000 inhabitants.

In the new arrangement of the city lines 82 suburban villages, falling roughly within the radius of ten miles of the central Tokio railway station, were amalgamated into 20 new city wards.

* *

Reconstruction Program.

"Only nine years ago more than 40 per cent of the area within the 15 wards that until the recent expansion comprised the city of Tokio lay in charred ruins following an earthquake and disastrous conflagration," writes W. Robert Moore in a communication to the National Geographic society in Washington.

"However great that calamity was it provided an opportunity for the far seeing leaders of Tokio to inaugurate a reconstruction program along modern lines. And what a vision that rehabilitation was! Where formerly Tokio had been an overgrown village spreading for miles around the palace once built by the powerful shoguns of old Yedo, there has arisen a new Tokio with up to date earthquake and fireproof structures. The narrow, tortuous thoroughfares have been replaced by wide straight avenues through relocation and altering of property holdings. Steel and concrete bridges have taken the place of flimsy wooden structures.

"In 1930 the seven year reconstruction program was completed on time, and the emperor made a lengthy tour of inspection of the collossal undertaking, while a priest soared aloft in an airplane to pronounce a blessing on the rebuilt capital.

* *

Work Still in Progress.

"To be sure, not all of the construction work in the city was then an accomplished fact; the tattoo of riveters, the ring of hammers, concrete mixing, and the noise of rattling cranes were and still are familiar sounds along many streets.

"Six large steel bridges now span the Sumida river that curves through the city; the $10,000,000 diet building and the new postoffice are in the final stages of completion; only a year ago the representatives of the United States moved into the excellent quarters provided by the $1,250,000 embassy; and seven and eight story theaters and business houses are rearing their hulks of iron and concrete within bamboo scaffoldings and protective poultry wire nettings. And these are but a few samples of the construction activities that one sees in progress daily.

"The Tokio planning program, however, has embraced not only the Tokio of 1923 but has extended to the outlying districts, which were included in the recent incorporative edict, in order that all expansion would be carried on along uniform lines.

"These new districts of Greater Tokio, besides including large residential areas, also embrace extensive industrial regions. To the east of the Sumida and spreading on either side of the Arakawa waterway are numerous factories. The leading industries include chemicals, foodstuffs, spinning, and weaving, machinery and tools, and miscellaneous metal manufactures. The added territory to the south, bordering on Tokio bay and the Tamagawa river, is also largely industrial.

"In the mornings and evenings Tokio has much the same press of commuters as does New York. But Tokio has a noise rising above the bustle of movement that is peculiarly oriental. To the newly arrived visitor it is unforgettable—the clatter of wooden clogs, or getas, on concrete and marble. If the arrival and dispatch of modern, swift electric cars tend to create the impression that everything is westernized, the noise of the clogs and the flash of colorful kimonos soon dispel it.

* *

Transportation Efficient.

"The transportation system of the city is varied and efficient. Belt lines and rapid transit electrics to many districts, besides the regular trains, street cars, bus services, and even a section of subway. Between Yokohama and the capital electric cars are dispatched each way throughout the day at eight minute intervals. In addition there are frequent limited express trains. The other routes have similar schedules. At one overhead bridge in the center of Tokio a train passes on the average of every two minutes all day long, and only a little less frequently throughout most of the night.

"Department stores as modern and inclusive as any in the United States—even equipped with escalators—operate free buses over special routes for the benefit of patrons. Many of these department stores advertise in a unique manner. Attached to small captive gas balloons are long ropes holding advertising characters. On days when the wind is not too strong many of these balloons are seen drifting lazily back and forth above the central business district.

"Reconstructed Tokio has many parks and athletic fields where people may stroll and youthful Tokioites can play baseball, tennis and other games. On hot summer days long queues are always standing before the gates of the city swimming pools. In the spring thousands wander through the parks to view the masses of cherry blossoms, and during the lotus season other thousands admire the blooms in Ueno and other parks, many arriving at sunrise to hear the popping of the buds as the flowers open.

"Baseball has captured the enthusiasm of the youth and games are everywhere in progress. One of the city stadiums seats 80,000 spectators and another 30,000."

Water Sports in the Wintertime

New 'Garden of Allah' Found in the Southwest

SIX resorts in the Garden of Allah—Phoenix, Chandler and Tucson in southern Arizona, Indio and Palm Springs in California, and Agua Caliente in Old Mexico—enjoy at this season of the year every outdoor sport, from winter golf to winter bathing.

Originally a desert land, the garden basks in the winter sunshine and coloring of a Sahara, yet its resorts and ranches are far from arid. The adjacent mountains provide an abundance of water not only for the semi-tropical vegetation of the cities and towns but for the surrounding date-palm and orange groves and the cotton and alfalfa ranches. During the last twenty years miracles of change have been brought about by the harnessing of these mountain streams. Bowers of greenery have supplanted the tawny sands, forming a series of oases that have become modern, comfortable, and beautiful winter havens.

Vast stretches of desert remain to lend color and romance to the region. Their unusual plants and flowers, dominated by the giant Sahuaro cactus and the yucca, sharpen the contrast between wild and cultivated vegetation, and they are enlivened by Spanish bungalow hotels and playgrounds—golf courses, tennis courts, and polo fields.

To this charm and beauty is added the interest of Indian villages and Mexican settlements, of cliff dwellings, the homes and temples of America's first people, of old Spanish missions, built when Massachusetts and Virginia were young, of cattle ranches typical of the old time west, and of mountain scenery unsurpassed anywhere in the Rockies.

Italy Unites All Schools of Nation Under One Head

ROME.—(AP)—All public schools in Italy will be put under the authority of the national department of education, by an ordinance being drawn by a special government commission.

Hitherto the schools were under the direction of their communes, or counties.

The reform would be analogous to the United States creating a department of education at Washington and taking over all schools now operated by municipalities, counties, and states.

The department of education here is preparing to standardize all school work.

Spain Trains Film Operators.

Lullabies Soothe Baby's Ills, Says Doctor in Vienna

VIENNA.—(AP)—Lack of music, due to hospital bans on singing and to the inability of modern mothers to croon cradlesongs, are held responsible by Prof. Franz Hamburger, head of the Viennese university children's clinic, for many of the ills of babies.

At a meeting of the Viennese Society for Child Health, various cases of illness were discussed, among them that of a baby unable to retain food until physicians bandaged its jaws after each meal.

Prof. Hamberger said that this cruel treatment could have been avoided had the baby been given a chance to hear music.

He was backed by Prof. Leopold Moll, who ascertained that the child had a natural ear for melody.

Prof. Moll regards it as a lack in modern child hygiene, that hospitals, with all their equipment, have failed to meet one of the child's most natural demands—that for mother songs.
